The War Today—
Germany Cracking Up Fast, Nazis Know Defeat Certain

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Let's talk about wars and in Europe and peace and all that sort of thing—this being the beginning of spring, which not only is the season peculiar to hope but is the inspiration of great deeds.

Of course we aren't supposed to discuss peace—not right out in the open—because that might stimulate over-optimism. That is always bad. It shall receive letters, written both in sorrow and in anger, accusing me of coddling complacency. However, this isn't a bad time to give peace the "once-over" and not wait for the war to blow up in our faces without warning.

Surely we don't need a soothsayer to tell us that the year's end of the war in Europe. Indeed we are so close to it that the Nazis might quit at any time.

Fighting Might Continue for Time.

Having said this, I hasten to add to justify discussion of early peace—that, unfortunately, the fighting might continue for a considerable time. The Nazi propaganda Goebbels cling to their mad scheme of battling to a finish. Even so, it will be apparent if it goes that other than late spring or early summer.

The Nazi leaders have no delusions about defeat. Despite their typically Prussian effort to bully the Allies into a compromise peace, they know that prospect for peace—and that's official.

What they do hope—some of it may arrive out of the blue without warning, as the result of sub rosa discussions of a "semi-official" character.

Military Political Crack-up.

Germany is cracking up fast, both militarily and politically—as always have thought—and have so indicated in this column—that the collapse of Germany would be premised on one or two things:

1. The loss of Hitler's personal leadership—since he has been Germany's very pulsating, without which the regime must perish;

2. Deterioration of the German military machine to the point where the Allies would be able to crash through the last great barriers of Hitler's inner fortress—the Siegfried Line and the Rhine, in the west, and the powerful Oder defense line in the east.

Allies Tearing Defenses to Shreds.

We are on the verge of fulfilling the military requirement. The vastly superior Allied armies are tearing the Truppenkraft defenses to shreds. They have breached them on both sides and are about to pour great armies through them into the open plains of central Germany. They've done more than that, for the Allied air forces have so blasted the resources of Germany that the enemy is living off his own fat.

Only the Russians and the western Allies are sweeping across Germany, organized resistance will collapse quickly—if it lasts that long.

Hitler Broken Shell of Man.

The other requirement—loss of Hitler's personal leadership—already has been fulfilled. He is reported to be a broken shell of a man, for whom Himmler the hangman and propaganda Minister Goebbels are shooting in an effort to keep the facts from the German public. But truth will out, and the people will quit, despite Himmler's rule of death, when finally they realize Hitler is finished.

Graydon Protests Ruling on Question Procedure

Ottawa, March 21 — (CP) — Objection by Progressive Conservative Members to the procedure being followed in the Commons were interjected at two points in yesterday's session.

Early in the afternoon Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, renewed objections raised Monday to proceeding with the debate on the San Francisco Security Conference immediately after Prime Minister Mackenzie King made a statement on his conference resolution. He said there should be opportunity for members to study Mr. King's statement.

Mr. King said he saw no necessity for an adjournment of the debate and M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. leader, said his group was prepared to proceed.

The second, and more spirited, protest from the Progressive Conservative benches followed Mr. King's speech. Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC — York Sunbury) rose to ask Mr. King some questions. He said he had understood Prime Minister later to invite questions after he spoke.

There was no immediate answer from Mr. King to Mr. Hanson's questions. Then J. G. Diefenbaker (PC — Lake Centre) said he would like to ask a question.

It was then that Speaker J. A. Glen stepped into the discussion. He said it should be understood that questions could be asked during the course of the debate and replied to by the Prime Minister later. Members who asked questions immediately would be forfeiting their right to take part in the debate later.

"I have tried to be fairly calm this session with respect to the whole situation," Mr. Graydon said. "I want to be fair but this is the last straw . . . I think this government, which is now a minority administration, had better be careful how it deals with the majority."

A minute or two later Mr. King, referring to "certain courtesies" always accorded between the Prime Minister and the leader of the opposition, said he was prepared to answer a question from Mr. Graydon.

Then Speaker Glen — who was already on record as saying "with all due deference to the Prime Minister, he cannot make the rules of debate" — warned that by his interpretation of the rules the asking of a question would prevent the questioner speaking later.

"If that is the case all I can do is to protest and object," Mr. Graydon said. "I think the country generally will not approve of the manner in which we are being treated . . . is the government reducing parliament down to something that will be definitely under its thumb?"

British Stocks Of Food Under 6 Million Tons —Churchill

London, March 21. (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill today denied the "suggestion in some quarters in the United States" that Britain had 700,000,000 tons of food stocks on hand and said the country has rather less than 6,000,000 tons.

This amount, he said, is in the process of being reduced by aid to the liberated countries and by the end of June will amount to only 4,750,000 tons.

"This latter figure," Mr. Churchill told the House of Commons, "is no more than is necessary to maintain the ample flow of distribution under present conditions".

How Slacks Built Up.

The Prime Minister explained that British food stocks had been "built up by foresight and self-denial over five years and under-fed."

The House cheered.

Earlier, Col. J. J. Llewellyn, Food Minister, told the House the government had decided that it must continue to prohibit export of food from England on government account.

He added that the government had made "all possible provisions" for the people of liberated areas from the supplies in this country.

Cries of dissent echoed through the House when Miss Eleanor Rathborne, Independent, suggested that the government was "behaving very selfishly" by refusing to permit individuals to send food from their own rations to people on the continent.

Mr. Churchill said that military operations were being accelerated, for one reason, because large portions of Europe might be faced with the prospect of famine during the coming winter.

British Meat Ration

Col. Llewellyn declined to say whether he would reduce the meat ration during the next six months, contending he was unable to see the future with sufficient clarity.

"I am doing my utmost to avoid any cut in the ration", he added.

Emanuel Shinwell, Labor, asked whether the American government and not United States public opinion might have been responsible for creating the false impression that Britain had 700,000,000 tons of food stocks. He asked also if the American government had been informed minutely of the actual situation.

Mr. Churchill replied the American government had "been continually informed", adding that "the statement which I quoted does not emanate from the American government."

In Friendly Manner

"I think it is a mistake to get widespread misunderstanding on these matters, which are going to be settled in a friendly and considerate manner on both sides", the Prime Minister added.

Edgar Granville, Independent, wanted to know if the British Ministry of Information was responsible for the 700,000,000-ton figure of Britain's food stocks published in American newspapers.

Mr. Churchill said he did not know any "this size" should be put on the M.O.I., adding "I do not know why you should jump so hastily to such a melancholy conclusion".

Alaska Highway Film Shown to Kiwanis Members

In the absence of a special speaker at the Kiwanis luncheon on Tuesday at the Hotel Quinte, Mr. J. C. Beatty of the Canadian Company exhibited a most interesting and beautiful film on the Alaska Highway. The members were most impressed with the beautiful scenery the film depicted and also the obstacles that were overcome in blasting the highway through the wilderness. The speaker was introduced by Jack Trudeau and Kiwanis appreciation was expressed by James Cowan. Lorne McDougall presided at the luncheon with Fred Rawson collecting the fines and Vic White leading the community singing.

The camp committee for Robins Lake is quite busy these days preparing the camp for the reception of the boys this summer. Archie Harris informed the members that six men were now working at the camp and although Ottawa was clamping down on them it is not thought possible the camp would be opened the first of July for the reception of the boys. This will be one of the three places Prince Edward County can a credit to the Kiwanis Club of Belleville when completed.

A number of guests were welcomed among them Mr. Ivan Yanover recently returned from a tour of operations with the R.C.A.F. Before the film was shown Mr. Beatty stated that not all the equipment used on the highway was manufactured by Allis-Chalmers but the majority bore this trademark. Scenes depicted of the great bulldozers scooping large sections of rock, stone, and earth away were marvellous. Curbs along the highway were shown and most of them have been manufactured in the innovation of this highway through the northland.

H.S. Students Called To Enroll For Farm Service

Toronto, March 21. (CP)—Alex Maclaren, director of the Ontario Farm Service Force, Department of Agriculture, today called upon high school students to enroll in early-spring machine training courses, a total of which will be opened April 13.

Emphasizing the need for volunteer farm workers is greater this year than before, Mr. Maclaren said a full score of volunteers must be obtained for those camps opening early to assure aid to fruit and vegetable growers.

Four camps opening April 13 are the Boys' Camp at Burlington and three girls' camps at Smithfield, Vineland and Meadowvale. The boys' camp at Leamington opens April 26 and at Holland Marsh on May 24.

More than 200 girls will be needed to work at four camps opening May 1, at Fenwick, Clarkson, Cooksville and Oakville, all near Toronto. A camp at Vineland will open May 15.

Bloody Hochwald Battle Produced Many Heroes

(By DOUGLAS AMARON)
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadian Army in Germany, March 21 —(CP)— The bloody Hochwald battle produced many new Canadian heroes, and men of the Lake Superior Regiment rank high among them.

This motor battalion twice assaulted the gap between the two sections of dense spruce forest. It inflicted heavy casualties on the enemy, lost without loss, and beat off many counter-attacks.

For 36 hours one of its companies was isolated more than a mile ahead of any other Canadian troops, armed with only light weapons. They held firm against German tanks, heavy tanks, and self-propelling guns and when the survivors finally did push back they were apologetic for not having gone the impossible.

The Lake Superiors had muddy difficult ground to contend with as well as the enemy. Their second in command, Mal. Harry Partay of Toronto, said they literally manhandled their vehicles and when they reached the forest, had to leave their carriers behind and go forward as infantry.

Mal. Tommy Murray of Port Arthur led one company in the gap fighting. His first assault was during the night of Feb. 27 with tank support.

"It was quite a grim show," he said. "The tanks bogged down and were knocked out, but we got half-way through the gap and the next morning moved south of the railway line running through the gap."

The objective was a group of houses and Murray took a reconnaissance party and found there were Germans around the houses so Murray sent back for the company. His tanks had to be content up he "got ambitious" and decided to look around the houses. Two machine-gun began to fire at the Germans behind the first house commander ordered the prisoners to lie down, looked over the situation and the 20 more paratroopers striking behind him.

"It looked like the end of the party," Murray said, "but there was a wild-west finish for just at the crucial moment the were marching them an enemy company arrived and rescued us."

Bomber Exploded At Height of 20,000 Feet

Toronto, March 21 — (CP) — Fg. Mal. May of Regina, 20 Fg. Officer of Hamilton, Ont., told in a hospital interview here today how he survived the explosion of an R.C.A.F. Halifax bomber 20,000 feet above Saarbrucken, Germany.

Bomb Aimer of the shattered craft, May lost his left leg as a result of the explosion, presumably caused when flak hit the gas tank or the full bomb load.

Both legs broken in his parachute jump from the flaming plane, May lay on the outskirts of Saarbrucken nearly 13 hours before he was discovered.

In a German hospital "they had to chain me to the bed, I was so delirious," May said, adding that he received no shock treatment but was moved to another hospital by captured British doctors.

At time, gangrene had set in and they had to take off my leg. If I'd had good treatment at that German hospital, I'd be walking today."

Highlights Of King's World Security Speech

Ottawa, March 21—(CP)—Following are highlights of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's world security speech Tuesday night in the Commons:

The Canadian Government supported the general plan for world security organization.

Nations everywhere must unite to save and to serve humanity.

Canada would offer no amendments nor additions on the draft plan for the world security organization in advance of the conference.

The Canadian delegation would work for changes and clarifications on two points—economic sanctions and appropriate status for secondary states.

Canada would not escape the fury if another great war broke out in the future.

Any charter drawn up at the conference would be submitted to parliament for approval before ratification.

The commonwealth security meetings in London would "serve a useful purpose as an exchange of information and as a clarification of views."

Drives a Screened Shot Past Durnan to Put Toronto in Debtor's Seat

Montreal, March 31 — (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs were one up on Montreal Canadiens today in their best-of-seven Stanley Cup semi-final series, and Ted Kennedy was the toast of the Leafs and the hoodoo of Montreal fans.

Kennedy broke up a closely-fought hockey game in the last 22 seconds last night, gulling a screened shot past goalie Bill Durnan suddenly to send 12,000 overtime-anticipating fans home unhappy.

Canadiens were far from downhearted by the loss, but were keenly aware the figure out ways of breaking the leech-like checking that marked the game so that their high-scoring combinations could start to click.

"It was a break that decided it," said coach Dick Irvin. "They can't get that kind of a break every game."

"If they could only beat us 1-0 on that game, we're in," chimed in Ray Getliffe. "They got it 2-1 in the first game last year and then we won four straight."

Admits Getting Break

Over in the Leaf dressing room, Hap Day had little to say except that what could be done once could be done again.

"We got the break all right," he said, "but we earned it and we will earn it next time out."

For 59 minutes and 38 seconds, it was anybody's game, with the checking so close and the bumping so heavy that the opposing goalies had remarkably little to handle and most of the ones they did stop were on the long shots.

Then Kennedy pulled his screened shot. The invitation had come from the side, and it hit a Canadien player in the back. It bounded out to Kennedy who took a mighty swipe at it and it found its way through a maze of players past Durnan, who didn't see the puck until it was in the net.

The teams meet again here Thursday night and then move on to Toronto for games Saturday and Thursday. If a fifth game is necessary, it will be played back in Montreal March 29.

Despite the night's heavy bumping, neither team suffered serious injury. Seven minor penalties were handed out by referee Red Chadwick, with the Leafs collecting four of them.

Ottawa Montagards Defeat Hull Volants

Ottawa, March 31 — (CP)—Ottawa's Montagards defeated Hull Volants 9-3 last night to take the two-game junior city hockey series 14-5 and win the right to meet the survivors of a sudden-death game between Ottawa St. Patrick's College and Cornwall to be played at Cornwall Friday night.

Montagards who defeated Hull 5-3 in their first game here Monday night, will go to Cornwall for their sudden-death game with the St. Pats-Cornwall survivor Saturday night. The winner of that goes into the Memorial Cup playdowns against Montreal Royals at Montreal.

Valleyfield Braves One Up on Cornwall

Cornwall, March 31 — (CP) — Valleyfield Braves last night jumped into the lead of their Inter-provincial Hockey League best-of-seven series with Cornwall Cookies when they won the third game 5-2. Braves now lead 2-1 in the series.

After a scoreless first period, Cookies opened the first goal of the game for Valleyfield at 9:21 in the second period. Drillon shot another point for his team in the 3rd period, also assisted by Richardson.

Richardson himself had one in the second stanza, while Toupin made it three for Braves in the same period. The fifth point for Valleyfield was slung in by Romain Josenette in the final frame.

After Bobby Burr scored the first point for Cornwall in the second period, Cookies remained scoreless until Gerry Heffernan, assisted by the Lauzon Brothers, shot one in thru Valleyfield's net during the last minute of the game.

BOSTON BRUINS SCORE 4-3 WIN AGAINST DETROIT

Knock Three in Twine in First Period and Wings Couldn't Catch Up

Detroit, March 31—(CP)—Boston Bruins, seeing control with a three-goal cushion in the first period, last night registered a 4-3 victory against Detroit Red Wings in the first game of the best-of-seven semi-finals before 19,283 fans. Second game is scheduled for Saturday.

Bruins, recording their first victory against Wings since Dec. 28, 1943, gained a two-point advantage over them under the National Hockey League's new play-off series system. Two points are awarded for each game, the first team to obtain eight points winning the series.

Bill Cowley, Bill Cupaidi and Herbie Cain blasted quick goals past 18-year-old Harry Lumley in the Detroit net in the opening period and the Wings failed to draw within striking distance of the lead until mid-way in the final session.

Jack Stewart opened the scoring for Detroit in the third period after a scrimmage in front of Boston's goal. Cupaidi notched Bruins' fourth goal about three minutes later. Joe Carveth and Flash Hollett combined on the other Detroit goals, the latter in the final minute of play.

Glen Harmon's fracas drew the only penalty of the game. In the last period, he and Bruins' Jack Crawford were each tossed from the fray for the duration of the game for their part in a free-for-all that saw players of both teams tangled in front of the players' bench immediately after the goal had been registered in two minutes.

Bruins, who lost nine games to Detroit and tied one during the season, held a commanding lead in goals until Seibert's goal in the third. After that they played strict defensive hockey.

Forwards: D. Hall, Army, M. Morris, Northwestern; Centre: W. Henry, Rice; Guards: H. O'Keefe, N. F. I., W. Kotsores, St. John's.

St. Louis, Mo., March 31.—Averaging six-feet-five and capable of scoring 73 to 80 points per game, the 1944-45 All-America Basketball team selected by The Sporting News is composed of Wyndol Gray of Bowling Green, Ohio, and Howard Dallmar of Pennsylvania as forwards; George Mikan of DePaul at centre, and Bob Kurland of Oklahoma A. and M. and Arnold Perrin of Utah at guards.

Six-foot-nine Mikan and seven-foot Kurland were hailed as two of the outstanding players of the year. Though both are centres, they were placed on the first team because of their ability to fill any position. Mikan is a repeater, having made The Sporting News honor five of 1943-44.

Gray, also acclaimed by all who have seen him as one of the shiftiest floor men in the game, is unusual scoring, as well as playmaking threat. Dallmar, a former Stanford star, was the main reason why Penn won the Ivy League crown and almost single-handedly engineered the lone defeat of Army. He is a rebound man deluxe. Perrin, key man in Utah's drive to the Sugar Bowl and runner-up season, was rated even a better man this year and piloted the Utes to an undefeated conference season.

On the second team are Bob Dills of Valparaiso and Ft. Nagy of Akron at forwards, Vince Hanson of Washington State at centre, and Herb Wilkinson or Jows, and Billy Hassett of Notre Dame at guards. The third team has Dale Hall of Army and Max Morris of Northwestern at forwards, Bill Henry of Rice at centre, and Hank O'Keefe of Rensselaer Polytechnic and Bill Kotsores of St. John's at guards. Honorable mention was accorded the following:

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 31.—(CP) — If Pete Gray, the former Three Rivers, Que., ball player, makes the grade with St. Louis Browns in the American Baseball League this year, the ruling which the Southern Association put into effect last season will undoubtedly be duplicated in A.L. It will undoubtedly make a little life extra with the umpires — as if they don't get into enough trouble now.

Pete, being one-armed, has a unique way of catching a fly ball and preparing for the throw-in. After making the catch, he places the ball against his chest and moves his left hand to the stub of his right arm. In this motion the ball rolls out of his glove and up his arm.

When the glove is tucked under the stub, Gray draws his arm back across his chest until the ball rolls back into his hand, ready for the throw. Under these circumstances, if Gray should lose the ball while preparing for a throw he will be given credit for the catch and the putout will stand.

South became the declarer at a contract of five diamonds. West led the spade deuce. When dummy's hand went down, declarer saw losers only in the club suit.

If west held all the unseen honors in clubs, every finesse in that suit would lose. In that case, declarer could lose three club tricks; one trick more than he can afford.

However, he saw a clutch way of assuring his contract by the use of the strip-and-endplay principle. He set out to strip his opponents before taking any club finesse.

South won the spade ace, a round of trumps, the heart ace, and dummy trumped a spade. South trumped a heart. Dummy was entered with a trump. South trumped another heart. Dummy got in with a trump.

By this time dummy had left two trumps and three clubs; both kept one trump and four clubs. West hung onto A Q J of clubs, queen of hearts, and jack of spades.

Dummy now led a club and finessed, west winning with the club jack. Being stripped for that throw-in, west was up against it for a lead that would no help declarer.

A spade or heart lead from west would gite dummy a club shift as south trumps that trick. Or if west leads a club, south is sure to save the king of that suit.

A strip-and-endplay softeng up an opponent for the endplay at the throw-in. When stripped, he must shiver and shake.

Training Camp Notes,

Wilmington, Del., March 21 (AP)—Philadelphia Phillies are either well fortified with effective pitchers or need some hitters, Manager Fred Fitzsimmons watched two of his teams, the Blues and the Reds, get scoreless for five innings.

Frederick, Md., Thomas Woodrow Cromer, a veteran of 12 campaigns as pitching for Toronto Maple Leafs and Texas, has been signed by the Philadelphia Athletics' training camp.

Muncie, Ind.—Pittsburgh Pirates solved most of their pitching problems when Rip Sewell, 21-game winner last year, formally signed a contract to report to Manager Frankie Frisch, who won 13 for the Bucks in 1944, reported to camp.

Bear Mountain, N.Y. — Even though he watched Leo Durocher practice around second back in Brooklyn Dodgers camp, President Branch Rickey didn't hesitate to announce he would give the manager a bonus of $1,000 if he played 100 games at second base in the course of the season.

"And I don't think I'll ever have to pay him the money," Rickey added. "I have him tagged as an active man in Major men and an inactive player in April.

"I'll fool him," Durocher declared.

Little Benny's Note Book

Cousin Oscar is still staying at our house in his corporal's uniform, but people are starting to write in to pop trying to win the prize of $6.10 for the best idea how to get rid of him, and this morning at breakfast we could hear Cousin Oscar still snoring up in the guest room while pop was reading the contest answers with a hopeful expression on his face. Miss Brady seemed to his on an idea of a practical joke, William says.

Not practical enough to take care of Oscar, I'm afraid, pop said. Most of them suggest sending him to work, but if Oscar ever thought he'd really have to do some actual work he'd come down with brane fever, and then we'd not only have Oscar but we'd also have a brane specialist costing about $5 dollars a minute, he said, and he said, Oh dear, I suppose people understand human nature, but the trouble is they dont understand Oscar.

Here's one from a clever lady named Mrs. Betty Goddard, pop said. She suggests some actual overinflation of ambition to make Oscar unbearably uncomfortable by pulling his bed covers off at 4 a.m. He'd probably run around and give him the flu before he got his first attack of jitters, and if I know Oscar he'd never go home at all. He'd more than fill this army all over the neighborhood at an average pressure of 3 horse power. Here's a nice card signed by Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Price and Family, pop said.

What do they suggest me said, and pop said, They dont suggest a thing. They admit they love Oscar with all his snoring and all he dont want him to leave. By golliss I might resent that, but they go on to add that they love us too, pop said.

They sound like very nice people, me said, and pop said, And intelligent too, considering all the golfies I've met in their homes. By golliss I believe I'll send them a picture of me and Benny, he said.

Which he did right after breakfast.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

CHAPTER 33

The girl came in with a perfunctory smile, a perfunctory question about Cherry's health. She went on to a chair at the window and balanced herself on its wide arm.

"You don't have to worry, about us in the least, you know, Cherry," she said ungraciously to Cherry's first suggestion; "Gogo and I have talked it over and decided. . ."

"Amy, I wish you'd come over here where I can see you."

"As for taking any of your money, Amy pursued, not changing her position, "that's ridiculous! There's no reason why you should offer it and there's no reason why I should take it."

"I've been thinking out a plan, Amy, and I know you'll like it if you'll only Listen."

"I know you want to be very charitable, and all that, Cherry, and it's very nice of you. But it simply can't be done."

"But please come over here and sit by my bed, where'd you get that dress?" Cherry added the question, knowing it to be a sure way of reaching a more natural Amy. It had its instant effect.

"Magnin's," Amy said. "But it's too wide here." She gathered it tightly against her slender little waist on either side as she walked slowly to the bed. "I feel so horrible about all this," she said, sitting down and trying to smile at Cherry through suddenly tearful eyes. "It's not your fault; I know that.

"This for Amy, was real generosity. Cherry began to feel hopeful.

"I'm not talking of giving you back your money, Amy," Cherry said. "But I want you to let me at last pay off those debts and promises that Gogo made when he thought he was going to have it."

"He never asked me for money!" Amy stated flatly.

"I know he didn't. But it's there, enough at least to get him into the clear, and for the rest, Amy why do we have to let anyone know that we've changed names? Why not just let that part go? You're married now; your name's O'Sullivan. And Gogo and I. . ."

Amy's tear-swollen eyes brightened into a half interest. "I wonder you were crazy about Kelly," she said somberly.

"I only mean this, Amy. Take some of it. I don't want it or need it! Pay off these bills, and then let me send you an allowance. . ."

"You're very kind, Cherry," Amy broke in decisively, "but I couldn't. It wouldn't solve anything. I know you mean well. . ."

"Now listen," Cherry interrupted her to turn. "Don't be so silly. Suppose you went to Gogo now and said that while things never would be as they were, you could clear up his debts, send his brothers the money he promised them and then go to live somewhere simply—and in simple fashion you had offered to make reparation now."

"Reparation!" the old woman said on an indignant gasp.

"So what have you been up to, Marchbanks?" Kelly demanded.

Cherry laughed. "I made Amy a proposition. Nobody's ever going to know it," she said, "but, after all we're sisters."

"How do you mean, 'Nobody's going' to know it?" Mrs. Marshbanks demanded in her deep voice.

"That Amy, and I, are sisters; that our father was Frederick Marshbanks, all of us and Amy's I."

"You mean you think you can keep all that a secret?" There was ingenuity in Mrs. Marshbanks' tone.

"Why not? It's been a secret all these years," Cherry said.

"But, my dear child, there'll have to be banquets, bruisers or property, 'restitutions back payments, everything!"

"There won't have to be any restitution or back payments," Cherry said positively. "And, for everything else, lawyers keep secrets."

"Why good heavens, child, that means that you'll go on being—that Amy—Mr. Coates," Mrs. Marshbanks interrupted herself to say sadly, "I don't think we can permit that! That would mean —Cherry's position — her background has never been what Amy's was. She has a right—in the eyes of society—"

"Nothing like that matters to me at all!" Cherry interposed calmly, as the older woman's words broke off in confusion. "Does it, Kelly?" she demanded.

"Well, really, Marchioness," Kelly said, "I'm a good deal at a loss to know what does matter to you!"

"Why, you should get twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars out for Constance's old debts and promises," Kelly observed.

"Because Amy promised him that when she honestly thought she had it, Kelly. It's thefty, and a sin, and I don't mean to touch the capital," Cherry argued. "I mean just to give him about the income. Enough sum to be paid merely itself," the old woman murmured, under her breath.

"It's an unusual—attitude," Kelly said.

"And by her only chance of happiness 'with him," Cherry went on. "And as for our names, she's a Donaldson, now, anyway, and pretty soon I'll be a Coates, so why bother?"

"When are you two going so be married?" Mrs. Marshbanks asked.

"Next week," announced Cherry, Kelly still held her hand; as he smiled across at her grandmother he slightly shook his head.

"Years from now," he said. "I'm not going to run off with her before she has a chance to enjoy her new fortune. It won't last forever the way she's disposing of it. I'll wait until she needs me."

"I need you now," Cherry moved her free hand to hold his in both her own.

"I think she does," said Mrs. Marshbanks. "I think you'll take care of her and the money too, and I'll live here in the house and the police questioning him—No, we'll work it out some day." Amy finished, rising, without your help, Cherry, but thanks to you just the same."

The next visitor, unannounced, was Mrs. Marshbanks' maid. Expert in carrying her knitting, spoke quietly to Cherry as if this were the most natural interview in the world, and seated herself comfortably near the bed.

"Amy came into my room as few minutes ago," said the old lady, "to tell me that you had made her a very generous offer."

"She won't accept," Cherry told her.

"She may not have any choice," said her grandmother dryly. "She has nothing to live on, and I gather, ed that it made a big difference in his plans. Amy's married now to a man in whose country women don't count at all. He'll accept or he'll refuse things, he'll do the deciding, from now on."

Cherry's face brightened as Kelly appeared in the doorway. He spoke to the old lady, asking her solicitously of her health and rest, but all the time he was seated, close beside Cherry's bed, and her languid hand safe in his.

"All right again, dear?" he presently said.

"Oh, Kelly, feeling so wonderful! I had a long sleep after you left, and lunch—I could get, up and do a day's washing!" Cherry exulted. "Did you go to Topcote?"

"I did, and I had a shower and a nap and a shave, and I'm in the pink too. What's this I hear of you turning Fairgrandmother to Cecily?"

"Who told you?"

"Gogo. He was down on the sidewalk looking for a taxi when I arrived; he said it was important and I'd find him downtown and got some cables at once. I offered him my car and asked him if he'd had good news. He said yes, that you had seen the unfairness of the situation for his poor little 'Almsy,' and in a burst of generosity had offered to make restitution."

"Restitution!" the old woman said on an indignant gasp.

"So what have you been up to, Marchioness?" Kelly demanded.

Cherry laughed. "I made Amy a proposition. Nobody's ever going to know it," she said, "but, after all we're sisters."

hysterical and choked with tears: "No, no, no! They shan't! My darling, they shan't! You didn't do it! I did!"

Then silence again except for a low, indistinguishable murmur of women's voices: downstairs, Cherry and old Mrs. Marshbanks heard each other. The older woman has called to her maid, and her face was ghastly.

"Cherry's arrested! Fran!" Cherry managed to ask.

"Fran! Fran, 'They told me twenty minutes ago, after they had him," Kelly said. "But, Darling, asked me to wait for half an hour and to be with you and Mrs. Marshbanks when they made the arrest, and 'told Fran. No; we've all been blind as bats, Cherry. It was right under our eyes, all the time. It was Rousseau!"

"Rousseau!" the old woman's voice held resonance, like a bell.

"Rousseau!" Cherry whispered.

Kelly spoke quietly, shrugging his arm about Cherry.

"He and. Fran have been lovers for months," he said.

"Kelly, he's a boy! he's not twenty!"

"He's eighteen. But he gave his age as twenty when the judge hired him about a year ago."

"Their affair began back in April," Kelly went on. "From the very first she liked him, made a friend of him. He fell madly in love. He—he did, of course; that wasn't so strange. But Fran became completely infatuated, from him, too. Perhaps she hadn't counted on that. They began to plan days in the country—she had invited him at first, advising him. And then a few months ago, she gave in, and since then—poor girl!—I imagine she hasn't had a comfortable moment. He was the strong—Mona told me all this an hour ago when I came home. He was the stronger, and whenever he suspected any-thing like harassing between her and the judge or anyone else he threatened to kill her and himself. Any you played pay twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars out for Constance's old debts and promises," Kelly observed.

"Because Amy promised him that when she honestly thought she had it, Kelly. It's thefty, and a sin, and I don't mean to touch the capital," Cherry argued. "I mean just to give him about the income. Enough sum to be paid merely itself," the old woman murmured, under her breath.

"And by her only chance of happiness 'with him," Cherry went on. "And as for our names, she's a Donaldson, now, anyway, and pretty soon I'll be a Coates, so why bother?"

"When are you two going so be married?" Mrs. Marshbanks asked.

"Next week," announced Cherry, Kelly still held her hand; as he smiled across at her grandmother he slightly shook his head.

"Years from now," he said. "I'm not going to run off with her before she has a chance to enjoy her new fortune. It won't last forever the way she's disposing of it. I'll wait until she needs me."

"I need you now," Cherry moved her free hand to hold his in both her own.

"I think she does," said Mrs. Marshbanks. "I think you'll take care of her and the money too, and I'll live here in the house and the police questioning him—No, we'll work it out some day." Amy finished, rising, without your help, Cherry, but thanks to you just the same."

The next visitor, unannounced, was Mrs. Marshbanks' maid. Expert in carrying her knitting, spoke quietly to Cherry as if this were the most natural interview in the world, and seated herself comfortably near the bed.

"Amy came into my room a few minutes ago," said the old lady, "to tell me that you had made her a very generous offer."

"She won't accept," Cherry told her.

"She may not have any choice," said her grandmother dryly. "She has nothing to live on, and I gather ed that it made a big difference in his plans. Amy's married now to a man in whose country women don't count at all. He'll accept or he'll refuse things, he'll do the deciding, from now on."

Cherry's face brightened as Kelly appeared in the doorway. He spoke to the old lady, asking her solicitously of her health and rest, but all the time he was seated, close beside Cherry's bed, and her languid hand safe in his.

"All right again, dear?" he presently said.

"Oh, Kelly, feeling so wonderful! I had a long sleep after you left, and lunch—I could get, up and do a day's washing!" Cherry exulted. "Did you go to Topcote?"

"I did, and I had a shower and a nap and a shave, and I'm in the pink too. What's this I hear of you turning Fairgrandmother to Cecily?"

"Who told you?"

"Gogo. He was down on the sidewalk looking for a taxi when I arrived; he said it was important and I'd find him downtown and got some cables at once. I offered him my car and asked him if he'd had good news. He said yes, that you had seen the unfairness of the situation for his poor little 'Almsy,'

Bonus Payments To Start July 20 Says Mr. Claxton

Ottawa, March 21 — (CP) — Health Minister Claxton said today that, beginning on the 20,000th family in Canada, will receive family allowances payments in July, and in 90 cases will anyone in any income group be free automatically from income tax deductions resulting from the payments.

As a press release to the parliamentary press gallery, Mr. Claxton said that some 1,700,000 Canadian parents was for them all to register for the family allowance payments, scheduled to begin about July 20.

In the cases of all but some 200,000 families in the high income groups, there will be some benefit from the family allowances. In the cases of the higher income families the allowance payments would be drained back into the treasury through income tax.

Anyone could figure whether they would benefit from the family allowances. A man could work out his income tax by the new and simple work it out again on the assumption that he had no dependents. The difference would be the exemption he is allowed for his children and this amount to be compared with amount he would receive under the family allowances plan, Seale Outlined.

The scale of family allowance payment is $5 per month for a child under six; $6 per month for a child between six and 10; $7 per month for a child between 10 and 13, and $8 per month for a child between 13 and 16. For the fifth child the allowance is reduced by $1 per month, for the sixth and seventh children $2 per month, and for the eighth and each additional child by $3 per month. Neither Prince Edward Island of the approximately 3,500,000 children under 16 years of age will get payment tomorrow, Mr. Claxton said. Family allowance applications have already been in the hands of Post Office officials and would be distributed in eight provinces. Registration already has been completed in Prince Edward Island.

Distributed in Post Offices.

Instructions were to fill out the forms and what to do with them when completed. They will be distributed through the Post Offices but Mr. Claxton said that no decision has yet been made as to whether family allowances would be paid to the children of Canadian Service personnel who married overseas and were still living with their parents, but a decision would be reached before July.

The registration of Indian children would be made through Indian agents.

ONTARIO CHEQUED TO SCHOOLBOARDS

Toronto, March 21 — (CP)—Ontario government cheques to local school boards totalling $1,004,000 in payment of one third of the school grants under the new system, were sent out Thursday from Queen's Park.

The cheques for a total of $6,808,-000 and recently approved by the legislature go to 6,178 schoolboards.

Attached to the cheques is a note from Premier Drew, Minister of Education, stating that these payments are the advance payment of about one-third of the total the boards will receive for this year.

The balance due, Mr. Drew states, will be forwarded on or before Sept. 1.

Ontario Plans to Help Re-habilitation of Servicemen and to Increase Overseas Trade

By ALLAN NICKERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, March 31—(CP)—A project designed to increase Ontario's overseas trade and help Canada's returned servicemen rehabilitate themselves while still in the fighting zones has been opened up here by Lt.-Col. F. J. Lyle of Toronto, director of the new Trade and Industry Department at Ontario House.

His office is handling an increasing number of inquiries from companies and individuals on both sides of the Atlantic—even as far away as Italy—concerning peacetime industrial possibilities connected with Ontario.

"The department has already advised some 200 firms, furnishing surveys to them, and has been responsible for completing several extremely satisfactory trade agreements," said Col. Lyle, enterprise and industrial expert.

Majority of British inquiries come from medium-sized or secondary industries selling post-war output through trade fairs or distributing agencies. Some Britons too, seek to represent Canadian firms over here.

The department estimates that from 30,000 to 50,000 Canadian servicemen will ask for discharge in the United Kingdom.

"Most of them will have to be placed in industry here, although some undoubtedly have post-war jobs lined up," Col. Lyle said. "We shall help those looking for positions. Many of them hope to sell Canadian products."

Many Inquiries

Inquiries have been received from Canadian servicemen in Britain, on the Western Front and in Italy, and at least one firm in Leicestershire has asked advice on the possibilities of setting up a branch in Ontario after the war. Some servicemen take advantage of leave in this country to visit factories and plants they plan to represent at home in peacetime.

Col. Lyle's office will supply background and guidance to Canadian servicemen who plan to set themselves up in business in this country, or to represent in Ontario an industry at some post-war project. It will also supply data to any firm looking for expansion in Ontario, or to any Ontario organization probing the overseas trade field.

"We do not try to influence the final judgment of the interested parties," said Col. Lyle, who was released from the Canadian Army in Holland to take his new post. Col. Lyle spent six weeks in Toronto setting up the department's office before Maj.-Gen. Burns before returning to London after discharging.

"Our service is in close collaboration with other agencies operating throughout Canada such as the Canadian Legion, the Red Cross and with the Federation of British Industries in Britain."

The firm can obtain a "fair share" of trade for Ontario products to interest British and other firms in establishing branch plants or agencies in the province and to encourage reciprocal arrangements between industries for the exchange of patents and designs, thereby creating employment for discharged servicemen and war workers re-leased from their jobs.

Abstract Artists Find Inspiration in Jam Sessions

By FRANK INNIS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

TORONTO, March 31 —(CP)— Hot jazz, classical composition and the ballet came in, for a round at the current Canada Society of Artists' show at the art gallery here.

While the palette and the lyre struck up close harmony, various subjects which had monopolized a section of the annual show in recent years took a back seat with only a sprinkling of the 153 canvases devoted to military themes. The exhibition will hang here until after Easter when it will move on to London, Ont.

At the other end of the musical scale, Owen Staples and Michael Mitchell, both of Toronto, deal with jazz. Staples' exhibit is an abstract painting in reds, blues, violets and greens with a piano keyboard and a sprinkling of musical notes suggested in the maze of pattern. "Sunday Morning Spiritual," a portrayal of a negro musicians' jam sessions is a more orthodox treatment of the same subject by painter Mitchell.

H. Hayley Yarwood of Toronto also deals with a musical theme in his "Abstract Guitar." The figures, a child playing to an audience of one old woman, are centered in a swirl of light which echoes the shape of the instrument. "Experiment in Curves" by Mrs. Yvonne Housser of Toronto places the outlines of figures from the ballet against a swirling abstract background.

Western Artists

A Vancouver painter, Mrs. Viola Campbell, is responsible for the most amusing picture in the show. An exercise in pure design, "The Little Visitor" is seated primly in her Sunday best against a formal background which includes two plants on a window sill exactly balanced behind the figure of the child.

W. H. Beny of Medicine Hat, Alta., has entered a gaunt landscape with grain elevators dwarfed by the sky, the prairie and a towering swath of wheat in the immediate foreground. Vivacious "Marie," by Mrs. R. Harding of Hamilton, Ont., is one of the more attractive portraits in the collection. Two watercolors by Irwin L. Crosthwait of Ottawa and Montreal also attracted considerable attention.

Other artists represented in the collection include: Elizabeth L. Cann, Yarmouth, N. S.; Eric Curry, Bedford, N. S.; David Whitman, Halifax; Jack Humphrey, St. John, N. B.; Fyfe Bradshaw, T. H. Gaisside, and F. B. Taylor, all of Montreal; Mrs. L. L. MacCauley, Sherbrooke, Que.; Ralph Connor and George Ritel, both of Kitchener, Ont.; Stanley Cooper and Langley Donges, both of Port Credit, Ont.; Mrs. John Elson, Mrs. H. M. Gordon and Mrs. Edna Tacon, all of Hamilton, Ont.; Gordon Strant, Bernard Flynn, Wilfred Flood, all of Ottawa; Fred Hagan, Newmarket, Ont.; Jack Haner, Peterborough, Ont.; Evan Macdonald, Guelph, Ont.; Frank Panabaker, Ancaster, Ont.; George Thomson, Owen Sound, Ont.; Lynn Simons, Winnipeg; Healey Parker, J. W. G. Macdonald, both of Vancouver; and Mrs. Nan L. Chesser, Capilano, B. C.

WEST-OF-RHINE GERMANS HOLD ONLY BRIDGEHEAD
GERMAN CIVILIANS IN FULL FLIGHT FROM RUHR

Gravely Hindering Military Transport To Escape Allies

Likened to Dark Days of '40 When Nazis Overran France

London, March 22 — (CP)—Hundreds of thousands of German civilians were reported in full flight today from the Ruhr Valley and menacing the immediate rear of the Rhine, gravely hindering German military transport. In their frantic haste to escape the advancing Allied armies.

Swedish advices said roads leading eastward in Nuremberg and Munich were clogged with fleeing civilians, and described the situation to the dark days of 1940 when the conquering German armies overran the Low Countries and France, driving before them a flood of refugees which impeded Allied troops trying to stem the enemy tide.

Speaking on the same sombre wavelength as those of the disaster which has befallen the German armies east of the Rhine and ominous German radio prediction of an impending Allied airborne invasion of the Ruhr —predictions given color by concentrated Allied air attacks yesterday on German airfields in that area.

Field Marshal Montgomery gave added impetus to the migration by directing into German areas Churchill-hewer's warning that areas in the path of the Allied armies would be death-traps for any hoping for a painless there.

At the same time the Moscow radio broadcast a statement in the name of the "Free German Committee" that the industrial plants of the Ruhr miners to protect their mines from destruction by retreating Nazi officials.

A Mid. Sheridan, described as a member of the committee — composed largely of captured German officers — told the miners to follow the example of Upper Silesia miners who, he said, were side in the mines there.

"Should there be fighting in the Ruhr," he added, "the mines will be, destroyed and coal production will be restricted for many years." This will make the gigantic task of reconstruction nearly impossible."

The Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet said that Essen, Dortmund, Bochum, Hagen and other cities in the Ruhr region already are "dead" and deserted.

Reichswecken Nearly Empty.

Thousands of refugees had flea from German cities west of the Rhine to escape the Allied armies, a front dispatch to the Swedish American troops which swept through Reichswecken on very few fore had found less than 1,000 of the city's 70,000 population still there.

Indicating the dire effects which the dislocation of vast sections of the population are having upon the national economy, the German people were told by their government last night that they will be facing a sharp cut in food rations and that their soon can expect no relief.

"Our plans have been wrecked because millions of Germans have returned from border areas overrun by the enemy to the shrunken space", declared Joseph Stock, agricultural minister of Greater Germany, in a domestic radio broadcast.

More Measures to Follow.

"Decrees already have been issued which will cut deeply into everybody's food rations. More measures will follow."

At the same time the Swiss Press asserted that Adolf Hitler, apparently unnerved by the territorial junction of the Allied and Russian armies, planned to commit suicide in the near future, had completed preparations for a last stand in the mountainous Berchtesgaden region in Southern Germany.

There, Swiss papers said, Hitler hopes to work out the "supreme period" after war in which he believes will end in a reign of chaos and unrest that will enable the Nazi founder and permit a rebirth of National Socialist Germany.

RAID HAINAN ISLAND

San Francisco, March 22. (AP) —Approximately 130 United States Army Air Force bombers and light bombers raided Hainan Island off the South China coast yesterday, radio Tokyo said today in a broadcast heard by the Federal Communications Commission. Mention of Hainan Island was the first report of frequent Tokyo reports in which smaller bombers have been confused with Hitler.

Word "Swine" Hurled at Drew By C.C.F. Member

Toronto, March 22 —(CP)— The word "swine" was hurled at Premier Minister George Drew and was flared in the Ontario legislature last night but the member who used it, Arthur Williams, C.C.F.-Oakwood, apologized to the Prime Minister after the House rose.

Ending a three-hour speech, Mr. Williams said he had tried to be "brief on a long case" and the Premier remarked that "there are different ways of conducting a filibuster."

The C.C.F. member pounded his desk and replied: "You should be thrown out of the House for that remark. That's the dirtiest remark any swine could possibly make."

Speaker W. J. Stewart banged big gavel but Mr. Williams was not called upon to withdraw. He sought out Mr. Drew after the sitting and made his apology.

1,000,000 JAPS EVACUATED

London, March 22 — (AP) — Nearly 3,000,000 Japanese already have been evacuated from Tokyo and steps are being taken to speed up removal of others, the Tokyo radio said today.

Quoting a statement made to the Diet by the interior minister, the broadcast said "Already the civilian population in the capital has shrunk to less than 4,000,000" of the city's pre-war census.

Tokyo's 1940 census population was listed as 6,778,804.

ICE FAMINE THREATENED

Midland, March 22 —(CP)— The Midland and Penetang district may suffer an ice famine this summer since the rapid arrival of spring has shortened the ice cutting season, the Midland Park Commission may have no power to fill its bans, it was reported.

F.D.R. Emissary Believed Seeking Better Kremlin-Vatican Relations

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, March 22 — (AP)— Edward J. Flynn is believed to be exploring for President Roosevelt the possibility of an intimate closer relation between the Vatican and the Kremlin.

The New York City political leader's arrival in Italy from Russia was announced yesterday at Rome, although the exact nature of his mission remained shrouded in secrecy. The White House has had nothing to say about the visit of the chairman that Mr. Roosevelt invited his "old friend" to accompany him to the Yalta, Black Sea conference where he learned Mr. Flynn was planning a trip to Moscow.

However, there is a well-founded speculation in diplomatic quarters that Mr. Flynn's travels represent one of the most delicate diplomatic missions undertaken for Mr. Roosevelt: an effort to bridge the gap which separates Soviet Russia and the Roman Catholic Church.

Little prospect is seen here for any accord between Communist Russia and the Catholic Church as a religious institution. It is not considered out of the question, however, that some form of political or diplomatic representation would ease relations between the Vatican and the Kremlin.

Mr. Flynn's presence at Yalta under the sponsorship of the President is regarded here as significant in view of the fact that Mr. Flynn is a prominent Catholic layman — and, moreover, that some form of diplomatic representation would ease relations between the Vatican and the Kremlin.

Mr. Flynn's presence at Yalta under the sponsorship of the President is regarded here as significant in view of the fact that Mr. Flynn is a prominent Catholic layman — and, moreover, that some form of diplomatic representation would ease relations between the Vatican and the Kremlin.

His activities immediately gave rise to reports that the Vatican and Moscow were negotiating for a concord. Denials came from both Rome and Moscow, but these did not rule out the implications of Mr. Flynn's presence in Russia and his evident intention of visiting Italy later.

TWO DESTROYER ESCORTS SUNK OFF CHINA COAST

Cave-Studded Shimbu Line East of Manila Collapses and Much Booty Taken

Manila, March 22 — (AP) — Practically all organized Japanese resistance has been crushed on the 4,445 square miles of Panay, Central Philippines island invaded Sunday, and the enemy cave-studded Shimbu Line east of Manila on Luzon has collapsed, yielding a mass of war booty, Allied headquarters reported today.

In the spreading air war, medium bombers caught a six-ship enemy convoy off Amoy, China, Tuesday and in a pair of two bombers, 2,000-ton freighter-transport and 2 destroyer escorts were sunk, two 7,000-ton freighter-transports probably sunk and a destroyer damaged.

Panay's fine harbor at Iloilo was captured Tuesday with its docks intact, permitting immediate use. The port city of 90,000 also fell but the enemy garrison destroyed 70 per cent of it by fire and electrically-detonated mines.

Spread Over Coastal Plains

American units, aided by guerrillas, also spread over the coastal plain around Iloilo, setting Santa Barbara airfield, the second air base captured on Panay, and the defense of Cebu, Tabanan, San Sebastian and Pavia.

On Luzon, headquarters also disclosed that Cavite province, forming the southern part of Manila Bay, has been virtually cleared of the enemy.

In the Zambonga area of Mindanao Island, the U. S. 41st Division has effectively cleared the Malabang-Parang area of Moros and is operating without enemy hindrance.

TWO-WAY BLITZ SPREADS CHAOS AND DESTRUCTION

Ten Airfields Used As Eyes of German High Command Beaten Into Rubble, Fired

London, March 22 —(CP)— The full fury of Allied air might was turned directly on German troops jammed into the Ruhr today as 1,300 United States heavy bombers blasted the last of the largest enemy camps in western Germany and five more airfields near the front.

Incomplete reports released at supreme headquarters indicated that more than 7,000 planes were attacking German targets.

Destruction of American heavyweights were protected by 700 fighters in the attacks on camps and six bases in the Ruhr. The fighters also patrolled the sky for other widespread air operations ranging from the North Sea to Austria.

The tactical air commands thus were able to throw their full weight into the merciless bomb and rocket attacks which Gen. Eisenhower has warned is coming.

The weather again favored the airmen, and so many hundreds of aircraft were flying over Germany that the German radio finally gave up trying to follow them in its warning services.

Powerful Force.

A powerful force of four-motored British bombers led the daylight assault, and later the German radio reported raiders thundering in over Germany simultaneously from the south.

Indications were that another two-way blitz was launched against the enemy—a blow which perhaps would spell yesterday's record attacks by 7,000 planes.

This great co-ordinated operation involving every western fir command at Gen. Eisenhower's disposal spread chaos and destruction across scores of railway centres, fortified towns and airfields scattered over the north German plain.

Ten airfields serving as the eyes of the German High Command were beaten into rubble and fired from the air.

One R.A.F. reconnaissance pilot, who flew over the region said: he did not see a single useable town which was not damaged.

"It was just staggering," he said. "How anyone could exist in that inferno is beyond me".

Nineteen German planes, including several jets, were shot down yesterday, while 45 other planes and three gliders were destroyed on the ground.

Canadian bombers joined British and other aircraft in assailing the communications centre of Rhaine, near the 21st Army group front along the Lower Rhine yesterday.

R.A.F. Mosquitos have delivered an estimated 4,000 tons of bombs on the German capital during the present offensive started February 20.

8TH VICTORY LOAN TO BE OFFERED IN TWO MATURITIES

Minimum Objective Will be $1,250,000,000 Finance Minister Announces

Ottawa, March 22 — (CP) — Hon. Isnac Mitchell Gray announced last night that Canada's Eighth Victory Loan, opening April 2d with a minimum objective of $1,250,000,000 will be offered in two maturities — one of 18 years and five months and the other of four years and six months.

The long-term issue, bearing interest at three per cent, will mature at 100, Oct. 1, 1963, and will be callable at par on and after that short-er issue, bearing interest at 1 3/4 per cent, will mature at par Oct. 1, 1949, and will not be callable before maturity.

Both issues will be dated May 1, 1945, and will be issued at 100. The first interest coupon of the long-term issue will be for 8 months, with succeeding coupons falling due semi-annually on April 1 and Oct. 1.

At $1,250,000,000, the minimum objective of the three-week drive will be $50,000,000 above that of the seventh loan last fall, when Canadians invested $1,517,000,000, an all-time high! The minimum objective for individuals in the new loan will be $975,000,000, an increase of $75,-000,000 over the last campaign.

Expenditure High

In a statement accompanying last night's announcements of maturities, Mr. Ilsley said that even if the war in the Pacific ended shortly Canada would make expenditures, and consequently the country's borrowing requirements, for the next fiscal year would continue to be high.

"The 'cease fire' in Germany will not remove the necessity for enormous expenditures required for the maintenance and support of our armed forces through the period of their homecoming, demobilization and rehabilitation," he added.

"Then, too, there will be the substantial costs of our participation in the Pacific war. In the eighth Victory Loan individual Canadians will be called on once more to help supply these financial needs and by their action to help prevent inflation."

In the last loan, individual Canadians subscribed $766,000,000 on a minimum quota of $650,000,000. With the Eighth Victory Loan scheduled to get underway across Canada on April 2d, organization for the campaign in Hastings County has already commenced. It was announced today by Mr. J. J. Trudeau, county campaign chairman.

Organizational work preparatory to the opening of the campaign also commenced the first of the week with the local finance committee offices being moved back to Victory House, on Campbell street, in the old Standard Bank building at the corner of Front and Bridge streets. Considerable work has already been accomplished in setting up the county organization and will be completed in ample time for the opening of the campaign, according to Mr. Trudeau.

Progress was reported today on other sectors of the Burma front this morning.

Pockets of Japanese resistance were being mopped up between Mandalay and the Mytinge River to the south.

Southwest of Mandalay the 3rd Corps has made red gains and now is firmly established in the southern part of Myingan.

The British 19th Division was advancing from Monywa, the Ruby town 65 miles northeast of Mandalay, along the Mongk-Kyaukmee road.

RUSSIANS MASS ALONG ODER R. FOR FINAL BLOW

Veteran Storm Units Cut Into Danzig's Defences From Two Sides

Moscow, March 22, (AP) — The Russians hurled veteran storm units today into Heiligenbeil, last big enemy stronghold in the fortified pocket southwest of Koenigsberg, and cut into Danzig's defences from two sides.

Annihilation of the trapped German forces along the Haff (lagoon) in East Prussia, toward a swift conclusion, Jarli River was reported i-n. Soviet hosts overran Heiligenbeil's western outskirts and Heiligenbeil's railway junction in Heiligenbeil.

"The battle is coming to a close," said a dispatch from the army's paper Red Star, concerning the Heiligenbeil action. "The encircled ring hourly draws tighter".

There was heavy artillery reported from the long Berlin front held by Marshal Gregory Zhukov's 1st army, from northeast to southeast of the bombwrecked capital was within bestowed of Seelow Heights. Berlin, however, that this uneasy lull could not last long. Dispatches from the since the Allied armies were storming ahead across the Rhine in the west.

Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's forces hammered wedges into Danzig's defences from the west, southwest and south, where only about six miles from the muzzles of his Germans.

The Russians had driven within the rifled of cutting the Danzig-Gdynia coastal road by capturing Pruszcz, 20 miles southwest of Gydnia and seven northwest of Danzig.

The Red Army swept up nine towns and villages in the Danzig area yesterday, front dispatches made no attempt to minimize the dimensions of the struggle.

Russian aircraft were having a field day attacking targets almost at will within the enemy's disastrous pocket. Red Star reported that one large group of Germans came out of a forest under a flag of truce and laid down their arms.

Count De Marigny At Ottawa Hotel

Ottawa, March 22 — (CP) — Count de Marigny, central figure in the sensational trial of the Canadian millionaire Sir Harry Oakes, checked in at the Chateau Laurier today and expressed his intention of staying there.

He avoided newspapermen attempting to interview him and it could not be learned if his wife Nancy, daughter of Sir Harry, was accompanying him.

Acquittal of the murder of his father-in-law, Sir Harry Oakes, last year but asked by authorities to "leave," the count arrived at Halifax recently on the Swedish motorship Gripsholm and came aboard a merchant ship. He recently was in Cuba, it was said.

PREPARE FOR DEPARTURE

Stockholm, March 22 — (AP)— Swedish and other correspondents in Berlin have been told to be prepared to depart for southern Germany by March 25 or April 1 if they intend to continue work, it was reported today by a good source. This was taken as a possible indication that the government, or at least the foreign office great department, might evacuate Berlin.

Planes Batter Tank Country North of Ruhr to Bremen

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, March 22 — (AP) — The United States 3rd and 7th Armies stamped out all but bewildered pockets of German resistance in the Ruhr today and formed numerous junctions in the Saarland and Palatinate in a mighty conquest probably costing the Germans well over 100,000 men and two complete armies.

While the 3rd Army mopped up enemy remnants in the Oberhausen-Duisburg-Krefeld area, the 7th Army elements broke loose in advances of 26 miles from their bridgehead positions to points many miles north of areas captured earlier today by the 3rd Army —which was ramapging southward.

Lt.-Gen. George Patton's 3rd Army counted 11,336 prisoners yesterday and had another 11,000 still not processed for a total of around 22,-335 prisoners — raising the estimated prison bag since the start of the campaign to around 88,335 tired, dirty and thoroughly beaten Germans.

Just as this victory — one of the greatest of the war — was being consummated in the Ruhr-Rhineland, Saarland and Hesse, Allied planes battered the whole flat tank country north of the Ruhr to Bremen in prelude to perhaps the next campaign toward the north door to Berlin.

Served as Anvil

The 7th Army, which in early 30 days of the campaign served as the anvil on the south to Gen. Patton's 3rd Army hammer attacks from the north and west, debouched onto the Rhine Plain close to Worms and 15 miles north of Neustadt (pop. 20,620), newly captured by the 3rd. Grunstadt, an industrial town of 9,300, is 14 miles northwest of Ludwigshafen.

The 7th Army also reached Oetberg, four miles north of Kaiserslautern and captured Alsenz on the 3rd. Even these 7th Army reports of midday were far from up to the minute.

Correspondent Lewis Hanke reported:

"Allied forces have reduced the German-held area south of the Moselle and west of the Rhine by more than a bridgehead." Gen. Eisenhower commanding said.

The blithe disregard which the 7th and 3rd Armies showed for military boundaries made their drives a confusing mass of salients in which Gen. Patton's and Gen. Alexander's troops were criss-crossed.

The strife over the shuttles of a great loom wove steel-meshed traps around hopelessly pocketed German armies in the Palatinate, Saarland and Hesse.

Fierce Fighting

After several days of frantic retreat, the Germans were believed to have made a supreme effort during the night to serve some remnants of their shattered 1st and 7th armies with ferry crossings of the Rhine. But the beleaguered scavengers were hardly believed enough to man adequately the Valhalla line on the east bank.

The Battle of the Saarland and Palatinate, started by Gen. Patch's attacks from the south only eight days ago and 60 miles to the west, is the worst.

German defeats in the west.

With the victory complete save for mopping up, attention focused on the Saarland and the drive plain to the north — ideal for tank manoeuvres. Allied troops in the area were reported isolating the region for the approaching push which Gen. Eisenhower has advertised.

Nazis Fight Fiercely

Further west, the great Siegfried Line fortress of Pirmasens (47,300) was entered yesterday and there were no fresh reports today. It appeared probably the 7th Army had outflanked and bypassed road centre of 14,350, which was left far behind the main battle lines. Regular admission 25c. Superforts Aid Allied Drive Against Burma

Washington, March 22. (AP) — India-based Superfortresses bombed important military installations and storage areas near the great Burma port of Rangoon today for the second time in less than a week.

Communiques received from the 20th Air Force headquarters here said the "precision task force" of the big B-29s from the 20th Bomber Command participated in the raid. The announcement indicated that upwards of 100 planes took part.

Today's attack gave added support to Allied drives against the Japanese in Burma. Rangoon is the main supply depot for the Japanese in this area.

MUSKRAT KILLED ON UPPER FRONT ST.

The crowd was milling around the doorway in an upper Front Street building the other night, and excited cries of "Jab him again" came from the centre of the group.

Two city police officers on their late evening patrol sensed a possible disturbance, and, investigating, found known card games of pontoon, or "black jack."

But they were disappointed. A husky muskrat, point of origin unknown, and perhaps tiring of the long winter in submerged captivity, had taken the pelt would be in the city, but had taken flight and sought the security of the upper floors of the doorway.

He was dispatched by a stick in the hands of one of the onlookers and his furred body placed in the gutter.

When the police good naturedly departed the crowd, and turned to survey the unfortunate producer of a next winter's fur coat, it had disappeared. Some small boys, with an eye to business, and realizing that the pelt would bring them a tidy profit, had quietly confiscated the victim of a hard-fought citizen and quietly made off with the spoils.

Madoc — The funeral service of the late Dr. Fred J. Nickle which was very largely attended took place from the residence to Trinity United Church, Madoc, on Thursday, March 16th, and was under the auspices of the Masonic Order, with the officers of Hastings and Prince Edward Reserve Regiment in attendance. Rev. A. Poulter was assisted by Padre Capt. H. M. Grant of Wellington who read the scripture lesson St. John's 14th Chapter very comfortingly. Mr. Poulter spoke as his text Matthew 10-8, "Heal the Sick, Cleanse the Lepers, Raise the Dead, cast out Devils, Freely Ye Have Received Freely Give," basing his sermon on the good physician and emphasizing feelingly that the ministry, the church and the home, had lost an anchor.

The pallbearers were Dr. S. R. Beatty, Dr. Geo. Stobie, Mr. Geo. White, Mr. R. H. Bread, Major C. Ross Hurst and Major E. T. Naylor.

According to word received by his parents, he died of serious wounds. Just as news reached here that he was wounded, a cablegram arrived announcing his death.

Private Jackson was with the Canadian Scottish Regiment and was last reported in Holland.

He received his early education in Trenton public and high schools and subsequently was employed as he was a member of the signals team which won in an athletic meet at Belleville. He was over six feet in height and a very promising athlete. At the local high school he was very popular.

Running for his life toward the shore, Pte. Jack Bruce, 19, who got his rubber boot caught between the rails, managed to pull his foot from the boot he dashed on and reached safety just as the train, when the train approached. As he left the bridge he plunged down the bank striking a fence, which broke his fall.

Hearing his cries for help Mrs. Percy Hodge, nearby neighbor rushed to the child and called the police. In the police cruiser he was taken to the office of Dr. R. A. McQuade and later to his home but on Monday he was taken by ambulance to the hospital, on the advice of Dr. McQuade, where he was found to have a fractured ankle.

The War Today—

Badly Battered Ruhr Now Under Shadow of Impending Invasion

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

The shattered component of the Saarland and Palatinate by the U. S. 3rd and 7th armies represents one of the major victories of the war and one which is likely to precipitate the Rhineland invasion of the great Ruhr industrial centre by Allied forces north of Cologne.

Allied supreme headquarters tells us that the German hold on the Saar-Palatinate area west of the Rhine has been reduced to "little more than a bridgehead." This means that the Patton-Patch combination has nullified any German menace to the Allied right flank west of the Rhine and thus has removed what may be the last obstacle to the eagerly-awaited invasion of the Ruhr by the Allied left, or northern, flank.

German Civilians Fleeing

Doubtless the argument against the belief expressed by the German radio that Field Marshal Montgomery's command is about to cross the Rhine. The radio also thinks Allied airborne troops will be employed — which sounds wholly reasonable. Meanwhile hundreds of thousands of terrified German civilians are fleeing in panic from the danger Ruhr, tying German military operations in knots.

The Germans just haven't the troops to defend the long battle front of the Rhine. There will be fierce fighting, but if they can't stop the Allies now from swarming across this last great barrier to the heart of Germany.

Then there's a third barb to the disaster which has overtaken the Germans in the near-vicinity of the Ruhr. Remember that the most important of the many highly industrial centres on which the Ruhr depends for its war machine is the city of Cologne, on the west bank of the Rhine. Well, Cologne is now in American hands, and there have been other manufacturing centres, such as Bonn, Remagen, Aachen, and Eschweiler, which have fallen.

Ruhr's Turn is Dimmed

The Russians have ripped the Reich defences to shreds, deeply dismembering Germany at one of its main sources of coal, iron and other war materials. The Russians have had a variety of manufactures. The Ruhr, which has been the back of Germany's munitions industry, is the "granary of" Nazi arms. Accordingly, German military commanders, who had the guns blazing shortly after Adolf on the Normandy beachhead, are reported to be Major Jack Doubles, former teacher at Queen Victoria School here. His battery sergeant major is Cpl. Gibbs, also a local lad. J. M. Cameron also hails from this city. Sergeant "Slick" Hollom, step-son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hollom, Ross Street, is one of the battery's crack Kiwanis Out 61 Planes.

According to Maple Leaf, official Canadian Army publication in the overseas theatres of war, the 4th has established a record for "kills", knocking down 61 German aircraft in two months of fighting. This achievement is best measured perhaps in the story of his American outfit which claimed the total of 45 kills plus 18 probables as a result of the Luftwaffe's desperate attempts to stop the rapid advance of the Allied armies. Pilots were ordered to prevent them from getting back. Declared Lt. Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, "Hitler's Air Force is being annihilated." He writes:

For this versatile group of gunners, many of whom hail from this city, has seen service on all fronts, including its knocking-off chore. Gibbs's vaunted fatherhood from Normandy, Holland, Belgium, Germany, Africa, Sicily, and Italy. With Only Half of Red Cross Quota Reached Much Remains To Be Done

With approximately one-half of the quota of $58,000 allotted to the city already collected, Red Cross officials today urged the co-operation of the general public, organizations and canvassers, in the final drive to the campaign, ends during the next few days.

With a considerable amount of city territory yet to be canvassed and with a number of associations and private donors to be heard from, campaign officials are hopeful of the outcome of the campaign, but feel that much effort is yet to be expended if the quota is to be reached by the time the curtain falls near the end of the month.

Canvassers, who have not already done so, are requested to turn in available monies and pledges to the Red Cross headquarters in the Rigby garage, Pinnacle Street, by Monday next.

Thinks Bermuda May Lift Ban From Taxis, Buses

One of the last stumbling blocks to the resumption of tourist traffic to Bermuda is hoped to be removed when Premier Hubert Faries returns to Hamilton next week from a visit to the island. Premier Faries, accompanied by Mrs. Faries, left by plane on February 26 and returned to Toronto on March 1.

While in Bermuda, Premier Faries was invited to address the Bermuda Board of Trade on the subject of tourist traffic to the island. He told the board that the Ontario Government was prepared to co-operate with the Bermuda Government in any way possible to assist in the resumption of tourist traffic to the island.

Premier Faries also had discussions with Sir Richard Ford, Governor of Bermuda, and with members of the Bermuda Government. He was told that the ban on taxis and buses would be lifted as soon as the Bermuda Government was assured that the tourist traffic would be resumed on a basis that would be profitable to the island.

Premier Faries was also told that the ban on the importation of motor cars into Bermuda would be lifted as soon as the tourist traffic was resumed.

Students To Get Experience in Local Garages

Following the lead of technical schools in Hamilton and in Toronto, and as others in the United States students in the county of Prince Edward will have opportunity in the future may get practical experience in local garages by a new plan now in force.

The program was carried out on a small scale at the Collegiate last Spring when four motor mechanics students were given two weeks practical experience in the repair shops of local garages with proprietors in each case vying with their satisfaction of students' work. In this one student will go into a local garage full time upon the completion of his course at the Collegiate.

In announcing the intention of giving motor mechanics students practical experience prior to the time of their graduation, motor mechanics teacher, Mr. Bill Hewitt of the Collegiate, who visited both ways, both to the advantage of the student and to the garage owner.

The experience gained afforded Canadians to visit this popular resort. Special arrangements made by the Bermuda Government, Canadians are again able to secure for a happy holiday on an island where their own money has face value. Because of war restrictions, tourist visits had been cancelled.

"The weather is ideal in Bermuda and the golf courses are all in up-top shape," said Mr. Farwell. He added that some hotels, including the famous Belmont Manor, are again open and ready for business.

Significant News

War news this week bears the signs of the gathering of Allied supremacy over the Hun and the Jap. In Germany there is the loss of Saarland, her third greatest centre of industry, with cities and towns and villages falling by many scores into Allied hands and German soldiers more and more cheering a change to "surrender." As for Japan, she has received another heavy sea blow with seventeen of her warships crippled along with a giant battleship under the pounding of more than 1,000 Yankee planes and with the loss of 575 Nipponese aircraft.

These two pieces of news are a picture from which the world outside Germany and Japan can see the ever approaching nemesis of defeat for the Axis powers.

The full fury of the Allied might is being visited upon the Germany of the Nazis and Prussian militarists. Japan is getting a real foretaste of the deluge of Allied power that will pour down upon her when Germany lies helpless in defeat.

Enemy Disintegration

Freedom and justice are witnessing their vindication as never before in history today as Germany in the West and militaristic Japan in the East are plunging forward to their destruction in the gathering of the wrath of humanity against these two evil powers of evil. And never has been associated with every evil force and influence, with everything sinister and destructive but it does not avail the Hun and the Jap.

With the majesty of justice retribution is driving the Hun and the Jap into their lairs and defeat and collapse.

In Germany there is being seen the steady disintegration and falling away of the gigantic power for evil which Hitler and his agents wielded. Nazism and Prussianism have been defeated on many a field of battle. The Allies are destroying Hitler's armies, Germany's once proud boast, cities and towns by scores and villages by hundreds in Germany are falling into Allied hands. Allied armies direct German troops wandering in the West, fresh and wishing to surrender, to prison camps.

The war is not only cracking up German military power but it is cracking up the German theory, the high-sounding words Goebbels and Goerings and such like. Readers had the pleasure of reading the amazing story of war commentator and correspondent Lochner telling of the plot against Hitler last summer and the revelation it gave into the heart of Germany and the men at the helm in that country. Everywhere the signs of collapse of men are shown, Hitler a wreck of the once hale and and loud-mouthed tyrant and man of many infamies.

Treason towards Hitler by Himmler (if one can speak of plotting against Germany by a Himmler as treachery or treason) was seen in the plot, to be followed by Himmler's withdrawal from the danger of plotting because he was fearful of his own life. Fear even of a foul and cowardly kind is to make the world a prey of fear of Germany. By the law of justice, it is the vile Hun who now is in terror.

The crack-up of the world beard another story about the bully Goering, said to be mentally done, fearing the loss of the booty he picked up through the war—just as a thief and gangster would fear,—his cushioned furniture stolen from Germany and treasure houses and the paintings he secured through his position. It is right that he should suffer agonizing fears of losing these for his fears will certainly be followed by the actual loss of these precious relics of other ages.

From the Fuehrer downward Nazis have been lyrical thieves. Germany has been the den of these thieves. Mankind has now gave a word for the Hitlerites and their land, he called it the lair of the German wild beast and his picture was well chosen and the world prophetic of what has taken place in Germany, the Nazi beast chased into his lair.

Germany has been seen as a ravenous beast among the nations. Her power now nears an end. For freedom and right are triumphing on the field of battle where Germany hoped to win. Down with Germany will go Hitler and the most infamous crew of men and the evil ever exerted sway or rose to power, so great as to threaten the world.

There is a spirit of evil which Germany represents and is. And there is also a spirit, that of justice, which is emerging victor and sinner, of the peace that will endure.

Hitler and his tyrant gang see their fate writing in the fall of Saarland, the Allied victories. The Nazis have been caught in the march of military events and justice under the burden of their own evil, their fanatic and frenzied hate and evil schemes. They cannot escape. Justice will be done with such men of evil as Hitler and the rest of the Nazis.

Dickens' London

"One of the sad changes brought to England by the enemy's bombings has been the destruction of a great artist who saw the wealth of material in the London of his day and depicted it in countless scenes that will never fail to appeal. However the works of the great portrayer of city life survive and will live. The Gazette says "Dickens' London is one of those things that is beyond the power of any enemy to take away. By the very genius of his writing Dickens gave these streets an immortality, which the destruction of the original cannot remove; any more than the reality of a Rembrandt portrait is removed by the death of the person who sat for it. There will be countless thousands of persons in the future, as there have been in the past and as there are today—persons who never saw these streets in St. Paul's shadow, but who know them in all their distinctive and human characterfulness."

Remagen

The Britannics supplies 16 lines of information about Remagen, the town where the watch on the Rhine was rocked to sleep. We will also be sitting bird, too easy a mark for a geographical sportsman, and supplement them with gleanings from other sources, says a Chicago Tribune columnist:

Before 1939 Remagen was headquarters for excursions into the Ahr Valley, whose scenery has been advertised as "romantic and wildly picturesque." It was also a distinguishing centre for the patrons of various "fads," or health resorts, on both sides of the river. Within easy reach, on the left bank, is Bad Neuenahr; on the right, some distance in hilly country, is Hohenhimef, an elaborate institution for pulmonary patients; it has mineral springs for other invalids. A late prewar estimate gave Remagen 5,500 inhabitants.

The bridge at Remagen connected the Cologne-Coblenz-Mainz line with the east bank system. A picture map shows the structure running straight into a tunnel high above the shore, level, when the track enters a steep and lofty escarpment called the Erpeler Ley, which must be quite a sight from the river. This is a basaltic cliff with columnar formations. It has been protected against quarrying, and has as disfigured other stretches of Rhine scenery. An outlier of the Erpeler Ley carries the ruins of a medieval castle named Ockenfels.

Britain has cut down 100,000,000 trees for war purposes since the war began. She was lucky to have them at a time when shipping is so scarce for such things. Also, reforestation will provide after the war employment and, the value of trees having been proved, it may provide for permanent post-war replacement.—Port Arthur News-Chronicle.

WAR

There is no glory to it!
All is filth and slime;
Those who have managed to come through it
Call it man's worst crime:

War holds no touch of splendor
Man would choose to boast.
All ordered out to slay, to tear, and render Detest it most.

Seldom a soldier sits to pen a letter,
But he writes:
"Surely there must be cleaner ways and better
To settle men's affairs."

No single voice around the world defending it!
All's horror, filth and crime.
God grant this furious, heartless struggle ends in time!

'Plane-Pushers' Make Flight Deck Look as Colorful as Disney Cartoon

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Western Pacific (delayed) —The men aboard an aircraft carrier could be divided, for purposes of clarity, into three groups.

There are the fliers, both officers and enlisted radiomen and gunners, who actually fly in combat. They are the heroes but fly, and study, and prepare to fly.

Then there are the men who maintain the ship—the deck hands and the mechanics and the myriads of plane handlers, the deck crews that push and manhandle the planes. A dozen times a day around the deck.

These men are ordinarily known as "Airedales," but the term isn't much on courtesy. Usually they just call themselves "plane-pushers."

And third is the ship's crew—the deck hands, engineers, signalmen, cooks, pharmacists' mates, and the rest—the ship, just as though it were any ship in the Navy.

The fliers aren't looked upon as Gods by the rest of the crew, but they are respected. Hardly a man in the crew ever thinks of envying them. They've seen enough crashlandings on deck to know what the life is all about.

But there is a feeling—a slight one—between the ship's company and the air maintenance crew. The latter is the "guest" on the ship's crew. They feel that the "plane-pushers" think they're pretty peerless.

They say before "them Airedales is the only time I get a bit glory. Nobody ever hears about us. All we do is keep the ship from sinking."

But as far as I can see, the Airedales haven't that at all. They're all in favor. And their job is often a miserable one. Fliers are supposed to send-in the strokes they work like fiends. I think the Airedale deserves what little credit he gets.

It is these "plane-pushers" who make the flight deck of an aircraft carrier look as gay and wildly colorful as a Walt Disney cartoon. For they dress in bright colors.

Some wear bright shirts and sweaters that are blue, green, red, yellow or orange. They look like the flight deck look like a flower garden in June.

This colorful gear isn't just a whim. Bright color identifies a special type of worker, so they can be picked out quickly and sent on their errands.

Red is the gasoline and fire-fighting detail. Blue is for the men who just push the planes around. Brown is for plane captains and mechanics. White stands for medical men and the engineering bosses. Yellow is for the deck officials.

Yellow is what a pilot looks for when he manages to get on deck. For the plane directors guide him as he taxies in, and by obeying their signs implicitly, the pilot can taxi his plane within inches of another one without ever looking at it.

All the pilots and ship's officers live in "officers country" in the forward part of the ship. They live in comfortable staterooms, two men to four men.

The crew lives in compartments. They are of all shapes and sizes, depending on the space in a given man. Others are big and house a hundred men.

Nobody doesn't use hammocks anymore. Every man has a bed. Officers' beds are built-in, like tubular framework, with wire springs and mattress on it. It is attached to the wall by hinges, and can be folded back flat to the wall in daytime.

The "bunks" aren't let down till about 9 in the evening (except for men standing regular watch who must sleep in the daytime), when a sailor has no regular place to sit or lie down during the day if he does not have a few spare minutes.

TEST OF STRENGTH FACES DREW GOVT. IN COMING VOTE

Indications Divisions on Throne Speech Debate May Be Reached Tonight

Toronto, March 28 (CP)—Premier Drew's administration, in power for more than seven years, faces its first test of strength in the Ontario legislature since the June, 1943, general election tonight when the Throne Speech debate is brought to a vote.

Indications are that the division may be reached late in the afternoon or early evening, although there is speculation in some quarters that the Conservative government may change its tactics strategy may be to introduce further debate on the address and postpone the divisions until after final consideration of the budget, probably next week.

In the longest sitting of the present session, the legislature yesterday heard Premier Drew accuse Hepburn (Liberal, Elgin) of Ontario) of conducting a filibuster after the member spoke for three hours in the House.

Mr. Williams, who had reviewed industrial accidents in Ontario and criticized the administration of the Workmen's Compensation Board, moved that the debate should be thrown out of the House for that remark.

Premier Drew again moments later when, as the time neared the adjournment hour (1 p.m. EST), a C.C.F. adjournment motion was opposed by the Premier over the heads of Opposition Leader E. B. Jolliffe and F. C. Robinson (CCF—Wentworth) in the debate with a 45-minute speech.

Health Research Program

Earlier the premier announced a province-wide adult education program, including establishment of an economic institution, has been started by the Ontario Research Foundation Board, comprised of representatives of universities throughout the province, to co-ordinate the work of local agencies in planning adult education in rural and urban communities.

C. P. Murray (L.—Renfrew South) is expected to be the first speaker when Throne Speech debate resumes tonight. Other scheduled speakers are Aurelian Belanger (CCF—Prescott), William Ashbourne (CCF — Ennora), Mrs. Rae Luckock (CCF—Toronto Bracondale).

There is a possibility that two or three other members may speak tonight before the debate is brought to a vote.

Mr. Murray, Mr. Belanger and Mr. Ashbourne are expected before the end of tonight's sitting.

Development Unlikely

Although defeat of the government would probably be followed by a refusal by several members to have been suggested that Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews might call on Leader Hepburn to attempt to form a government. One proposal would be for the defeat of the government of a government defeat Mr. Hepburn's coalition government of the whole house. But such a development is considered unlikely.

With support of the C.C.F. the government could defeat all three divisions this session. They were favored by Mitchell F. Hepburn, Liberal House Leader, and the Liberals have supported in the voting by the two Labor-Progressive and the two Social Credit members.

Throne Speech divisions. So far neither party has given any public indication of its voting intentions.

The voting on the two-point Liberal amendment will come first. It regrets:—

"(1) That the government has reversed its former policy of granting public grants to assist certain sectarian public schools by introducing a measure to amend the Education which has caused disunity among large sections of our people and has created a situation which the established democratic right of each to worship according to his own conscience free from interference by the state;

"(2) That the government has failed to accept their own responsibility for planning and developing the resources of Ontario to guarantee employment and production in the post-war years for men and women now in the uniform and for those now engaged in war production waste engaged in war industries."

THE JUMPING FLEA

The ukulele, essentially a small guitar with only four strings, is not a Hawaiian instrument, as is commonly supposed. It was introduced from Portugal to the islands at the end of the 19th century by Portuguese sailors.

As far as known the guitar, a stringed instrument of the 4th class, is of European origin. The representation of the instrument is found in Spanish sculpture dating back to 1180 A.D.

"Guitar," "zither," "cither," "cithern," "cittern," "citole" and "gittern" are all derived directly or indirectly from "cithara," the Greek and Latin name for a sort of lyre, which had four or five gut or horse hair strings.

According to legend, the first ukulele was designed by a white man in Hawaii who modified the Portuguese guitar by reducing the size of the instrument and the number of strings. The Hawaiian musicians quickly took to the new instrument and developed from the native tree called "Acacia koa."

But What's a Billion or So?

(Ottawa Journal Editorial)

The British Columbia branch of the Old Age Pensioners' Organization sends us a copy of its petition to Parliament and the provincial legislature for increased pensions.

This B.C. body wants a tax-free pension of $40 a month at age 65 for every Canadian 65 years of age and over, regardless of income. The multimillionaire would get it along with the poorest citizen. No sins that he may have committed would bar the door to the state of a deceased pensioner.

The B.C. organization's estimates such a pension scheme would cost this country about $2 billion a year. Add the cost of the forthcoming baby bonus and you have a big bill for a round billion a year. These two grand schemes of official benevolence would demand about $80 per head of the whole population in taxes.

The baby bonus covers Canadians from birth to the age of 16. This pension for the old folks Canadian would take them over at 65. What worries us is the gap between 16 and 65. Is the government to be expected must make a living without any help from the state? We think the good that hiatus could be bridged, however, if money could be brought upon the Dominion Government to enlarge and extend the payments on account of children, and more inevitably, if the B.C. scheme were limited to persons of 65 world argue with irrefutable logic that they have been paying for themselves and so the good work would go on.

It's a merry life while the money has failed to implement their promises with respect to educational health services and other contentious matters;

"(3) That the government have failed to accept legislation that would secure adequate farm prices to farm producers and security of farm tenure in the post-war years;

"(4) That the government have failed to recognize the immediate need to help agriculture that cannot be done more securely and other collective bargaining rights for labor in the province of Ontario.

"(5) That the government have failed to accept their own responsibility for planning and developing the resources of Ontario to guarantee employment and production in the post-war years for men and women now in the uniform and for those now engaged in war production waste engaged in war industries."

EARLY AIR CONDITIONING

About 500 years ago, slaves in Rajah's palace in India threw water on a curtain or reeds hung across an opening in a wall and achieved primitive type of air conditioning.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Names in Divorces

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My friend whose maiden name (let's say) was Miss Jane Smith, after a short time obtained a divorce and talked herself into "Mrs. Jane Smith". Then she re-married, again was divorced, and again calls herself "Mrs. Jane Smith". Is this correct, or should she be "Miss Jane Smith"?

D. S.

When a woman getting a divorce obtains permission to resume her maiden name, should use the "Miss" before her maiden name, Miss Jane Smith, She should not call herself "Mrs. Jane Smith". But people her first name should not be used when the prefix "Mrs." is used, and second husband "Mrs. Jane Smith" is a name she never had. Evidently your friend wants the form of the name she chooses to convey the fact that she has been married, and at the same time to be recognized by her maiden name.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am a girl of sixteen, and I'm in love with a boy who will soon be seventeen. He is the same age as I'm. I always thought he was nice, but I never took him seriously until he asked me to go out with him. Now, after a month of having dates with him, he's begun to ignore me at school, when he is with me he is "as sweet as pie". I can't find a reason for his hot and cold act to have any more dates with him, not although, I try to ignore him too, I carefully regard his moments reaction. As far as I know he has not gone with anyone else. What shall I do?

A. M. B. M.

Rent that wisest of men, Solomon, couldn't solve the problem of the "hot and cold" mood! And what a man (of any age) decides to break off a friendship, it is generally extremely difficult for a girl (of any age) to re-light his interest in her. And, after all, a girl is never to admit to herself that she cares for any one of the hundred possible reasons sustain a boy's interest in her. But if she can't, her only recourse is to "call it a day" as the boys does! Probably he contains true generosity or what-might-have-been; and with her head held high and her chin right as possible, look about for "fresh pastures". And remember that since your short-acquaintance here will soon be eighteen, his thoughts will now necessarily be directed to the approaching call to military service, and perhaps these thoughts are at the moment more important to him than thoughts of romance.

Foot Trouble, a Basic Ill

By HELEN FOLLETT

WINNY think, dear, that there are few more tragic figures in a woman's heart. Everything in life is all wrong. The list of ills caused by foot troubles would fill a book. It includes, grouches, curried disquietions, spinal discomfort, leg pains, headaches, tired eyes, upset nervous systems. And that's not the half of it. The entire physical and mental ills and grieves when the feet are in pain.

Relieve Shoes.

There are shoes travelling over permanents that are much too small; and the feet grow feverish. The toes are bunched, corns and callosed spots. It is only the older women who are with that shoes that are too small. Look at the teen-agers! Their feet are not large. The sensible woman selects those that are just right; they have wriggling space for the toes, the waist of the foot is supported, the shoe is plenty long, but not wide. Are wonderfully constructed mechanisms and, properly, also pretty does's realization without protest.

Burning feet and 'irritating toes are comforted by a warm bath in which baking soda has been dissolved. Rinse with cold water, dry with a coarse towel, friction with cold cream.

Change Shoes.

Change the shoes frequently and sprinkle a foot powder inside to keep the feet dry and comfortable. Wear stockings plenty large, a short stocking often causes irritation to the nails as will a narrow shoe. Don't cut corns with the knife yourself; there is always a possibility of infection. Soak in hot soap suds, dry, friction with a toilet paper, skin massage with mineral oil.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

"Needles and Pins, When a Man Marries His Trouble Begins"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

The old nursery rhy about troubles beginning with marriage has me in the solar plexus. I'm 22, doing essential war work, haven't been accepted by the Army on account of flat feet and defective sight. My wife who is 18 and expecting a baby knew we'd have to live with my parents, as I'm trying to pay off a mortgage on a piece of property which will help us all when it's clear.

My parents treat her as a daughter, have every consideration for her, owing to her condition. My mother says she'll have her breakfast in bed. Yet she wants a home of her own, is critical of everything and argues with me if I say I'm right. I'm utterly worn out with the entire situation. Would it be well to offer to let her get a divorce, as she's so dissatisfied?

Distracted

Your home situation must be trying to the last degree, but I'm to attribute it to what doctors call the "psychosis of pregnancy", in girl of 18, going through such a time is apt to exaggerate daily pinpricks into martyrdom. No, I think it wouldn't be well to suggest a divorce at this time. She'll probably be happy and delighted with the baby when it arrives.

Babies are wonderful miracle-workers. Try to have patience.

On His Side, at Least, Love Seems Dying Out

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We became engaged in high school, and he was so crazy over me that he wouldn't go to college, but went to work in a war plant so we could be married sooner. Now he doesn't seem to care and is crazy to go overseas. He's taking boy training at a nearby camp.

I've never had a date with another fellow, but I find my fiance makes dates whenever he can and is rushing a certain girl near his camp. Do you think he still cares for me and am I free to disregard our engagement and make dates with other boys? He did forget talks of giving me a ring.

Wondering

Under the circumstances, you might, I'm sure, are certainly not bound by any high school understanding you had with this boy. Since he went away he has never taken up the subject of an engagement, makes dates and is running another girl. It's high time for you to show a little independence and enjoy your youth; it doesn't last you know.

Generation Clash on Rearing Children

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I haven't a thing against my husband's mother except that she wants to bring up my children for me in the good old-fashioned way. She believes in castor oil for every ailment, punishment instead of reasoning, and oh — those dreadful, old-fashioned clothes that she stitches, ruffles and tucks, and which are unsuitable for anything but parties, and then are worn enough of them at present.

My husband loves his mother to distraction and often pleads with me to let her have her way. She has intimated that I set my children against her which is absurd, but I don't like them to go there for meals as she gives them rich desserts.

Rebellious Daughter-in-Law

Two grandsons, regarding the bringing up of children, are likely to crash. This can only be avoided by the utmost tact which I'm afraid my dear, from your letter which is too long to print, you haven't always used.

You're absolutely within your own rights when you object to your children being dined with [illegible] mother-in-law has today, try to have a little more patience. Let the children visit their grandmother, and ask her in advance not to give them rich food.

St. Michaels Capture Junior A Championship by Taking Galt Red Wings in Four Straight

Powerful Club Picked by Many Experts to Win Memorial Cup Easily

By The Canadian Press

Fulfilling a prediction of many weeks, St. Michaels captured the O.H.A. junior "A" championship by taking the journal and deciding game, an 8-1 win last night, concluding the best-of-seven titular series with the Red Wings by the shortest route, the three previous contests of the students routed their opponents with a third-period scoring splurge but in the final fixture St. Mikes were content to fire in a couple of counters in the last frame before clinching the issue early in the middle session.

Joe Sadoski punched the only marker of the first chapter for the Colts-men and Turik registered No. 2 shortly after the opening of the second stanza to pair the winning margin. Bill Adamo came through with Galt's lone score at 5.53 and Costello made it 8-2 for the visitors before the period was over. Gravelin swiped two more at widely interevals in the third for good measure and the junior "A" season was over.

There was no penalties during this last championship clash, with 14 penalties doled out by the officials. Defenceman Puglin of Red Wings drew most attention in this respect, being benched three times in the middle frame and once in the third period.

Frood Scores Upset

In the third encounter of the all-Ontario best-of-seven senior series at Toronto, Sudbury Miners caused an upset by coming from behind to the Hamilton Majors 4-3, the southerners leading off with a 2-1 advantage in the first canter only to see the tussle tied up in the second period. Jim Dewey, veteran of the Allan-Cup-winning Majors, netted the tally in 4:30 of the third period. Hamilton leads the provincial playoffs 2-1 in the said the Dewey engagement is slated for Friday night on Maple Leaf home ice.

The teams alternated in the scoring for two periods, Dillon Brace grabbing the lead for Majors at the outset, Ab Cleuthier of Sudbury getting the equalizer and Johnny Hollick next scoring against his old club mates at 9:21. Hamilton edged out in the first inning. Webster of Sudbury tied proceedings in the second by Clarence Shillington put Hamilton out in front once again and Lemieux squared it for the northerners. Forsey settled it when he popped in the third-period marker.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, March 22 —(CP)— A railway fireman just turned 31, Vince Hawkins probably will start his climb into the ring with veteran Ernie Roderick for the vacant British middleweight championship. The betting is that the two will meet some time in June at London's Albert Hall.

It has been a sensational rise for Hawkins, grim-visaged battler unknown a year ago. He has won each of his 11 professional fights and the latest, an eight-round verdict over Jimmy Bell, champion, Bert Gilroy, was his best.

Roderick, 32, holds the British version of light crown and hopes to add the middleweight title. He has been in the ring 11 years and has started to show his age and never was much as hard as Hawkins, a curious fighter ever ready to take blows in exchange for one.

The Hawkins-Gilroy clash was a duel between a natural fighter and a polished boxer. The Bell collected most of the points in the first half of each round, then Hawkins would take over with a nonstop two-fister and Gilroy spent most of the scores but couldn't keep pace with his younger opponent.

Hawkins turned out glaring fault that has also been seen in the style of Freddie Mills, British and Empire light-heavyweight champion. He rushed in without paying due regard to his defence and a heavy counter-punch could do plenty of damage.

Kid Berg, former British Empire lightweight champion who made a name in the United States years ago, announced at a cocktail party that he will make a comeback.

Then the 42nd signed to meet Eric Dolley, Derby welterweight, in London. He plans another half-dozen or so fights after that and "then I'll be ready for a crack at Ernie Roderick for the welter title."

Berg claims he is 35. Certainly he was topping London bills 20 years ago as a boy fighter.

From the bench at Old Street police court, Magistrate P. O. Lang-ley announced that Robert Jacobs, Metropolitan Police heavyweight boxing champion, had been killed in action in Europe. He was a lieutenant in the Royal Scots Fusiliers.

"It is a matter of very great grief for all of us," the magistrate said. "I cannot imagine a finer gentleman."

Jacobs, a constable attached to Old Street, joined the army as a private and was commissioned within nine months. One of the best police boxers in years, he won the police championships in 1939 and 1941 and lost only nine of 62 contests.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

This story has to do with the baseball who was visited by a friend one afternoon. The baseball was sitting in his room at the time.

The friend did as requested. Then he handed the camera back to the baseball.

"Swell!" exclaimed the nut. "Now where do I have this picture developed in a few hours?"

The friend was puzzled.

"What's the rush?" he inquired. "The other guy? Impatient."

"I've just got to have it," he pondered, "I want to show tonight—and I have no mirror!"

Around the Town.

There will be a general exodus of basketball players from Belleville over the week-end. Many players in Belleville "I" girls leave tomorrow for Toronto to take in the Ontario Basketball Association playdowns. The Belleville Intermediate girls leave for the Queen City and the C.O.S.S.A. cage playdowns. Belleville Collegiate Institute Memorial Morton rates her B.C.I. girls rather highly in the Queen City playdowns, and Skipper Red Townsend and Coach Bobby Albert Colleys captured the junior boys' crown in this district.

E. C. "Cliff" Argue was honored last week by being named chairman of Bowling Association.....The meeting was held in the Belleville bowling rink and was attended by a large number of representing the Havelock Bowling Club and some other than Doug Bessman, former New York Ranger defenceman, who is employed in the Quinte city, and who was a puckster.....Local softball fans are glad to see Jimmy Strom, who played a lot of softball in the Quinte district, returning last fall....Reports from Holland indicate he was killed in action recently.

PLAYOFF SYSTEM FOR STANLEY CUP ON POINT BASIS

If at End of Seven Games Teams Are Tied In Points 8th Gabe to be Played

By FRED KENNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 22 — (CP) — Something new has been added to the playoff system for the historic Stanley Cup.

In deference to the American current year's series is being played on a point system — as is the regular schedule — instead of the traditional best-of-seven plan. Actually, since a team needs eight points to win a series, the best-of-seven arrangement is theoretically still in effect. Previously at the end of seven games, the teams are tied with seven points each, an eighth contest will be staged.

No one has said what happens if the teams are still tied after the eighth game — each with the required number of points.

It all ties with the curfew law in that while two 30-minute overtime periods are allowed the game and on a sudden death basis and in any event must terminate "not later than 11:45 p.m." Previously any number of overtime periods were permitted on the sudden death basis. Overtime was eliminated from league play three years ago.

The "limited overtime" system appeared in the 1918-17 season and its development involved a complicated method of calculating club standing. It was the change in manner of overtime that compelled the loop to abandon the system used by basing on percentages basis.

A penalty to the late George Vezina, goaling star of Montreal Canadiens, brought about adoption of limited overtime in the days of the National Hockey Association, forerunner of the N.H.L. Prior to that, all games were played to a finish.

An eight-club league in 1926 saw teams scheduled to play 60 successive nights frequently, and so the limited overtime league play was introduced. Wartime transportation problems 14 years later brought elimination of overtime in league play, while this year's curfew in the United States brings it completely to an end.

The Pacific Coast has been the scene of the annual conventions only twice, in San Francisco in 1916 and on Catalina Island in 1926. The site of the June meeting has not been decided, but if the war is still on by next December the gathering is expected to be restricted to the minimum necessary for business only. WILLIE HOPPE ADDS HIGH-RUN RECORD TO LIST

Knocks Off 20 Straight Three-Cushion Caroms to Beat 1919 Mark

By DAVE O'HARA
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

Boston, March 22. (AP) — The Willie Hoppe now 57, admits his years, but nothing else.

Currently playing Welker Cochran in a three-cornered tourney for the world's three-cushion championship, Willie Hoppe, the one artist who has held that crown in billiard title the game has to offer, ran off 20 straight points yesterday to better the 17-year mark set by Jake Schaefer in 1919 and equalled by the same player in 1941.

Also in an interview, Willie was asked how he felt about continuing his competition, considered pointing out that every time he has been announced that the champion fans have remarked, "He's all through."

The master of the cue grinned, admitted his years and quickly added:

"Sure I'm getting older but I think I'll play another year or so."

And who does he think were the two best players he has ever faced?

Welker Cochran, only man to have defeated Hoppe for championship four times, and John Schaefer, who gave me many a thrill in the series of matches with him.

Since winning his first title—the 18.1 balkline championship from Maurice Vignaux in 1906 at Paris—Willie had held the world's every title except the high-run record he broke yesterday.

DETROIT WINGS BACK ON HEELS AFTER BOSTON WIN

Detroit, March 22 —(AP)— Detroit Red Wings, thrown back on their heels in the first round Stanley Cup hockey series opener, by a surprising smooth and tough Boston Bruin team, attempt to even the count at a game apiece at Detroit tonight before the scene shifts to Boston for two games.

Adams said he would use the same lineup that dropped a 4-2 decision to the Bruins Tuesday night, playing Ted Kindrat at left wing on his top line with veterans Syd Howe and Mel Pearson. The latter failed to connect for any of the three Detroit goals, but in the late stages of the game it kept the Bruins busy on defence and forced goalie Paul Bibeault to make some fast saves.

The Bruins, slated at their first playoff victory over Detroit since 1941, expressed confidence that they would be able to hold the advantage and eliminate the Red Wings from the cup chase.

After tonight's game the teams play at Boston Sunday and Tuesday in the third and fourth games of the best-of-seven series.

LESSON NO. 627
BY SAM GORDON
The Editor

An idea worth laying waste is how to know when you may bid the slam suit again. How would you like to lay those stones for her? Under what circumstances?

If you bid a suit it must be biddable; G 7 3 2, or J 5 4 3 2, or Y 9 8 4 3 2, or better. Such a suit must be bid most times it is overbidden by an opponent.

Although partner assisted your suit you must know your pair has enough strength between you. Therefore, even if it is only biddable, you may bid it again and again if you have extra values for raises.

If partner has not assisted your once-bid suit, you must not bid it again unless it is rebiddable. To be rebiddable, a suit must have an honor card or two small cards in addition to biddable.

Examples: The biddable suit is Q J 10 3 2, or J 10 5 4 3 2, or better. And a rebiddable suit is K Q J 10 3 2, or Q J 10 5 4 3 2, or better.

A demand for support for a biddable suit is Q 3 2, or 5 4 3 2, or better; for a rebiddable suit only, two small card, Q 7, or 4 3 2; for a rebiddable suit, one less small card, Q or 2 5.

Take this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♥ A Q J 10 8 3

♥ 7 6 4 2
♦ K 10 9 8 3
♣ A K 10 6 4 2

South has a re-rebiddable diamond suit, a biddable heart suit (not rebiddable), support for a rebiddable club suit, no spade support.

North has a rebiddable club suit (not re-rebiddable), support for a biddable heart suit, support for a re-rebiddable diamond suit, but not enough for support in spades.

I never bid the sort who rates without support.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, March 22 (AP)—The American Trainers Association has offered three recent suggestions for the improvement of horse racing—and not one was "let it start again" ...The horsemen propose more right qualifications for obtaining a license to train horses; a move to encourage stables in developing jockeys and better fire prevention around the stables...Maybe the first of these three will accomplish the purpose, but this corner might add that that training would do well to make sure they didn't start any horses that weren't fit or don't have a chance to win—and thus keep the public from burning up.

GRAYDON FAVORS PARTICIPATION IN CONFERENCE

Sees "Slight" in Mr. King's Calling Out Bracken as Selection

By JAMES O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 22 (CP)—Around the World Security debate in the House of Commons participation in the San Francisco World Security Conference, expression of opinion by Canada's delegation that the date was premature, and the opposition of another member to participation in the conference were the main developments yesterday in the World Security debate in the Commons.

Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House Leader, placed the party on record in support of the Dominion's participation in the conference, but expressed dissatisfaction with the government's decision to make the Canadian delegation which will include opposition members.

Graydon Calls it Premature.

T. R. Church (PC-Toronto Broadview) said that Canada (and Tamiscamata) said they believed that the conference was premature and should not be held until monetary, economic, trade and disarmament problems had been concluded.

Wilfrid Lacroix (Ind.-Quebec-Montmorency) said he would vote for Canada's participation in the conference because he believed it his duty to prevent Canada from being drawn into another war and because he wished to protest against Russian annexation of parts of Poland and the Balkans.

Mr. Graydon termed as "an unprovoked slight" Prime Minister Mackenzie King's calling out the possibility of John Bracken, National Progressive Conservative Leader, going to San Francisco.

He believed that the Canadian delegation should be broadly representative, but cautioned that Canada's position might be lost in her rivalries with the British Commonwealth and the United States because her friendship with the United States.

"Nothing done by this nation at the coming conference should in any way must endanger our close ties with the British Commonwealth and Empire," said Mr. Graydon. "These ties must be strengthened rather than relaxed in the days that lie ahead."

Each Commonwealth, with its broad international experience, would be of much as effective in peace as it had in war. Though adverse to war, Canada had played a big part in the last war and will be in the next.

Canada's Part in Peace

"Canada," said Mr. Graydon, "would be willing to share with all nations other than the great powers in the charges to make its contribution to the maintenance of peace, and this must be considered when the question is placed before the conference by our delegates."

The Dominion was justly entitled to have the right to choose its own delegates to the conference, said Mr. Graydon, and he hoped that the King had gone pretty far in ruling out the possibility of choosing Mr. Bracken, "a prospective prime minister."

Mr. Slaght said he was at a loss to why Mr. Bracken should go to the conference. In the last two years, instead of being a leader in the Commons, Mr. Bracken had travelled up and down the country making political speeches.

The Prime Minister had not taken time out from his war duties to play politics, said Mr. Slaght who suggested that the home of the new World Security organization should be established in Canada.

No Parliament Yet

Mr. Graydon said that when the delegation would go to the conference there would be no parliament. A new parliament would have to approve the delegation's actions. There was little possibility of the present government controlling the new parliament.

"I suggest, therefore, that the delegation cannot be confined to representatives of parties sitting in a present parliament," he said.

"It should be enlarged to give proper representation to such sections of Canada as agriculture, labor, veterans of the war, the professions or veterans of this, as well as industry and business."

Suggesting that Canada should have a separate minister of external affairs, Mr. Graydon said that why would have been advisable if the San Francisco conference had been postponed until after the war with Germany had been won. He believed that trade, economic, diplomatic and foreign agreements should be worked out prior to a security conference.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop got some more answers in the mail this morning. Some people trying to win the prize of $6.10 for best line. Here's the set 3/4 of Cousin Oscar. Him still snoring asleep up in the guest room, and Mom still not speaking friendly of anything yet, William!

Not six cents and 20 cents worth pop said. By golies Oscar himself ought to know more about the subject than anybody. Maybe I can get him to hold his own trap and dig his own pitfal, he said.

And tonight at supper Cousin Oscar was telling advice as much as anybody else twice as fast, and pop said, Oscar, if you can't mind your using a long word, I'm going to ask you to hypothecate the butter.

Of course naturally we're very fond of you, Oscar, and we find your little ways very amusing and it's a great treat to have you around, but just supposing you was a goof who was always getting in our hair and on our nerves and under our feet? What measures would you suggest in a case like that, Oscar? pop said.

Well, a citizen like that would have to be handled very special, Cousin Oscar said. I wouldn't get ruff with him because the dum peloks would just sweetly turn the other cheek and let you get ruff soon like wasn't fair. I'd ask them to kill him with kindness. I'd serve him his favorite dishes and throw parties for him and cater to all his whims and he would be said, and pop said, Oh I see, instead of smiting him on the cheek you'd kiss him on the cheek.

That's the idea, and he'd be so overcome with gratitude he'd turn the other cheek so far that he'd scare him away for good. Maybe all that you'd see of him, Oscar said, pop pop said, Quite an idea by golies.

My goodness yes, for land sakes, he said.

Being the end of the subject.

THE SECRET OF THE MARSHBANKS

CHAPTER 24

It was all clear now, with a hundred other little things. Of course Cherry could only listen wide-eyed until Kelly went on. "That last night," she was saying, "Rousseau was in a fury because the judge had told him that he must be prompter when they called him. He and Fran had been off all day—heaven knows where! And then to have to turn back into servant again, to dress them in Burlingame and wait, with the other chauffeurs—it was too much for him! He was beside himself with his idolatry of her, he couldn't bear the thought of her living down there with her husband, dancing being admired, perhaps spending the night at the Club. He's only a young boy, of course, and the tastes of luxury that Fran gave him demoralized him, of course. She brought him silk shirts, extravagant bathing robes and neckties, gave him money. . ."

"He said his mother was rich and ran a big hotel and she sent them to him?" Mary put in. She had come in to light Cherry's lamps.

"That night the judge asked me to take his revolver and clean it," Kelly said, "improved him for lashes, and I told him that he and Mrs. Marshbanks were going on a little holiday to Mexico City and would not take him or the car. The poor young fool blurted out that he loved her; that she had belonged to him for months that he was going to give up his position and find work worthy of her. He says the judge jumped at him across the desk, and had a fit of fury. It may have happened that way."

"Fran!" Cherry gasped. The older woman was apparently incapable of speech.

"Fran knew immediately," Kelly went on. "She heard their voices and was halfway down the stairs when the end came. Rousseau only had to slip out, go to his room over the garage, partly undress and come running in with the others, as he did. By that time she'd pushed into the library and, I suppose, wiped the gun on her dressing gown with the feeling that there might be fingerprints on it."

"He was one person we never thought of because he was here, right under our eyes," Cherry marvelled.

"Driving the authorities to and fro, never looking at her or speaking to her; that's all with a nod. "But the police have been much less blind than we thought they were. They've been watching him for some time, and some of those other clues and blind leads were to make him feel he wasn't under suspicion."

"But Kelly, whatever made them first suspect him? What gave him away?"

"One thing, they said, and then when they began to smell a rat, everything else fell in line. Especially when they planted him."

"And that was the plant?"

"That's asking Fran, that's as a plant to see what he'd do. He loves her, you know, and the minute he thought she was in trouble he began all sorts of manœuvers to draw them off. He forged a strange Chinese world been hanging around the house. Also invented a telephone call that he'd taken that evening at eight o'clock. He made the conversation with the judge that he'd had in which the judge said that Mrs. Marshbanks and Fran were going to Mexico City. Then he gave the impression that he was going to give up his position and find work worthy of her. He says the judge jumped at him across the desk, and had a fit of fury. It may have happened that way."

"Fran!" Cherry gasped. The older woman was apparently incapable of speech.

Want Police? Then Call 123

In accordance with a suggestion made at the Canadian Police Constables' Association annual meeting last summer the police telephone call number in Belleville has been changed to 123, it is learned. In fact Bell Telephone Company employees have been busy for the past two days installing a two-line telephone condominium into the city police station so that in the event one line is busy police may be contacted on a second line. Number is "123."

"It was proposed at last Summer's Police Constables' Association meeting that whenever possible the telephone number 123 should be used for the city police telephone number. This would establish a standard police phone number in Ontario. Already other cities in Ontario, following the suggestion and others have long since established this standard number. It is also said today Belleville joined these ranks to assist in the co-operation of police service to the public", explained Chief R. J. Wilson. Sergeant Geo. N. Gorman (Realtor), 166 Front St., Phone 99. M21-21

Garage Operators Meet at "Y"

With one of the best attendances in months being featured, members of the Belleville Automotive Garage Operators' Association held their regular monthly dinner meeting at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday evening. Attendance at the meeting was 66 members, it was stated.

President Percy Hall presided over the meeting and congratulated attendance officials. Secretary-Treasurer William Hopkins for his efforts in getting members out to the meetings.

Question of towing rates again came up for discussion, however no definite action being taken other than to discuss them. The new printed rates as proposed by the provincial organization be mailed to each of the local members. These rates would be to serve only as a guide with no regulation that would be followed to the letter.

A. J. Trousdale, vice-president of the provincial organization reported on the last directors' meeting. He said that the estimated number of members for the year would be approximately 1,000 and that the organization was now in a position to act in the interests of operators. Financial report of the legal branch was also submitted by Mr. Trousdale.

Allis-Chalmers pictures of the Alaska Highway were shown by the company representative, Mr. J. Beatty, general sales manager, and Mr. Bailey, factory representative. Appreciation of the members was expressed to the speakers.

Father in Switzerland Writes to Son Here

From a tiny hotel in Brienbach, a small village nestling near the blue waters of Switzerland's Lake Zurich, comes a letter of cheer to Belleville.

It was mailed in the first week in October, 1939, and received in Belleville late in January. It was addressed in faultless German to Mr. Jimmy Corradi, Corradi, Well-known local artist and musician and was written by Mr. Corradi's father, Mr. Charles Corradi. It was mailed from Switzerland to Consular headquarters, and was censored by British officials.

In pasting it might be mentioned that the last letter received by Mr. Corradi from his father was dated one-half years ago, bore a German censor mark. This letter received in January bore three Swiss air mail stamps and was postmarked on the markings depict the progress during the past year of the Swiss air mail service.

The elderly Corradi who owns and operates a small tourist hotel in Brienbach, writes that business is at a very low ebb. There is no holiday travel in Switzerland due to the war, and all the guests who have been called to the colors and are on duty guarding the boundary many frontiers.

He is anticipating the end of the war when trade will once more begin in Switzerland, and when he hopes to receive a meeting in Paris with his son.

Police Blotter

City police removed a 1941 model Nash sedan, bearing licence plate number 66-35-42, from off Dufferin Ave., where it had been parked for over 24 hours. Investigations later disclosed the sedan had been stolen in Toronto last Monday night and abandoned in Belleville. The car is being held for Toronto police, Provincial Traffic Sector Cst. Ross Hall reported.

Cst. Ross Hall, 352 West Moira Street had his motor car parked in front of the Cities Service station. Upon returning it was found the body of the vehicle had been damaged. At 1944 A.M. police were notified and investigations indicated that apparently a truck had backed into the parked car during the absence of the occupants.

RAWDON

Normal Conditions Prevail After Severe Winter

Rawdon — During the past week the snow disappeared like magic. Main day roads, green grass was visible, frogs were croaking, and the balmy days were a great saving of fuel. Caterpillars, snakes, cabbage moths and a large variety of birds were observed. Here and there were little rivulets all wending their way to the river.

The third concession were delighted to have the mail courier pay them a visit on March 19th, this being the first trip made by Mr. Keowns and Wrightsmans since December 19th and three months has been a long stay.

Visit at Fourth Concession

The fourth concession folk have also emerged from the likeness of a frozen tundra. Whitetail deer, flanks disappeared and motor travel was again resumed with trucks and cars travelling past Irvin Reith's over the portion of road which was closed to motor traffic for several weeks. The mail courier also delivered the mail five days last week from White's to Andrew's. It is hoped to have daily mail now for a few months. While folks have a great deal for which to be thankful for living in Canada, still many of the people living on the back concessions are particularly thankful when the winter is finished. It is certainly a treat to shovel snow by the hour every time one finds it necessary to travel to town.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

WING CDR. R.C.A.F. Overseas March 18 (CP)—One by one the crew of a supply-dropping Dakota aeroplane on one engine and lost in bad weather on the way back to the mountainous Indo-Burmese border, parachuted over the Chindwin River until it was the aeroplane's turn.

By then the Dakota was out of control and plunging down through the dense overcast. Both Ldr. L. R. Denison of Winnipeg and Flight Lieut. Alf Stone in the plane, found his parachute hanging safely about the crew compartment.

Finally he grabbed it, then had to crawl the length of the steep fuselage on his hands and knees to reach the escape hatch, and dip himself out.

He slid all his crew landed in the river but the current washed them ashore rapidly. All were united next day at a native village after spending the night wrapped in the parachutes for warmth.

With two engines knocked out wings shaky and the intercommunication system destroyed, F/O D. R. Paige of Lennoxville, Que. managed to pilot his plane behind Japanese lines before ordering abandonment of the ship after dropping bombs on Florabin, big Japanese supply river road junction targets.

Per forty miles the aircraft lost height steadily. F/O Sgt. John Bentley of Manchester, England the wireless operator, acted as messenger between the pilot and the two gunners and despite burned hands, broke open the doors of the crash-damaged turret and assisting F/L Sgt. R. J. McHorie of Halifax, back to safety.

Injured during the operation were F/L Sgt. McHorie and the navigator, W/O. J. P. Sullivan of Kingston, Ont., who broke an ankle in a rough landing.

Fo. Thomas W. Read of Toronto had dropped 10,000 paratroopers during three years' overseas as a drop-carrier pilot, but now he waits for "drop him on" hometown for a change." He's going to get his wish for he's now at a repatriation depot.

"What amazes me," he said, "is that a paratrooper can be fully trained in 21 days." Read said it possible to train 1,000 men a month under ideal conditions.

Now 26 and a graduate of the paratroopers, Read explained he said that while dropping his 10,000 men he never saw a parachute fail to open.

Three Torontonians were first, second and third prizes in the R.C.A.F. March Veterans' Association poster competition. First prize went to F/L L.A.C. H. E. Dafoe, stationed with the Canadian bomber group in Britain. Second prize winner was F/O L. O. Bennett and third-prize winner L.A.C. D. MacPherson.

MONTY READY FOR CROSSING OF RHINE—NAZIS DREW GOVT. DEFEATED ON C.C.F. AMENDMENT

Province Faces Prospect Second Election in 2 Years

First Time Any Ont. Govt. Has Lost on Confidence Vote

Toronto, March 22 — (CP) — Ontario today faces the prospect of its second election in two years, equal to the defeat last night by a one-30 vote of Premier Drew's 38-month-old Progressive Conservative government on a C.C.F. amendment to the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

That an election will follow the government's defeat was indicated by Premier Drew in his 45-minute speech, which wound up the debate. After adjournment he declined to comment saying it was a matter of statement. It would be issued until after a cabinet meeting today.

It was the first thing in the history of Ontario that a government has lost on a vote of confidence vote. The decisive division came one minute before midnight on the first day of the second session of the 21st Legislature. A few minutes earlier a Liberal sub-amendment to the address had been defeated by a 32-28 margin.

The House adjourned until next Tuesday and there was speculation in many quarters that it might clear up some unfinished business, especially Time Allocation Act still in committee stage, before final adjournment and the anticipated dissolution.

T.B. Jolliffe, C.C.F. leader, said afterwards that "the people will vote for them" but he declined further comment. Liberal House leader Mitchell Hepburn could not be reached.

A Forgone Conclusion

The government's defeat was almost a foregone conclusion. Remarks in the afternoon the 16 Liberal members present met with the C.C.F. in voting for the C.C.F. amendment. Harry C. Nixon, Ontario Liberal leader and member for Brant, made it still more certain during the debate when he said the tense House had the equally tense galleries crowded with nearly 800 person — that he was in accord with the C.C.F. amendment and would vote with it.

The division bells rang at 11:47 p. m. and three minutes later all but two of the 90 members of the House were in their seats. The major members were Dr. Hobbs Taylor (PC) — Huron; Who is 83 — Sedn. Lt.-Col. Wilfrid Wilson (CCF — Toronto Riverdale) who is over-seas. They were saluted in the division.

The 16 Liberals, 15 C.C.F. members, the two Labor Progressives and the two Independents voted for the amendment. Supporting the 38 government members — Speaker W. J. Stewart — the House was divided by 16 of the C.C.F. members.

The 21 C.C.F members were Edwin Hall, Leader of the Labor-Progressives and the Independents in their support of the C.C.F. amendment by agreement the government motion to amend the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne was considered defeated by 51-34.

Taken in Good Humor.

Loud dust-thumping from many parts of the House greeted the result of the division on the C.C.F. amendment which Premier Drew said earlier he would accept as a motion of non-confidence in the administration. As soon took the result high humor. One C.C.F. member grinned. Conservative member was heard to shout above the general din to Liberal members in front of him one a job on your farm, Mitch?"

Suggestion that the House adjourn until Tuesday came from Mr. Jolliffe and the Premier agreed. Both sought to move the adjournment and Premier Drew's motion stood. "I'm not sure," You're not here and you're never going to be here, I move that the House do now adjourn" remark was taken in political circles to mean that the Premier would recommend to Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews that the House be dissolved and an election held. There was no indication when would recommend Mr. Jolliffe as leader of the second largest group, be called on to form a government.

GUIMARAS ISLAND OPPOSITE PANAY ALSO CAPTURED

27th Island Invasion by Americans Made With No Opposition

Manila, March 23—(AP)—Seizure of little Guimaras Island across a narrow strait from the captured port of Iloilo on southeastern Panay, was announced today as heavy bombers stepped up their pounding of Cebu, one of the two major Philippine Islands still in Japanese hands.

The U. S. 6th Division, which invaded Panay Sunday and overran Iloilo and an important airdrome, hopped across the 1 1/2-mile channel Wednesday to take 2E-mile Guimaras without opposition. It was the 27th island invasion of the Philippines campaign.

Twelve small freight vessels and four landing craft were sunk in the China Sea as patrol bombers maintained their fight blockade of the Philippines, the U.S. 22nd Division reaching within 10 miles of Bacolod, 90 miles south of Iloilo.

Allies Can Cross Rhine Anywhere At Any Time

12th Army Group Headquarters, March 23 (AP.—The Allies now can cross the Rhine "most anywhere" at any time," Gen. Omar N. Bradley said today.

"The necessity of keeping the (Remagen) bridgehead small no longer applies," he said. "The Army group commander told correspondents at a press review at Allied victory in the Rhineland in which his 1st and 3rd armies took part.

Gen. Bradley said the 1st Army's Remagen salient had been "purposely held back from full development until the operations of the 3rd and 7th Armies could be completed."

"The American losses have been light," Gen. Bradley said. His remarks suggested that conditions now permit a rapid development of the river without allowing the usual pause after a crossing while forces rest, refitting and regrouping.

Terrific Devastation by Air Attacks On Germany Beyond Comprehension

By HENRY R. JAMESON

London, March 23 — (AP) — Continuous day and night bombing of Germany at the rate of 274 tons of explosives an hour is turning the country into chaos in preparation for a knockout blow from the ground.

Since the big aerial offensive started three weeks ago, Allied bombers have hit Germany with more than twice the tonnage of bombs dropped in the whole year at the start of the war.

The result is devastation is almost beyond comprehension, but the relentless flailing of every type of military objective from the small-est crossroads to Berlin itself unquestionably is paying off in the greater for Allied ground troops.

Germany's oil production is at the lowest level since Hitler's forces set out on their disastrous road of conquest, it was announced at Allied supreme headquarters in Paris.

As a result of ceaseless Allied bombing, oil output has sunk to an estimated 17,000 tons a month, or only nine per cent of the production rate at the time air attacks on the Reich began in the autumn of April.

During the past 10 days of this greatest air blitz in history the industrial Ruhr valley and the war-rolling Rhine Plain have been systematically isolated from the rest of Germany and deprived of all but highway movement necessary to resist a full-scale ground assault. As the great bombardment reaches its apex its chief characteristic is the tremendous disorganizing effect that it has had upon communications and upon the fighting spirit of the German people.

Figures on the number of planes participating in the attacks reached astronomical figures. When the Germans put 600 aircraft over London in September, it was considered a big effort. Now the prospect of the second time the election in two years, equal to the defeat last night by a one-30 vote of Premier Drew's 38-month-old Progressive Conservative government on a C.C.F. amendment to the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne.

Bush Aside German Resistance Seeking To Bar Way Into Czechoslovakia

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, March 23 — (AP)—Advancing into the Bohemian mountains northeast and east of Prague, Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st Ukraine Army Group today steadily brushed aside German resistance seeking to bar the way into Czechoslovakia.

Moving westward and northwestward in southeastern Germany on an 80-mile front following a big break-through, he captured last night by a salute by Moscow's victory guns, his troops were within striking distance of five big cities — Neisse, Sagan, Liegnitz, Hirschberg and Hatibor.

They already have captured the war production city of Neustadt in industrial Upper Silesia, killed or captured 45,000 German troops in a trap forged by twin advances of 26 miles, and advanced along both sides of the Czechoslovakian border.

Storm units were reported fighting in the streets of Neisse after pushing forward from captured Stephansdorf, three miles northeast of the city. Neisse lies 43 miles southwest of Gorlitz, Oder river city. Konev's offensive swept forward yesterday ago, west and south of Oppeln, 47 miles southeast of Breslau.

Frankenstein, on the direct westward route toward Prague, appeared next of the cities which may see before the Red Army, for the German strong out in the border of Mutnesberg, 10 miles to the east, offering a sharp series of counter-attacks.

The division bells rang at 11:47 p. m. and three minutes later all but two of the 90 members of the House were in their seats. The major members were Dr. Hobbs Taylor (PC) — Huron; Who is 83 — Sedn. Lt.-Col. Wilfrid Wilson (CCF — Toronto Riverdale) who is over-seas. They were saluted in the division.

The 16 Liberals, 15 C.C.F. members, the two Labor Progressives and the two Independents voted for the C.C.F. amendment. Supporting the 38 government members — Speaker W. J. Stewart — the House was divided by 16 of the C.C.F. members.

The 21 C.C.F members were Edwin Hall, Leader of the Labor-Progressives and the Independents in their support of the C.C.F. amendment by agreement the government motion to amend the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne was considered defeated by 51-34.

Taken in Good Humor.

Loud dust-thumping from many parts of the House greeted the result of the division on the C.C.F. amendment which Premier Drew said earlier he would accept as a motion of non-confidence in the administration. As soon took the result high humor. One C.C.F. member grinned. Conservative member was heard to shout above the general din to Liberal members in front of him one a job on your farm, Mitch?"

Suggestion that the House adjourn until Tuesday came from Mr. Jolliffe and the Premier agreed. Both sought to move the adjournment and Premier Drew's motion stood. "I'm not sure," You're not here and you're never going to be here, I move that the House do now adjourn" remark was taken in political circles to mean that the Premier would recommend to Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews that the House be dissolved and an election held. There was no indication when would recommend Mr. Jolliffe, as leader of the second largest group, be called on to form a government.

NEW TEN-TON COOKIE TAKES A DIVOT

You can get a rough idea of the hole made in the face of mother earth by the explosion of one of the R.A.F.'s new ten-ton bombs by looking at the size of the man standing in the crater made by one of these cookies at the Ministry of Aircraft Production experimental area, England. These bombs have been used already on German railway viaducts.

COMMONS HEARS POLISH APPEAL IN SECURITY DEBATE

Conservatives Urge That Commonwealth be Regarded as Third World Power

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 23 —(CP)— Argument as to whether Canada should enter a new ward security organization as a unit of the British Commonwealth or as an independent nation featured the first full-dress debate yesterday in Commons, which heard one member protest against the treatment of Poland at the recent Yalta conference.

Progressive Conservative speakers urged that the British Commonwealth be regarded as the third world power and accorded a permanent seat in the security council of the proposed international peace organization.

This suggestion, brought from Dr. J. J. McCann (L-Renfrew) the report that if such a course was followed "we would once again revert to colonial status."

"I am not sure," said His remarks suggested that conditions now permit a rapid development of the river without allowing the usual pause after a crossing while forces rest, refitting and regrouping.

There was grave concern as to whether Poland was to have a government of its people's choosing or one imposed by Russia. He asked (this Canadian government "use its influence to bring about a review of the Crimean conference decisions and to act in protection of the rights of Poland."

The remarks drew applause from Conservatives and Arthur Roebuck (L-Toronto Trinity) said he wished to associate himself with the sentiments expressed by Dr. McCann.

BLAZING MASS WRECKAGE MARKS RECORD ASSAULT

Eleven Railyards in Ruhr Attacked by 1,250 Bombers And Bremen Bridge Hit

London, March 22 — (CP) — Thousands of R.A.F. and American planes lashed out today for the 3rd day as the Ruhr, where a blazing mass of wreckage marked the record assault of yesterday.

Again the fury of the assault was concentrated on eight lines with the presumed object of isolating the industrial area and the Rhine, along which powerful Allied armies are massed.

Eleven railyards in the Ruhr were attacked in bright weather by 1,250 American and British bombers, and fighters while a force of R.A.F. Lancasters went after the important road bridge at Bremen with 11-ton volcano bombs.

The German radio said new waves of bombers were over the northern area of the Reich tonight and that American heavies from Italy flew into southeastern Germany.

Reports Intercepted.

All German radio telegraphic and news services appeared to be operating and military reports were interrupted for several hours, Transocean's broadcasting service were shut down completely for all but 30 minutes during the afternoon session of the German communique.

Reports intercepted by the Americans included Canabruck, Rhine, Muenster, and Coesfeld all north of the Ruhr; Hachlinghausen and Gladbeck in the Ruhr, and Hengelo, Holland, Rheine, Lingen, Bielefeld and Siegen in the east and south Ruhr.

A special communique from headquarters of United States strategic air forces declared all nine German army camps attacked in the Ruhr yesterday by American heavy bombers were wrecked by 3,200 tons of bombs.

Thousands of small incendiaries also were showered among German troops.

At least three airfields used by jet-propelled fighters were made unserviceable, the communique said. Berlin was bombed for the 31st consecutive night by R.A.F. Mosquitoes.

Fighters reported the heaviest blows at enemy troop movements since the Rhine is the region that lured yesterday by the bulk of more than 2,000 Allied planes in the greatest assault of the war.

The night pilots said smoke from the fires burning on the east bank of the Ruhr it was difficult to locate ground targets, and bright moonlight made British and American night attacks, would face his first great test of strength against concentrations in the west either north of the Ruhr or in that great industrial area.

The 1st Canadian, British 2nd and U.S. 3rd armies were in massed might along the lower Rhine, getting ready for the big push west and up to 75 —feet deep between Duesseldorf and Arnhem. The German high command spoke of the U.S. 1st army were there as well; there was no suggestion from either side of the whereabouts of the U.S. 15th and the Allied 1st airborne armies.

Fighting was centered on the lower Rhine, was learned by Berlin the United States already declared.

Nazi Times.

The Germans were tense as fields dispatches told of their reports of the northern front were confused and contradictionary. Shortly after midnight, Berlin said the 9th British and Canadians launched an all-out assault, but the Germans reported "no important developments" but added there were indications this heavy enemy within the shortest time possible would launch his principle attack to gain the right bank of the Rhine. Then further reports said the attacks had already been started.

In the absence of coment in Allied or enemy communique, it was impossible to divine the truth as to assertions. Only the terse reports came from the 21st army group that there were spots only of patrol.

At the underbelly of the Ruhr, the U.S. 1st army's cross-Rhine assault cleared Hessel on the Sieg river nine miles east of the Rhine. Its hold on the Sieg river in the Hilde area lengthened to nine miles. On the Sieg, the 1st army was 7 miles from Siegburg and 10 from Bonn.

Patten Ready for Crossing.

Gen. Germans Lt.-Gen. Patton's 3rd Army had massed amphibious tanks for an imminent crossing of the Rhine from the Palatinate. The 1st Army drive up the Rhine to facilitate such a move.

Lt.-Gen. Hodges' army captured more than a score of towns and villages in the past 24 hours and strengthened his front beyond the river over pontoon bridges, a Saltzy dispatch to Berlin said.

The first wave of German reinforcements to reach the Remagen bridgehead had fallen off and the stand around the salient in inner Germany was, deteriorating slowly.

The 90th Division cleared Mains and captured 2,000 Germans. The 89th Division drove with a seven-mile advance west of Bad Duerkheim. More than 2,000, Patton's 3rd Army has counted 57,909 German prisoners captured in 11 days and had many more to be processed. The U.S. 7th Army on the Rhine had a large but not officially announce its size.

Infantrymen still were mopping up the chemical capital of Ludwigshafen (161,411) after capturing the vast I. G. Farbenindustrie plant along the Rhine.

The jaws of the 3rd and 7th armies were tight upon the last German bridgehead on the east of the Rhine, bridgeless in that sector.

Underground Nazi Factory Carved Out of Solid Mountain Rock Captured

By HAL BOYLE

With the U.S. 3rd Army Across the Rhine, March 23 — (AP) — A huge $1,000,000 underground German factory, carved out of solid mountain rock has been captured by infantrymen who found it crowded with 1,500 German civilians and prisoners of war.

For 11 days, huddled miserably together like cattle, they waited in the dark caverns for the end of the battle to pass them by after discovering that American troops had overrun the area.

The factory, blasted out of sheer cliffs in the Rhine hills near the town of Koenigswinter, manufactured pumps for heavy German army vehicles and Focke-Wulf-190 fighter planes. Some of them had been moved into — finally going underground to escape Allied bombings.

Troops of the U. S. 13th Infantry Division discovered the underground plant after a civilian told them of its existence.

"This has been as near to hell as I ever hope to see," said an English-speaking German woman, who asserted the 2,000 persons crowded into the caves had been anxiously waiting the entire 11 days for the Americans to arrive.

She said one baby had been born in the caves and another child committed suicide with poison.

"I was ordered two weeks ago to destroy the machinery and to bring my foreign workers farther into the mountain," said Otto Kalb, factory owner told American officers, "but I hid my workers from the Gestapo and waited for you to come up this side of the Rhine."

Soldiers found the cave penetrated 1,200 feet into the hillside and was 250 feet wide in some places.

Berlin Says Smoke Screens Cover Allied Movement

Four Armies and Tanks Massed West of Wesel

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, March 22 — (AP) — Berlin radio said shortly after noon today that Field Marshal Montgomery "seems to be ready" for a great assault crossing of the lower Rhine on a smoke-shrouded 45-mile flat Allied front from Duesseldorf to Arnhem, where German targets are blasted by massed artillery and bombers.

An earlier enemy report said assault crossings already had been started. Allied Supreme Headquarters maintained silence; front line war correspondents were cramped by security regulations.

The German High Command, in its communique broadcast shortly after 1:30 p.m., said smoke screens and artillery fire had Field Marshal Montgomery's "offensive preparations" and that Allied reconnaissance patrols in Holland had "failed."

The communique said American forces had tried to cross the Rhine from the Remagen area, but had been driven back midway between Worms and Ludwigshafen, on the Palatinate. There was no Allied confirmation. Berlin said, however, that Gen. Patton had massed amphibious tanks for a crossing effort.

Capture Wesel.

Far to the south in the closing battle of the Saarland and Palatinate which has cost the German army more than 100,000 prisoners since Feb. 23rd the Americans captured Mainz (pop. 149,000), capital of Hesse, and the fighting had come to Worms (34,960).

Between these fronts, U. S. 1st army troops east of the Rhine captured the factory city of Neuwied (30,320), on the Rhine eight miles northwest of Coblenz, and widened their front to 15 miles and deepened it at places to nine.

Eight miles and into the dawn of another bright bombing day, Allied planes hit the massed armies and attacks on the 50-mile Bremen box north of the Ruhr and east of the Rhine and Wesel, where the Germans said the Allies had massed the greatest armored force of four armies.

Correspondents at Allied Supreme Headquarters were told, however, that there was no change in the tactical situation in the 21st Army front, but there was intensive fighting and forts were taken in the Ruhr by both sides.

Front dispatches strikingly evidenced the Allied Supreme Commander's strategy of isolating the industrial Ruhr by Montgomery and Patten Ready for Crossing.

Gen. Germans Lt.-Gen. Patton's 3rd Army had massed amphibious tanks for an imminent crossing of the Rhine from the Palatinate. The 1st Army drive up the Rhine to facilitate such a move.

The jaws of the 3rd and 7th armies were tight upon the last German bridgehead on the east of the Rhine, bridgeless in that sector.

LAWN REFUSE SHOULD BE PLACED AT CURB

City residents raking their front lawns and boulevards are advised by the city engineer's department to have the work completed by the end of the month when the city street cleaning crews will be scheduled to commence. If all refuse from the front of premises is raked into piles at the curbside by this date there will be no necessity of cleaning equipment to make a return trip.

Red Cross Aids War Homeless In Europe

In six weeks 4,346 tons of relief clothing, food and medicine were sent by Canadian Red Cross to liberated Europe, Norman H. Ragsdale, Red Cross commissioner with headquarters in newly liberated people stand in queues need of this help. As their wants are struck, the commissioner reports, they thank their donators on the helpless population of each town and country. They are sending the looty into Germany. They are delivered, incidentally, without cost. Men, able to work were shipped off for slave labor in the fields.

In a recent report from one of the liberated areas comes this statement: "All is confusion, chaos and desolation. The task of relief in this kind of refugees and there are about 30,000 more starving in for whom shelter must be provided. There are now 9 to 10 people in each house. Everything is needed, foods and food is scarce. All boats have been destroyed, the railroads are pouring in, and there are impassable bridges all over. Everything is needed."

Five years of total war has exhausted food, clothing and medicine and the post-war condition of the children is especially pitiable. Starting with the Netherlands, sufficient proper foods they have been deprived of for years, tuberculosis is increasing with alarming rapidity. Canadian Red Cross has shipped large quantities of food, clothing, medicines and hospital supplies to Greece, Yugoslavia, the Netherlands, Belgium, Free France, Great Britain, and into France. Supplies continue to flow in. Over 1,000 tons of other forms of relief materials have already been received.

Organizations under trained Canadian Red Cross sisters workers look after the distribution in the worst of these cases. Organizations within the Canadian Red Cross commission also supplies when they come in.

Collaborating with the Canadian United Appeal Fund, which represents the war charities of eleven of the Dominion Provinces, Canadian Red Cross is engaged in shipping food, medicines and clothing as rapidly as transportation will permit.

Farmers Need Help of School Boys, Girls To Plant, Cultivate Crops

With expectation of the farm labor supply remaining critically short during the coming season, farmers in this district will be asked to release school boys and girls to plant, cultivate and harvest the crops, it is announced today by Hon. Leslie M. Frost, Ontario minister of agriculture.

The first word on the need for food both at home and abroad became apparent last year when provisions under which students were permitted to leave school and assist on farms were extended to include the whole month of June. Previously, students were limited to assisting on farms for the period of one month, or not less than 13 weeks.

For the coming season, it is expected that this will be further stiffened, their attendance in either a secondary or public school. Boards of education and principals are asked to make sure that no pupil registers for school until he has reached a standard recognized for admission to advanced courses such that they will suffer no serious handicap through their being released from school to assist on farms.

Many of the students who will be asked to leave school will be needed to assist in planning and harvesting will naturally go to work on neighboring farms, but the province needs not knowing their prospective employers, will be placed on the farms. It is recommended that advice be sought from the local high school principal or from the Ontario Farm Service Force Director at the Parliament buildings in Toronto.

Farms Available

Many agricultural farms will be placed available to school attendants from the people who may wish to take the chief responsibility for the duties. Those outside the province of Ontario will be required to register so as to be signed by the employer or placement officer and the length of time for which the service is required, and the wages, if any, to be paid. The certificate also specifies the number of hours per week or service to be signed.

Principals, teachers and high school assistants boards, while keeping in touch with the pupils who go to farms, are asked to assure themselves that the pupils concerned have reached a standard such that they will suffer no serious handicap on their return to school after the special course.

Students eligible to apply for permission to leave classes are those who have attained the required standards in high school entrance examinations, and who have completed their public school studies in collegiate.

Students who have reached the age of 16 may leave school to assist on farms in April 6th.

Jail Term Given Pair for Failing To Attend Parades

Refusing to pay fines levied against them after being convicted on four charges each of neglecting or refusing to attend parades of the Reserve Army here, Gnr. W. E. McCoy and Gnr. Cecil Woods of the 34th Battery, R.C.A. (R), were sentenced to seven days in jail by Magistrate T. Y. Wills today.

"They are merely trying to be defiant and self-styled heroes," commented His Worship as McCoy and Woods refused to pay a total of $20 and costs, as a fine of five dollars and costs was levied on each for the four cases presented against the men. They were convicted under the Military Act of neglecting or refusing to attend parades, which they both admitted.

"You have been convicted before on this count, Woods?" Magistrate Wills stated in a question directed to Woods, who answered in the affirmative.

"The act permits for no alternative than a fine of $5 and costs on each count, or a maximum jail term of, 60 days in default. I believe the consensus have been considered by all concerned," added His Worship as he passed sentence, the terms to run consecutively.

"Will they be discharged from the Battery after they serve their term?" asked Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan.

"No, sir," replied Capt. G. H. Carver, of the 34th Battery, R.C.A., who presented the charges. Capt. Riley, adjutant of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) acted as charging officer, while Lieut. Harold Kellar of the Battery was also present on behalf of the prosecutor.

McCoy's father informed the court his son had been rejected from the Canadian Army following his military call-up as medically unfit. Magistrate Wills pointed out this had no bearing in the Reserve Army program.

An indictable paid $13.00, while Lorne Bateman was sentenced to three months in the common jail after being convicted on a third offence L.C.A. count, all were local citizens.

"The court will give you until Tuesday to raise $62.50 or I will have the other alternative then to send you to jail for six months in default," His Worship warned Asseltine. White of this city, who appeared and pleaded guilty to a charge of purchasing one pair of petite dress trousers from a soldier, White had previously been warned to have the money today or face a mandatory sentence.

Robert Nolan, Leo Gauthier and Derwood Archer, three juveniles, paid $5.50 each after pleading guilty to charges of disorderly conduct, while C. Baker contributed $26.00 and costs following a careless driving count to conclude the morning's proceedings.

Toronto, March 23 — (CP) — Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews was reported today to have assured Premier Drew that he will dissolve the Ontario legislature and call a provincial election.

The report ended rumors that the Progressive Conservative Administration, first elected in 1934 and now serving for the C.O.F., the official opposition to Ottawa, is approaching.

Members To Draw Full Indemnity For 4 More Days

Toronto, March 23 — (CP) — When the 91 members of the opposition groups in the Ontario Legislature voted the $2,000 per year Progressive Conservative government into office last night, they did so at what could amount to a cost of more than $1,400 apiece — that is unless there is a move to have the Legislature sit four more days before final adjournment and the expected dissolution.

The sessional indemnity is $2,000 a member — providing the Legislature sits on 30 days. When the session falls short of 30 days they are paid $66 a day. So for the House sat 26 days since it opened Feb. 15. It has adjourned to next Tuesday, March 28, and will sit on a day. So the total for each member comes to $946. Just three days short of making it $2,000.

Kesselring Moved To Western Front

(By LYNN HEINZERLING)

Rome, March 22, (AP)—Allied intelligence officers said today Field Marshal Albert Kesselring's replacement as the Italian front probably would have little effect on operations in this theatre.

Hitler's methods of the future probably will judge Kesselring's performance in Italy, although he showed and testily Allied progress against Rome, has been credited generally with a masterly withdrawal in the face of overwhelming some have criticized his handling of his troops in the Cassino battle through Rome, when many Germans were captured.

Other Allied authorities here have no confirmation of Kesselring's departure to replace Field Marshal von Rundstedt on the western front. Hitler's Italian front officers still have expressed amazement at the appointment of Hitler's favorite their Italian position so stubbornly. Some Allied officers insisted there was no shortage of ground for this decision.

They said gave Kesselring credit for an extremely efficient job, particularly last year, when he faced overwhelming air superiority.

Some officers believed Kesselring will be meeting tremendous superiority in men and equipment, as he will have the brutal mountainous terrain of Italy on his side.

Crown Granted Leave To Appeal

Toronto, March 23 (CP) — The Ontario Court of Appeal today granted the Crown leave to appeal the sentences of Alan Baldwin and William J. O'Sullivan upon conviction on charges of manslaughter in the death of Robert Canning, a jail guard, while they were trying to break jail.

The Crown claimed the sentences of Baldwin and O'Sullivan, 22 years in prison, O'Sullivan to 10— were inadequate.

Baldwin, 22, and O'Sullivan, 22, were convicted at a trial following their trial for the slaying of 49-year-old Canning, a Don Jail guard who was attempted to escape from the hospital annex of the jail on Dec. 23, 1943, during a fight with murder.

On that time, Baldwin was in jail awaiting hearing on his appeal against an 18-year sentence imposed for an armed robbery at Wheatley, Ont. O'Sullivan was serving a five-year term for robbery with violence.

They testified they had bound Canning with a sheet and leather straps before attempting escape. The medical officer told the court Canning died as a result of strangulation.

When the jury, at this end of their second trial, brought in its decision, Mr. Justice O. F. Mc-Donnell told the two convicted: "I think the jury has taken an extraordinarily lenient view."

End of War in Europe At Hand Says Smuts

Capetown, March 23 — (Reuters) — The end of the war in Europe is at hand, Prime Minister Smuts told the South African Senate today, and he announced that the cessation of the European fighting would bring about a 50-per cent reduction of war production in the South African union.

No man would be forced to go to the Far East, he declared, but a certain number of South African air squadrons would be needed in the fighting against Japan and probably small bodies of specialist units — engineers and perhaps medical services.

The War Today—Sweeping Rhineland Victories Give Race for Berlin New Aspect

(By Dewitt Mackenzie)
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The friendly but competitive race for Berlin between the Russians and the Western Allies, in connection which the Russians seemed to have on the Western Allies, in connection which has taken on a new aspect as the result of sweeping Allied victories in the Rhineland.

In short, Gen. Eisenhower's Command has a fair chance to reach the German capital first. Now don't get the wrong! Setting aside certainly must remain on the Red forces, especially since they are only thirty miles or so from the metropolis, while their colleagues are about 30 times as far away. Admitteuy it would be premature to say the western Allies have a chance to arrive at about the same time as the Russians.

The point is that this is an obstacle race, and much depends on the breaks. The Soviet troops for their part are up against fierce opposition in the Oder line of defences before Berlin for the Germans are terrified of the retribution which may be exacted for the awful atrocities inflicted on Russian soil. As records, the Western Allies, similarly, have the luck in the impending invasion across the Rhine.

The Rhenish assault is generally expected to come on the northern front under Field Marshal Montgomery's command. This military expert's widely refrain from predictions, they're keeping close watch on the speed with which the plain lying between the great Ruhr industrial area and the port of Bremen. That's open country and well adapted to rapid tank manoeuvres and fast mechanized movement. It's a prime gateway to Berlin.

Western Encircling

Should Montgomery be fortunate enough to get across the river quickly, he might make a fast passage to the capital. An unknown quantity is the period of the resistance which the Germans can offer east of the Rhine. They are guarding that strategic northern flank in strength, although their armies further south on the long front have been much weakened and disorganized.

We must expect a fight, in this connection it's significant that the famous Field Marshal Kesselring who has made such a determined stand in Italy has been put in command of the Western Front in place of Field Marshal von Rundstedt. The latter had dropped out of sight entirely and that's an indication what has happened to him.

German Machine Failing

Gen. Eisenhower is no fool and we shouldn't overlook in the Rhenish theatre. The terrific and unprecedented blow of the Allied bombing of the German fighting front and the heart of the country is said to be causing devastation almost beyond comprehension. The German military machine—communications, supplies, fighting forces and all the rest—is rapidly falling to pieces. Naturally, this raises another question of how much resistance the enemy can offer to the attack across the Rhine.

How Britons Have Served

Britons' war sacrifices include requisitioning of over 258,000 premises and 1,300,000 acres of land during the war by the Admiralty, the War Office, the Air Ministry, the Ministries of Supply and Aircraft Production and the Board of Trade and in addition the Ministry of Works has made 26,000 requisitions of land and buildings for civil departments. Over 58,000 premises have been released already but a large scale release in the immediate future is unlikely, especially in view of the great need for storage space in connection with the Japanese war, and while the United Kingdom still remains the base for operations on the Western Front.

All kinds of buildings have been requisitioned, small houses, commercial premises, evacuation children's maternity homes, schools, hotels, as in health resorts for military purposes, factories and large office and public buildings. The number of houses destroyed or rendered uninhabitable up to September 1944 was 457,000, so that rehousing "the bombed out" meant requisitioning. Some provincial towns give the impression of having been taken over completely by one particular government department. There were extra requirements for accommodation for employees in the National Government service which grew from 1,718,000 in 1939 to 1,888,000 in 1944. Government requirements for industry increased, so that 76 per cent of 7,600,000 persons employed in manufacturing industries, excluding mining, were on government work.

Considerable of the requisitioned land has been agricultural. By 1944 there had been a net loss of agricultural land of 600,000 acres despite a large programme of reclamation. One airfield which was needed in order to fly off aircraft of a larger type than hitherto by the firm concerned took 600 acres of land and 250 miles of land of common land in the "green belt." This will not be used as an airfield after the war. The report of the U.K. Select Committee on National Expenditure shows there are some 1,000 airfields in Britain and the Times pointed out last week that an area of over 390,000 acres is controlled by the Air Ministry and the Ministry of Aircraft production, requiring many acres of hard-surfaced and eighteen of the country's total acreage. This shows some measure of Britain's agricultural wartime problem.

A considerable amount of total requisitioning of land by R.A.F. is in connection with Mutual Aid to the United States in the provision of accommodations and facilities for the U. S. forces in "these small and densely populated islands."

Practically the whole of the Southern Command and a large part of the Northern Command and Northern Ireland were evacuated for the accommodation of U. S. forces;

In other parts of the country requisitioning of large numbers of houses for billets, camps and new construction;

56,000,000 square feet of covered and 33,000,000 square feet of open storage for the U. S. army;

Hospitals to extent of nearly 1,000 beds built or turned over with stores;

Capital expenditure on Mutual Aid to the United States reached over $739,810,000 by June last of which item "airfields etc." accounted for over $465,-150,000. 1,500 persons had to be evacuated from a fertile 25 square mile area in South evon for a period of some months to provide facilities for final assault training for U. S. troops engaged in the landings in France.

Such requisitionings for the war have been accepted willingly by all classes of the British population. Even the compulsory removal of graves and buildings, which has provided about one quarter of all the scrap metal salvaged during the war, was accepted by the majority of owners, with the claimants of £6.00 per ton compensation to which they were entitled for their metal and for property, compensation in rent and by making good the damage, is provided under an Act of Parliament—in 1943-44 this War Office, which has made 160,000 requisitions on buildings, paid annual rentals of about $44,300,000. But the sacrifice of enjoyment, of property, even of normal home existence (during the war up to November 1944, over 22,500,000 civilian removals took place) has been one of the ways wherein the British people have shown they can "take it."

Bad News for War Criminals

While Germany's defences are being ripped and torn asunder by the power of the United Nations, there are many enemy persons who dread it is this the coming of the time when they will have to face judgment for their war crimes.

These men must have been trembling of hearts and hands among the fiendish crew when and if they heard the report from London on Wednesday that there was being organized an international detective force of the United Nations to hunt down every war criminal wherever he may have hidden himself. Now it is the war criminal, the shedder of innocent blood who is the victim of dread and fear.

The war criminals used the instinct of fear and terror to try to destroy the Allied war effort and to wreak vengeance on people of the United Nations. These war criminals in their thirst for power and plunder and for position in the Nazi ranks exalted murder and cruelty to an awful place in the Nazi regime, they disregarded the laws of ordinary human instinct which sway men to help the weak and innocent, they scorned humanity and used every brutal weapon. They acted with callous indifference to suffering or gloated in it. They thought themselves superior to all law and to punishment trusting in Nazi power. Now Nazi power is passing and it has long ceased to be able to save these inhuman wretches who have committed war crimes.

So time brings justice and judgment. Humanity is going to ask these criminals questions they in their guilt cannot answer.

Latin to Real Use.

(London Daily Mail)

A young schoolmistress in North Scotland had just returned to her home with her mother and sister when she saw a strange, tall man standing outside a window.

She went to the door and saw that he looked tired and dirty.

She asked him in English who he was. The man did not understand, so she asked him in Gaelic and French, but still he did not answer.

Then she tried Latin.

"Quis es?" she said (Who are you?)

Germanicus sum," the man replied. "Militis passum ad domum ambulavi" (I am a German, I have walked several miles to the house).

"Ego nescivere dum custodes vocemus," she told him, and the German airman, who had balled out of his 'plane, remembered he had been taught that it meant "Stay here while we call the authorities."

He gave the schoolmistress his revolver and sat in the house chatting in schoolbook Latin until an armed guard arrived.

A new development of penicillin, known as hypholin, has been used with marked success in cases of meningitis, pneumonia, septicaemia, and air-raid casualties. This drug is cheaper to produce than penicillin and will soon be available on a large scale for the treatment of civilian patients, says United Kingdom Information Office.

Friend of Pyle Has Narrow Escape When Disaster Overtakes His Plane

By BERNIE PYLE

In the Western Pacific.—(Delayed)—We were launching our night morning patrol. The sun was up, the mist was gone, and the day warmly magnificent. It was going to be a fine one.

I had already become acquainted with some of the pilots, and before each flight I went to the ship's "ready room" and find out from the blackboard the number of the planes my friends were flying, so I could identify them as they went past.

Lieut. Jimmy Van Fleet is one of the pilots I have come to know. I was acquainted because we have a mutual friend in Corpus Christi, Texas, Chris Cunningham, with whom I shared a tent and sometimes worse through Guadalcanal days. Chris is Italy. Jimmy and Chris are from the same hometown—Findlay, O.

We knew the very moment he started that Jimmy was in trouble. His plane veered sharply to the right, and a big puff of white smoke spurted from his right brake band. Then down the plane leveled and angled to the left as it gained speed.

The Air Officer up in the "island" stood motionless, and put his hand on the warning squawker. All the sailors standing on the deck walk, with their heads sticking up over the edge of the flight deck, quickly dashed for cover. You felt the tightly of excitement. I never even heard his squawker.

It was obvious Jimmy couldn't stop his plane from getting off the left. He had his right wheel locked, and the tire was burning, burned rubber on the deck, yet it evidently bore the plane. And it was too late for him to stop now.

The Marry-Go-Round

A WIFE IS NOT "A GAMBLE"

Any good sweetheart will tell a man who is married to the "wrong girl," that such statements to the contrary notwithstanding...it is the man who does the "picking" when their it's choosing a dance partner or a life-partner. If you don't believe it, just try to Marry one of them against his will.

If a man does find a wife for the security of her profile on her curvaceous figure, why don't him because she turns out to be a gold digger or a nitwit with one brain cell?

If he insists on marrying a woman any woman he is "good fun" to play around with, why fret sorry for him when she can't cook for him, too?

Believe it or not, a husband may be "just one of the wedding gifts" ...but a wife is the man's own fault. And as long as he continues to fall in love through his eyes and...his senses, instead of with his heart and his mind, why pity him if he gets something beautiful-but-dumb to bore him to death.

As long as he prefers incense to common sense, why pity him if he gets a wife who flatters him in the beginning and tries to wangle it the rest out of him in the next? Or who pets him with one hand, and picks his allotment check with the other?

How long as he passes up the girl who would be a life-long comrade, in order to pursue a dazzling diversion, why shed tears over him when he groans that he is "misunderstood?"

You'll hear his friends say: "If he had the right kind of a wife, he never would have gone the pace, forged the check, played the races or gotten all tangled up with the other woman!"

Of course, he wouldn't! And if he hadn't eaten lobster or too much mincemeat pie...never would have had indigestion. If he had not swallowed too many cocktails he never would have had the-head-ache.

Choosing a wife is the most important act of a man's life—and the one to which he gives the least thought, time, attention and intelligence, especially in these times.

If a man—particularly a serviceman—rushes into marriage with the girl who chances to be nearest at hand, when he is feeling lonely and is in the "marrying-mood," and she turns out to be a headache, we sympathize with him. Why shouldn't we?

Yet, if he holds all the cards from the start; and all he needs, is to use a little commonsense in making the most momentous decision of his life! A wife is a matter of choice, not chance!

In Developing the Bust A Faithful Routine Helps

Rita Carday recommends wholesome, home cooked meals for gaining

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS WHO are too willowy to cast a shadow long to put up a good front. Expansion of the bust measurements is what they are after. If they're willing to make the necessary sacrifices in eating, will work faithfully for a considerable period of time, they may achieve results.

We warn the hall-hearted ones, however, against weaken spells that it is no good expecting extra bustage to spring in a few weeks it takes time, patience and perseverance. The first step is decision to diet. The girl who fancies she can live on pickles and lettuce leaves will never win the bath room scales shiver and groan.

Sensible Diet

She must stoke up on man-sized meals, adding more fats, starches and sweeting to the diet. She needs a quart of milk a day to put fat on her ribs. If the appetite is fussy, more 'outdoor' exercise will help create a desire for good things of the table, though vigorous exercise is not for the bantam weight.

Local treatment is necessary for bust development. Bathe the breasts in warm water, then vigorously to bring a glow. Anoint with cocoabutter. Rub round and round with the palm and flattened fingers with slight upward pressure. While doing this keep the chest high, head on the level. Do the following exercise, one hour at a time, sending the tight-fisted hand in high wide circles and far back. The shoulders forward the breasts with cold water, do deep breathing exercises.

Helpful Exercises

Sit on a straight-back chair, grasp the sides of the seat, expand the chest, sway the upper portion of the body forward and back. The trick is to keep the chest high and the head on the level.

Good posture is imperative. By throwing the shoulders forward the muscles of the torso become slack, the tissues of the breasts flabby.

Do deep breathing exercises when walking—deep inhalations to four steps. Exhale, then inhale again for four back steps.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Gift for a Doctor

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Our doctor for more than ten years has given our family most expert service and we have also known him quite a bit socially. He has an interesting practice in the medical corps of the army. We have just received a formal invitation to an At Home that he and his wife are giving as a farewell party to him. We are wondering if it would be proper for us to bring him a gift at this time. Also, we would so much like to show our deep appreciation to him. Do you think it would be what would you suggest? Perhaps some identification bracelet? He does not smoke, so anything in that line is out.

A. C.

I'm most athusiastic about your doctor's giving him a doctor's going-away present . . . it would be proper. Bring and I know he will be touched by this expression of your appreciation and your good taste. However, I do think it would be better if, rather than giving the gift with you, you send it to or leave it at his house at some time before the party. He and his wife will be very busy at the party, and also he might think that, if he opened your gift, other guests might be embarrassed that they had not brought a gift. Also, if you send the gift, it will give you a great opportunity of enclosing a nice note of appreciation to him, and to say your good wishes-for his great service in the army.

An identification bracelet is, I think, one of the best choices, and the chances are he will have one. Every gift given for an occasion is so important, since possessions can be so few, and duplicates are so futile, I wonder if you could do some discreet questioning of his wife of some other member of his family to find out something especially wants and needs. Possibly Oshkevise consider giving him a wallet or billfold, stamped with his full name; or a gold slip engraved with his initials; or a sturdy leather portfolio, name stamped; a gold knife and pencil combination; a small fitted travelling kit of leather; a pocket combination magnifier and pencil; a saddle leather travelling game set; a travelling clock; or practical and generally very welcome, a supply of handkerchiefs, initialed or with his full name.

Plans Sleek Shower

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to give a shower for a mother-to-be, and wish you would answer several questions about my plans.

1. Would a Sunday afternoon be a proper time?

2. On the invitations can a definite hour be set; such as 3 o'clock or 4 o'clock?

3. Would like to make the occasion as simple as possible, and since the guests will be few, is it enough to seat the fourteen guests I am inviting, would buffet service be correct? If so, would you please suggest a simple menu? (I thought of having the sandwiches made by a caterer.)

P. C.

1. Since it is the custom to ingite only the close women friends of the guest of honor; to a story shower, usually on a Saturday, a Sunday afternoon. However, this, of course depends on the convenience of all concerned.

2. Yes, on the invitations to this kind of shower a definite hour should be named.

3. Yes; buffet service is proper. And usually a simple tea-menu is served: assorted sandwiches, tea and/or coffee, and cake.

Old Favorite Jenny Cake

One mixture is a home-maker for when mother's second mixture is ready. Sift flour and salt in large mixing bowl. Make gauge of sugar, pastry, lard, and butter, rubbing in lightly. Add egg and milk, mixing to a soft dough.

The home economists in the Home Economics Service, Department of Agriculture are constantly experimenting with foods, developing delicious, economical and serving them. Making do with rationing has been the height of economics, and today they are offering some helpful serves with Canadian housewives.

The Jenny Cake is a 1945 version of the old-fashioned Jenny Cake. Moreover, the mixture is speedy because it is mixed quickly. The Nugget Scuffle is an example of how mixtures are mixed and scuffles are usually baked in the oven, but it has been found that results are nearly satisfactory on top of the stove. The keys of the finished product, however, are the evenness of the baked variety. The second is the use of a heavy utensil for baking, thus evenly separating the eggs. Experiments have shown that if sufficiently beaten, a feather crease should not be made by this method which will be satisfactory to cooks of electric heaters.

Jenny Cake

¾ cup all purpose flour
1 cup pastry baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar
1 egg, beaten, unscoked
2 eggs
½ cup milk
3 tablespoons mild flavored fat, melted

Mix and sift flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add farina and mix well. Add beaten eggs and milk. Add melted fat to liquid and quickly combine with dry ingredients. Stir well and immediately pour into a well-greased 8 x 8 inch pan or muffin tins. Bake in moderately hot oven, 375 degrees F. Allow 25 to 30 minutes.

W. S. Turner Speaker at Home And School Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Club took place in the school auditorium recently.

The Junior Red Cross of the school held a sale of home cooking and candy basket prior to the meeting.

The meeting opened with the singing of "O Canada" with Miss May Hill at the piano. The entertainment was put on by the pupils of Grades 7 and 8, who sang two numbers under the direction of Miss May.

After the business portion of the meeting was attended to, Mrs. Truesdale, the president, introduced the speaker for the evening, Mr. W. J. Turner, principal of the Collegiate and Vocational School. His subject was one of great interest, not only to the parents but to the pupils who would soon be leaving Public School.

Describes Good Teacher

Mr. Turner began by stating that any good teacher had a character of guidance. The difference between a good teacher and a mediocre one is that the former teacher what is required in the curriculum and then proceeds to teach to take after school and other times to talk over things, while the latter type may be entirely irreverent to the pupils in progress but of great importance to the educational guidance of the pupils.

At the present time Harvard has the best Guidance school. Up until recent years the guidance effort has been made to guide pupils.

In a number of the public schools when the pupils are entered, their particulars are all ready made out for them and they are in a certain class whether they are specially for such a class or not. As a result of this, many fail by the wayside. Many of the courses were not one for which they were equipped.

Parents Seeps Time Decide.

In a good many cases, the parents had all ready decided what profession their children, for course, regardless of the fact, that they had not the ability and were not adapted to it.

Here Mr. Turner paused to say that it would be very interesting to make a survey of such an audience gathered there to see who of each was to be the position he now occupied and why. Whether it was due to educational guidance or fortuitous circumstances.

When a pupil enters any school, there is certain adjustments to be made. There are rules of regulations that must be learned, and the pupil who fails to adjust and is dismissed, and what awards are available and what the extra-curricular activities are, etc.

Personal Interviews.

Then comes a student knows quite definitely what vocation he or she is going to follow, and plans out the course that is required. However, there are those in the audience, at the time of their first interview with the principal and is shortly to set forth. Here and with his help find his or her proper niche in the school.

Mr. Turner stated he hoped that the Dept. of Education would make greater strides among those that are backward.

Mr. Anderson expressed the thanks of all those present to Mr. Turner for his fine address.

Refreshments were served by the Junior Red Cross for a small fee.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

CARE OF THE COMPLEXION

It won't do to put too much faith in cosmetics and those soothing, restful treatments at the beauty parlor. Not that we are a crusader against entertaining toiletries, but only those must be selected against the ravages of time. There is always the old tried trio the scrubs and the long while whitening in the sun. Try it yet you if you don't watch out.

For every kind of complexion, dry, oily, normal, there is a soap to use. The finest, when necessary. But do not overwork the fact that health, vitality and admission are important in the preservation of good looks.

A jittery nervous system throws the complexion into a panic, leaving it fall into furrows. Tranquil women are seldom bothered by wrinkles. The woman who's given to complaining and fretting can so wreck her map that as fary as looks go she's sunk.

There is the matter or diet. Do not overlook that. Fried foods rich pastries provide no skin. Offices invite blackheads. Chocolates, candies and pastries, lacking too much protein create blackheads and enlarged pores. Not enough food of the wrong kind, is responsible for pallor, grayness or sallow skin.

Lack of exercise shows up circulation, the matter is to react to the commercial bleach.

PROVINCE FACES

Speculation on the possibility of further changes in the Cabinet has been chiefly on the fact that the new election act has not been proclaimed in force as yet, and to provide a district vote to service personnel in the absence of war and a proxy vote to prisoners of war.

Private Members Hold Sway

In the latter part of its after-noon sittings under the new hours of the night sitting, private members held sway in the debate. But most interesting members and the galleries centred on the closing speeches of Premier Drew, Jolliffe and the Premier.

Mr. Nixon, who began speaking at 9.15 p. m., predicted the vote "may make history in the province of Ontario" and that "there are signs this may be the last debate of the session and of the 21st Legislature."

Differences Framed Out

Past differences between himself and Mr. Hepburn — who resigned as Ontario Liberal leader and Premier Oct. 31 that year — and the party as House Leader last December — had been ironed out. "I hope that he will soon lead the Liberal forces in Ottawa again and that in the near future he will head the government in this province."

He made reference by the Liberals with the outnumbered government in the last session of the legislature a year ago "but co-operation works both ways and the Premier of Ontario is not the easiest man to co-operate with."

The Premier immediately hurled the bridges in his radio address last Aug. 9" when he attacked the federal government's Family Allowance Act.

Nixon Condemns Policy

"Certainly he knows that delivery of that address made it impossible for any self-respecting Liberal in this House to hold co-operation with Mr. Nixon spoke at length on the Liberal pre-election policy of "undermining the government" for introducing compulsory health insurance in Ontario schools and giving "ill-considered encouragement to large families, without providing adequate safeguards to ensure full employment for our war veterans and present war workers."

His party did not oppose such religious exercises in the schools as reading from the scriptures, repeating family prayer and the regular visits from ministers for religious instruction as provided under the former regulations. But it did object to the new course of study introduced by the government on the grounds that it might stir up religious controversy. It had been opposed by several sections of the people.

Mr. Jolliffe spoke briefly and stated his party's position on the liberal amendment. He said the party entered the government's policy on municipal grants to be considered on the question of religious education "all the members of the party are free to vote for or against" the amendment to the amendment as they desired."

Drew Attacks C.C.F.

Party Supports Motion

In the afternoon sitting, Labor-Co-Operative Commonwealth Federation spokesman to give Royal assent to 35 bills, 12 of which were private measures.

Three speakers participated in the debate, Hon. Thomas Kennedy, Minister of Mines; T. F. Murray (C.-Renfrew North); Hon. Leslie Blackwell, failure to implement its 20-point programme; Hon. Peter Heenan (C.C.F.-Nipissing); Joseph Noseworthy (C.C.F.-York South); Mrs. Dorise Nielson (Unity-North Battleford); T. D. Shaw (C.-Red Deer); J. A. Bonnier (L.-Montreal St. Lawrence) and Emmanuel D'Aoust (Ind.-Russell).

Critical Speech.

Mr. Green, in a curt critical speech of the government's foreign policy, said that Canada should seek to have the British Commonwealth accorded a permanent seat on the security council of the United Nations organization and thereby obtain representation.

He said Prime Minister Mackenzie King, at the last conference had placed Canada in a humiliating position by not insisting that the British Commonwealth represented at such conferences as Dumbarton Oaks meeting when the world security plan was drawn up and thus have the British Commonwealth rather than the United Kingdom.

Want Permanent Seat.

"The way to get out is to ask that in the charter provision be made for a permanent seat on the security council for the British Commonwealth rather than by the United Kingdom," he said. "I am sure that we will get a reaction to that request in Great Britain.

"If Canada makes this request and it is granted, Canada, still with a seat on the security council, by aiding in permanently on the security council where important decisions are being made."

He called for Canada to assume commitments which will be clear-cut for Canadian participation in the maintenance of peace and objected to any special claims for status on the part of secondary nations.

Mr. Green said he objected to a statement by Mr. King that he (Green) had been "misled" by the press of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals. He had objected to the proposals for regional councils to settle disputes before they reached the security council.

"It would have been far wiser," he said, "had the Prime Minister said that he (Green) was misled, to have told the Canadian people that there was no truth in the statement."

Matter of Keen Interest.

Mr. Graydon said Poland's position was a matter of keen interest to Canada which was the home of 187,000 Polish people, more than 10,000 of whom lived in his county of Peterborough.

"No country under the banners of the United Nations has fought more valorously and gained more glory on land, on sea and in the air," said Dr. McCann.

The legal Polish government had not been invited to the forthcoming San Francisco conference where it could present its case. When Hitler pounced on Poland in 1939, Britain, and soon after Canada, declared war on Germany. Poland had kept its part in the Anglo-Polish pact.

Dr. McCann was one of 12 speakers heard in the security debate which opened Tuesday and which will continue tomorrow. The other speakers were Mr. Hosking; Howard Green (PC-Vancouver South); Rev. Dan McIvor (L-Port William); Fred R. Wright (CCF-Malton); Frederick Dorion (Ind.-Charlevoix-Saguenay); Rodney Adamson (PC-York West); Joseph Noseworthy (CCF-York South); Mrs. Dorise Nielson (Unity-North Battleford); T. D. HOLLAND'S QUEEN VISITS RUINED FRONTIER VILLAGE

By TOM YORKSHIRE

(Associated Press War Correspondent)

Allies Free, March 30 (Delayed) — (AP) — Queen Wilhelmina returned to the Netherlands today on a pilgrimage of war-ruined Holland, making an emotional 16-day visit in what has been the most devastated area of the German occupation.

Wherever the 64-year-old monarch went she was warmly greeted by her people, who had not heard her voice since they fled into the heart of Britain in May, 1940. Many had not heard her but hurried into their homes to tune in their radios and gathered around her limousine as every step of the journey was broadcast by the Netherlands radio, which is operating from a pilgrimage of every corner of Britain-dominated Walcheren Island today.

During the trip in the amphibious vehicle, tears were often in the eyes of the Queen.

The Queen's cavalcade was a fantastic sight as the mobility vehicle, accompanied by armed half-tracks, drove machines of the war chugged down the streets past sullen houses.

Middelburg, Holland, March 16. (Delayed)— (CP Cable)— For nearly eight years Queen Wilhelmina, standing upright in the front of a British Army truck with a chill wind whipping her face, has been the symbol of Dutch resistance to the Nazis.

Queen Wilhelmina, who has now decided the warmth of her welcome home. Her war-ravaged subjects, many of them in rags, with hearts and smiles, cried with joy, as the Queen passed them in the open Queen in British Army Truck

Toronto Leafs Gain Distinct Edge in Playoffs by Beating Canadiens for Second Time

Score is 3-2 and Leafs Clinched Pastime by Two Goals In Second Period

By HAROLD FREEMAN
(CP Staff Writer)

Montreal, March 23 — (CP) — An elated bunch of Toronto Maple Leafs headed homeward today, two games up in their Stanley Cup semi-final series with Montreal Canadiens and with their next two games in the home confines of Maple Leaf Gardens.

The Leafs burned back Canadiens for a second time by a one-goal margin last night, using their close-checking mastery of the Canuck power to fashion a 3-2 victory to add to their 1-0 win of Tuesday night.

The Leafs figured that with two home games coming up, they had a straight-hold on the series, although coach Hap Day wasn't making any predictions about it.

"We'll just have playing them game by game," he said after last night's contest. "Maybe we won't win them all but we've made a big start and maybe we can keep it up Saturday night." The tired and somewhat dispirited Canucks had little to say except that the series was all over yet.

Close Checking Tactics

In taking two in a row from the league champions, the Leafs kept up their close-checking tactics of the first game, setting the breaks whenever they came and holding off a determined Canuck rally in the third. Leafs had gone ahead 3-1 by that time and the best Canadiens could do was get one of the goals back late in the period.

Red Kennedy made the first goal for the winners, the only tally of the first period. Butch Bouchard slapped one past Frank McCool to tie it up in the second, but before the period had ended Lorne Carr and Nick Metz had scored the goals that clinched things. Elmer Lach tallied for Canadiens with two minutes to go.

Scored When Short-Handed

Every goal but Carr's was scored while the opposing team was short-handed through penalties. Strangely enough, however, there was no scoring when the teams were really short as the result of two major penalties and three minors handed out after a six minute melee late in the first period. Tod Sloan and Wally Stanowski drew majors, Butch Bouchard, Maurice Richard and Bob Davidson minors for their part in the brawl that had practically everybody in it at one time or another.

Valleyfield Braves Again Beat Cornwall

Valleyfield, Que., March 23—(CP) —Valleyfield Braves increased their lead in their Inter-provincial Hockey League best-of-seven finals with Cornwall Cooksa when they won 9-4 the fourth game of the series here last night. Valleyfield now leads the series 3-1.

Bert Connolly and Gerry Plamondon each scored three goals for the Braves. The other Valleyfield goals were shot by Ted Desrosiers, Paul Poisant and Gordie Dillon.

Gerry Cravel scored the first goal for Cornwall in the second period but Cookies, who went scoreless in the first game, staged a short-lived rally in the final frame when Andy Perron and Bobby Carnagher made it three for their team within 10 seconds.

Porcupine Combines Meet St. Michaels

Timmins, March 23 — (CP) — Porcupine Combines, Northern Ontario's first contenders for the Memorial Cup and the Canadian junior hockey championship since 1940, yesterday awaited for Toronto where they are scheduled to open a best-of-seven series Saturday with St. Michael's Majors, Ontario Hockey Association champions, for the provincial championship.

Combines, undisputed Kings of the Northern Ontario Hockey Association, have acquired three O. H. A. players for the military exemptions for the series. They are Barry Sullivan and Bill Smith, who played with Oshawa, and Al Dewsbury, Toronto Young Rangers defenceman.

Pleasantville, N.J., March 23 (AP) — Pitching and catching remained Manager Joe Gordon's big headache today as Boston Red Sox started the second week of spring training.

None of the 1946 catchers was available and departure of Tex Hughson left Joe Dobson the only yawning gap in the mound corps until Cronin has been unable to plug.

Moose Jaw, Sask., March 23 (CP) —The much ballyhooed Moose Jaw Canucks, Saskatchewan junior hockey champions, today waited for Winnipeg Monarchs or Port Arthur West End Bruins to advance into the western hockey finals before renewing their warfare.

The Canucks, first Moose Jaw team to reach the western finals in history, defeated Edmonton Canadians 6-3 last night before 3,500 fans for their fourth straight victory in the best-of-seven semi-finals.

Scoring honors went to tigh winger Lou Hauck, who notched three goals.

HERSHEY BEARS TAKE CAPITALS

(By The Canadian Press)

Hershey Bears took their second straight game in the American Hockey League semi-finals last night, downing Indianapolis Capitals 3-2 on Bears' home ice.

The victory gave Hershey four of the eight points required to take the series, while Capitals have none.

In the first-place semi-finals, Buffalo Bisons and Cleveland Barons were tied at two points apiece.

Playoffs continue on the weekend, with games at Cleveland and Hershey Saturday night and Buffalo and Indianapolis Sunday.

Hal Gregory scored Hershey's first goal while Bears were one man short, with Ken Mosdell and Jack Stewart box. Cooper picked up defenceman Jim Drummond's looped shot at centre ice and skated unopposed to the Capitals' net.

Cliff Purpur tied the score two minutes later, but two goals by Drummond, one a set-up, gave the first period and the other midway in the second, gave Bears the margin for victory. Dick Kowelnak scored for Capitals in the second period after goalie Nick Ricconi failed in making a save, leaving the goal unguarded. The final period was scoreless.

BARRIE COLTS BEAT OSHAWA

Midland, March 23 — (CP)—Barrie Colts took a two-goal lead in their two-game total-goal series of the O.H.A. Junior B playoffs with Oshawa Bees by turning in the Bees 2-1 here last night.

Max Richardson scored Barrie's first goal early in the first period when he beat Oshawa goalie Ken McMillan with a low shot. Loughead added the second goal after eight minutes of play in the middle session, breaking from centre ice and skating in unmolested.

Oshawa staged a terrific drive in the final period, completely outplaying Barrie, but the magnificent work by Strachan in the Colts' nets held them to one goal, a hard-to-mid-way through the period. Strachan made several seasonal saves at the sticks of Bathe and Gilhooley later in the period.

Winnipeg Monarchs Beat Port Arthur

Winnipeg, March 23 (CP)—Riddled with injuries, Port Arthur West End Bruins will have a very much chance today of upsetting Winnipeg Monarchs after the Manitoba champions whipped them 5-2 last night to take a 3-1 lead in the best-of-seven western Canada semi-finals.

Monarchs capitalized on the breaks and forced Ice a 5-1 lead in the first period, Edmund a Port Arthur rally had in the second, and then snared the only counter of the third session.

Fifth game of the series will be here Saturday night.

Forward Ken Mosferren bagged three Monarch goals.

Berlin Editor-in-Chief Reported Executed

London, March 23 — (CP)—The Paris radio said Thursday that Baron Ernst Ungern-Sternberg, editor in chief of the Berlin newspaper Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung, had been executed following the circulation of "peace pamphlets" printed on the paper's presses.

The broadcast, quoting Swiss sources of information, said the paper was permitted to continue publication but a feature column, "Our Opinion" was suppressed.

BOSTON BRUINS DEFEAT DETROIT IN SECOND GAME

Hershe Calls Lost to Bruins "Lucky" By Breaking Collar Bone In First Period

Detroit, March 23 — (CP) — Boston Bruins dimmed the Stanley Cup prospects of the favored Detroit Red Wings last night by defeating them 4-2 before 12,316 fans to take a four-point edge in their eight-point final series. The victory was the opener 4-3 last Tuesday night.

Staging a determined drive, the Wings tied it up in the second period but Boston's two minutes later Ken Smith and Paul Gladu lifted in two goals within 15 seconds to give Boston a lead they never relinquished.

The teams go to Boston for the next two games and the Wings, who had not batted Arbor at the hands of Boston throughout the regular schedule, face the prospect of reversing their performance of last year when they were defeated in the cup playdowns by fourth-place Chicago.

Hershe Cain, high-scoring forward on Boston's first line was lost to the Bruins for the remainder of the playoffs when he suffered a broken collar bone late in the initial period after being heavily boarded by Harold Jackson.

Played Hockey

Handling the puck almost faultlessly early in the game, Detroit attacks before they could get started, Boston played a steady game in contrast to the jumpy Red Wings who constantly missed passes and also wilds on scoring chances.

Jim McGill shot Boston into the lead in less than three minutes of play. Ed Litzenberger scored by flipping the puck into the net from in front.

Jackson tied the score in the 2nd period but Boston went ahead after taking a pass from Bill Quackenbush, but the Bruins came back with a goal by Smith at 7:15 and then Gladu to build up a two-goal lead for the visitors that was enough for the remainder of the game.

Eddie Brunsteet put life in the Wings with a goal through the final period when he beat Paul Knox with a low shot from centre, but Pat Egan cepdled three minutes later when he hooked the puck past Harry Lumley on a solo effort for the final goal of the game.

Sports Roundup

New York, March 23. (AP)—The supreme court in baseball's baseball season will be heard —probably in Chicago's Bismarck—when an irate fan yells to a player: "Who ain't baseball is your principal business?" . . . Jack Dugger, the Ohio State football and basketball star, has lined up a job as coach at Lancaster, O., high school. . . . Ted Kluszewski has no set-few football players at West Point have ever had the usual Spring intra-squad game. What's the matter with Army, Doc Blanchard as a one-man backfield, the way the cadets did last fall, and Glen Davis as another?

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.

Found Out.

A young man was applying for a situation. The proprietor being satisfied with the replies he got as his abilities asked him if he had got his character with him. The young man said, "No,but I can soon get it."

Leaving a bag he was carrying, he left. After being absent some time he came back and, picking up the bag, turned to walk out.

"Where are you going?" asked the proprietor. "Haven't you got your character?"

"No," said the young man, "but I've got yours."

Plenty of Talk.

If street talk emanating from along the streets is the right kind then baseball may see its greatest boom since the game passed out of the picture in Baltimore 40 years ago. Several industrial firms are supposed to be interested in sponsoring baseball teams and with the new Alemite Field available for the diamond pastime what is needed mostly is interest in fostering the game. Time was when semi-pro boys desirous of playing the bigtime game, which had always flourished, baseball games were played Sunday afternoon in the Alemite Field with no interference in religious teachings being noted.

Rumour has it that the Alemite, Canadian National, Coca Cola Orphans and Dominion Industries and at least one other local concern are all interested in the W. G. A. Williams' in Belleville for 1946. If these concerns decide to function a baseball unit it might be well to consider the fact the diamond game has been a source of fun and relaxation for the last half decade and to stimulate interest it might be a good plan to include as many minors into the various team formations as possible. In other cities, Kingston and Oshawa for example baseball has held a certain number of juveniles on each club and along with the odd free agents and young men who merely desire the odd game of ball for recreation. The plan pays dividends.

While talking baseball it might be well to point out to the younger generation that baseball was a going concern in the baseball life of Belleville before and after the last war. In 1919 a Senior Canadian League was organized taking in towns in Ontario and Northern New York even through Belleville to Kingston. In the 19 years the C.O.B.L. operated Belleville teams were successful in winning pennants seven times. Twice the locals won the league championship three years in a row, 1924, 1925 and '26 and then 1928 through '31. Twice Belleville won the Senior baseball championship of Ontario, then recognized tops in Canada. These came in 1919 and again in 1926. In 1922 the locals should have won top honors, but over-confidence took its toll once again.

Did You Know.

Says Doug Vaughan in the Windsor Star: "Tron man" is the timehonored appellation for a pitcher who wins two games in a single day. . . . Andre Anfuso, therefore, might be called "Superman" for he solved a record victory in one league on the Pacific Coast in the morning, then hustled to the Atlantic seaboard, where he registered another triumph in a different baseball league in the afternoon. . . . Always, you see, is a Panamanian, and his first game was in Panama City for the Policia, team of the National League. His second was in Mount Hoper, 48 miles away, for Balboa of the Canal Zone League in the evening. He won 6-4 and 8-1 . . . Incidentally, the Zone League numbers among its players Terry Moore of the St. Louis Cardinals and Mickey Harris of the Boston Red Sox . . . Only two players—Ray Getzien and Ed Mensik, Toledo Mud Hens' first baseman have been with the champion Montreal Canadiens when Dick Irvin took over in 1940 and are still around . . . First National Hockey League player to win mention for bravery in despatches from overseas is Kenny Reardon, who used to play a lot of defence for the Canadiens . . . Kenny's brother, Terry, who played with both Boston and Montreal, was wounded in action on the Western front . . . Still another brother, Larry, is a member of the Ontario Commandos senior"

Remember When.

Detroit Red Wings won their first National Hockey League championship 11 years ago tonight when they defeated the Toronto Maple Leafs, defending champions, 1-0 in the fifth game of the play-off series. Detroit again topped the league in 1936, '37 and 1942.

A Mouthful.

It seems Harry Rollins, local baseball enthusiast, went to a picture theatre the other afternoon and noticed an elderly man groping on the floor, seemingly for something he had lost. A woman in a nearby seat asked the searcher inquiringly what the man had lost.

"Why, I lost a carsumal," he spluttered.

"You're going to all this bother for a carsumal?" she asked.

"Yes," was the reply. "You see, my teeth are in it."

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 428
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

My suspect is a wise guy who insist on just what you should do. Why? Is it any bridge game at all if all do the opposite. Methinks the bull some experts toss is food for indigestion.—Ex.

Let me show you this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH	NORTH
♠A 6 4	♠K 10 9 7 3
♥A K 10 8	♥Q 3 2
♦Q J 5 3	♦K 9
♣K Q 3	♣10 7 5

NORTH
♠K 10 9 7 3
♥K 3 2
♦K 9 2
♣10 7 5

This is how one expert says the bidding should go:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 D	1 S
2 H	3 S
3 NT	4 NT
6 D	Pass

The one spade response does not show much. The same bid would have been used with only three tricks. The heart suit is not quite bidable. At the club bid certainly is not.

Each of these bids is "misleading." With such lies, maybe experts can use indirect inferences to figure out what. Only those who know the gobs of gosh! Why go through that with each different hand?

The bidding should go like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 D	2 S
2 NT	3 D
3 NT	4 D
6 D	Pass

The immediate one-jump response of four spades shows six tricks with two sure tricks. With his own six, south, knows right there that a slam is probable if they can decide on a trump suit.

North's three diamond bid determines the trump suit. Then it is only a matter of finding out about aces and kings. In response to four no-trump, five no-trump signals one ace and three kings.

Yes, both of these bids reached the same result. But the three spade bid leaves nothing to guess work. All it applies to is the trump suit.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By FRED KERNER
(CP Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 23 — (CP) — Montreal fans get a great kick out of a character called Prince Uvalo who hounds the sports - writing clan in that city with his predictions on the outcome of anything and everything — except the horses. Fortunately, he is not always right or organized sport would have to go on strike.

The Prince — who named himself after the real Uvalo, a Brahmin Prince who is one of the world's foremost mathematicians — first made himself known to Dink Carroll of the Canadian. Dink strung along with the gentleman's special gamble but aroused his ire one day and the Prince transferred his affections to the Star's Bax O'Meara. Later to depart (The Great Ferguson of the Herald).

For a time after the last N.H.L. playoff series, the probability-prop mentacker didn't show his face, for his efforts in the 1944 series weren't so hot. But came this year's playoffs and back was Uvalo with a guess on the first title of the best-of-finals series. His batting average? — .500. He called Toronto over Canadiens and Detroit over Boston.

His most recent reappearance brought this explanation of his failures last year to Dink Carroll. Said his highness: "I hadn't perfected my education then, but I've done a lot of work on it since and I'm getting good results now."

He related that he had recently demonstrated his ability for the boss of a New York newspaper syndicate "put refused to let any publicity be used. "I think the right time for it (publicity) will be when the racetracks open and I can clear a fortune in 10 or 12 days," he added.

That last statement brought a note of disappointment from Dink, the sport-world's calm philosopher. Dink intimates that Uvalo displays a shift of values. A year ago he proclaimed himself a mathematician and philosopher; money was only a means to an end. Now says Dink money is the end itself.

However, the track-master (?) tops the barrel when it comes to sporting with wisdom. In a recent note penned to Baz O'Meara, the Prince said he evries sport writers since they appeared to have no inner science. Ouch!

STEVE DONOGHUE, GREAT ENGLISH JOCKEY, IS DEAD

Had Lifetime Record of 1,840 Winners and Three Consecutive Derby Triumphs

London, March 23. (CP)—Steve Donoghue, 58, one of the great English jockey who ever straddled a Derby winner, died today after an illness of only 24 hours.

Little Donoghue, who had switched from racing silks to trainer's gaiters eight years ago—had a lifetime record of 1,840 winners, and his mark of three consecutive Derby triumphs is another all-time record.

Altogether he won the British turf classic six times.

The crowd's roar of "Come on, Steve" as he rode his mounts into the stretch became a byword in the national life of Britain.

A native of Doncaster, Lancashire, Donoghue started as an errand-boy at the age of 12. He had his first winner at Phoenix Park, Dublin, nine years later, and from that first horse he ever rode in competition—Torridal Lad.

He repeated in 1917 on Gay Crusader.

Then came his unprecedented streak in 1921, '22 and '23. Steve came home on Humorist—the first year; came right back with Captain Cuttle—a rank outsider that started the 25-goon throng by winning doing Amy's—and then rounded out a record hat-trick up on the top three-year-old of 1923, Papyrus.

Racing men agreed there was no jockey to compare with Donoghue over the switchback, under-clock-wise Epsom course with its gruelling uphill stretch.

His brilliant riding at difficult Tattenham Corner —the heart-breaking turn where many a favorite has swung wide and lost the race—invariably brought the crowd thundering to its feet. It was during Ingoji that Steve rode around Tattenham with one leg over the inner fence.

He rode his sixth winner in the Derby in 1925, when he booted home Manna. The feat of six victories in the Derby has been duplicated but once. Rumor said the Delighted Winner, H. E. Morriss gave him an outright gift of £10,000 (about $45,000).

Many regard Steve as the greatest jockey of all time.

But money never stayed long with Steve, who—he later revealed in his book "Donoghue Steve"—once came home with a money-lender's wit in his pocket. In later years he found himself in debt by £4,500.

But his luck turned again and in his declining years began an episode in his racing career that endeared him more than ever to the British sporting public.

Steve and Irene Jack, a big brown, colt owned by Sir Harry Wernher.

Time and again the combination scored in classic races. The tough Queen Alexandra stakes run over the Newmarket course in three successive courses, the last time when Brown Jack was ten years old.

When Brown Jack was retired to Jubilee Stirs often visited his old friend and watchers said the pleasure came across the members at a gallop when he saw Donoghue approaching.

Steve described Jack as "a perfect gentleman, the most clever, most intelligent and generous horse that ever looked through a bridle".

When Donoghue was tendered a farewell dinner in 1937 by his fellow jockeys, just after he became a trainer, his speech was broadcast and a loudspeaker was hooked up in Brown Jack's stable.

"Hello, old pal," said Steve, "You beauty, I hope your ears are burning because I'm thinking of you from the time . . .

Steve's great victories are not confined to the Derby and classics. He gained his first important riding agreements after he rode Christmas Daisy home first in the Cambridgeshire in 1907. Before he hung up his tack he had headed the leading jockeys' list for ten straight years and won every classic but the St. Leger.

Steve was one of the few jockeys who ever refused a royal retainer, explaining as tactfully as he could that the King's race horses just weren't quite good enough that year. When Steve broke a leg in a heavy fall, it was King George V who made the first donation to a fund to assist his convalescence.

(By The Canadian Press)

An outstanding woman golfer over a period of thirty years during which she won British, Canadian and American championships and more than 700 prizes, Dorothy Campbell Hurley, 48, was killed by a train at Tenasset, B.C. It was learned last night at New York although the accident occurred last Tuesday. Born in Edinburgh in 1895 and a resident of Ottawa for some years, the then Dorothy Hurd started her career by winning the British women's title in 1909 in her first try. She took the U.S., honors and won the Canadian championship three years in a row, 1910, 1911 and 1912.

From 1909 to 1934 Mrs. Hurley's golfing accomplishments included British Championship, twice; Scottish title, three times; U.S. title, three times; Canadian, three times; north and south honors, 7; Bermuda titles, 3; Canadian championship, six times; and Bermuda title from 1921 to 1934. She also conquered when she fell beneath a moving train.

The practice diamond at Cairo, Ill., continued under flood waters last night for the 14th day. Cardinals despite efforts to dry the field and there was no prospect the team would be able to move to home grounds in St. Louis for badly-needed workouts.

MEMBER TAKEN ILL

Toronto, March 23 — (CP) — Toronto Orthopaedic Hospital said today Dr. R. Hobbs Taylor, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario legislature for Huron, spent a "comfortable night."

He was taken ill late yesterday afternoon following adjournment of the legislature and was admitted to hospital last night. Hospital officials described his condition as unchanged today but declined to elaborate.

Drew and Blackwell Clash With Hepburn Over Tabling of Documents

Toronto, March 23. (CP)—Premier Drew and Attorney-General Blackwell engaged in sharp debate with Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal House Leader, yesterday as the Ontario Legislature's Public Accounts Committee began investigation of charges and counter-charges between Mr. Hepburn and Highways Minister Doucett over gas tax collection bonds.

The meeting was agreed on after recent house charges by Mr. Hepburn that a letter was sent to the McAdams Petroleum Company of London by the Highways Department suggesting that all gas tax bonds be placed through the A. E. Ames Company, Toronto firm in which Mr. Hepburn said the Highways Minister was associated.

Today Mr. Hepburn first asked to postpone the hearing but later agreed to proceed.

Wants Official Called

He moved that J. H. Robertson, chief inspector of the audit branch, be called later in the hearing to produce letters and a memorandum on a letter sent out by the department to gasoline companies in connection with the bonds.

Mr. Blackwell said all letters and documents had been tabled by Mr. Doucett in the legislature.

"The deduction is he (Mr. Hepburn) doesn't want to proceed," said Mr. Blackwell. "He has had all necessary time to see these documents since the recess in the legislature. We have material and officials here to proceed".

Mr. Doucett, a member of the Legislature said Mr. Doucett had discussed between Mr. Robertson and other officials on the matter, but Mr. Hepburn's order asking for tabling of documents had not been acted upon.

"Mr. Hepburn Eglin is not prepared to face the music", the Premier interjected. "All documents have been tabled".

"This is another example of the reckless statements by the member for Elgin", Mr. Blackwell said, adding that the letter sought by Mr. Hepburn and sent out by Mr. Robertson had been tabled.

"Not Satisfied", Say Hepburn.

"I'm not satisfied", said Mr. Hepburn. "There are various letters sent out to the McAdams Company and circulated to other companies which have not been tabled".

"We should get ahead", Mr. Drew countered. "The McAdams Company got an average dividend from the government when Mr. Hepburn was Premier of $1,100 a week. This is the fellow who didn't have a feather to fly with when he became Premier".

"Order", the Liberal Liberal members of the committee.

Mr. Hepburn said the McAdams Company only got the business with the government from Pure Oil when it was bought by Mr. Blackwell declared was not proper evidence, Mr. Hepburn added his statement.

Opposition was raised to the proceedings by A. Belanger (L-Prescott) who said Mr. Drew's attitude was "unfair" because it was not deliberately breaking the rules".

Mr. Drew and the committee, the Imperials Fuels, Ltd., and the McAdams Petroleum Company, both of London had done business amounting to $366,000 and $380,000 respectively with the Liberal government. Mr. Drew tabled the returning officers' reports, but when the committee proceeded he and Mr. Blackwell said they objected to the sealed statements when Chairman R. D. Evans (L-Essex) began them, and then put.

The committee agreed, on motion of Mr. Blackwell, to subpoena Joseph McAdams and F. J. Moore, officials of the two London companies.

J. D. Miller, Deputy Minister of Highways, told the committee that a letter of April 14, 1941, to the companies suggesting that all collector's books be handed through Mr. A. R. Wilson Co., had been sent without being referred to Mr. Doucett. It had been sent by the larger companies suggesting a group plan of handling the gas tax collections, but participation in this plan had been discretionary. To his knowledge, said Mr. Miller, none of the companies had entered into it with the Wilson Company.

After questioning by Premier Mr. Hepburn stated that the committee adjourn on the grounds that no witnesses had been called to table that letters, with the amount of bonding had been sent to other companies than the McAdams Company. He believed the committee should not meet again until the correspondence had been tabled in motion made by himself and passed the House in accordance with a by the House.

No Basis for Report Of Peace Proposal

Dublin, March 23 — (CP)—David Gray, United States Minister to Eire, said today there was no basis in fact for a report that Prime Minister Eamon de Valera had passed along to him a German proposal received from the German Minister in Dublin, Dr. Eduard Hempel.

The London Daily Telegraph today said that Frank Gallagher, Irish dispatch saying Hempel had approached Mr. de Valera with peace proposals which were turned down by the American Minister in Dublin. The British paper added that it had no knowledge of any such proposals.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

PRELUDE

At the uncanny moment of a cloudy winter dawn—just as the lights on Fifth Avenue went out, the snow aborted—if WPA workers struck a soft, but solid object. It was the body of a girl, lying in the snow. Above it the body was hot as though burning up with fever!

Heat stroke on a December night with temperature at nine above zero! Strange, thought Inspector Foyle. So did everyone else, until Dr. Basil Willing, psychiatrist attached to the district attorney's office, happened to think of tarantism! And what was thermol, every one asked. He told them—and then pointed out another fact; the dead girl's resemblance to the most publicized debutante of the season, beautiful Katherine Jocelyn, was too close to pass over without asking questions.

From this grotesque situation, the author develops an excitingly original and striking murder mystery built on the grim fact that lurking within the law today is a destructive menace against which the police helplessly flounder. The reader is given all the pieces of the puzzle to put together—if he can.

CHAPTER I.

The snow began in full Tuesday, about cocktail time—huge flakes whirring spirally in a north wind. In the dormitory of Lenox Hall building on Worth Street, clerks of the Legal Aid Society and little flags in a relief map of Manhattan. The director of legal education was calling out his "A" organization.

By six o'clock the next morning the "B" organization was out, too. In the middle of the street the snow was packed hard and stamped with interesting patterns. On the pavement it was fine and powdery, piled in smooth drifts by the wind. On the curb and rail it had hardened, to a crusty, white glaze, and it was still falling. The flakes fluttered in the halo of each street lamp like moths.

It was only natural that Butch and Buddy should be on the list of men "available for snow removal". They had been working on a WPA clean-up project that was held up by the storm.

Butch drove the truck full of men through the dark, silent city. Buddy sat beside him, shivering and flexing numb fingers.

They crossed Lexington Avenue, where there were cars and people, and soon right that made the snow red underfoot. They passed into an avenue where there were very few houses was dark. They crossed Park and Madison and came to Fifth. Windows were lighted in the house on the corner and the lift of dance music reached them faintly.

"Kinda lonely," said Butch when there was a pause in the talk without meeting any one.

Just then the truck went out. It was the uncanny moment of a cloudy, winter dawn, when there are no street lights, except the red and green blinks in the air.

"Cripes, what the hell is that?" Butch called, his startled voice lost in the snow. Buddy, jumping down, had pushed most of the snow into gutter, but found that the wind had blown fresh snow on the top of this, until it formed in mounds. Their job was to shovel it into the truck for there were no enough loading machines to go round.

The north wind, racing down the avenue, cut like a knife. Buddy shivered and bent to his work. His shovel struck something solid. He frowned and tried another place. Again the shovel stuck. There was no scrapping sound. It couldn't be asphalt. It was scratching soft as well as solid. He kicked away the snow and blinked.

There was no light but the faint radiance of dawn that made everything look unreal.

Was he seeing things? He crouched and clutched something with his bare fingers—something rigid as a board. Then he screamed.

Butch came running.

"There's a stiff in the snow!" sobbed Buddy. "And it ain't natural!"

"Stiff?" Butch said. "It natural to get frose stiff on a night like this!"

"B—but it ain't frose!" Buddy chattered. "It's—it's—"

Dr. Basil Willing, psychiatrist attached to the district attorney's office, was sitting in an antiquated booth at the unfashionable end of Park Avenue, below Grand Central.

Rather dismal, that early evening, he was settled in the living room of Inspector Foyle, the police commissioner. Firelight made the glass doors of the bookcase glitter, and Foyle's fatuous bluish face had white panelling. Juniper, a soft-spoken Jamaican negro, who had been with Basil Willing since John Hopkins days, served the commissioner with coffee and brandy, murmuring hospitably, "Hey yeas", nah, hey yeas!"

When he had gone, General Archer settled his big, bell-shaped glass, and continued an argument that had started up at dinner.

"I don't know what you mean by saying that all policemen should be psychologists, psychiatrists, and Everyday Life—there's no place for psychology in police work. Police work deals with physical facts—nasty, like the dried bloodstains, waxy fingerprints, and the impossible bits of dirt under a dead man's nails. In half a century one comes to have no way of indentifying the psyche of the murderer. The best detective stories where a man gets murdered in his own library while there are a dozen suspects in the house. When we start out, we look for the person with anybody is—murderer, suspects, or victim. In this library we want a biologist or a chemist on the trail —not a psychologist. . . . Why, when there's a case in point just this morning. Did the evening papers have anything about a girl's body found in the snow on 76th Street?"

Inevitably, Basil rose and scanned the newspaper on the table. Tall and lean, he moved at a measured pace that was the antithesis of "hustle." His mother had been heard to say that succeeded for many things—among them his thin-skinned temperament, more sympathetic, perhaps, and intuitive than that of races on whom the shell of self-protection had clung to harden. The plodders of his profession insisted that he was a living proof of the fantastic theory of Gall, doctor to the mad must be mad himself in order to understand his patients.

"Psychology—living most people who speak several other languages, his English was distinct and unaffected. There was no death from exposure last night. Only mentioned man. A street walker. And the unidentified body of a girl, no details."

"That's the one. The girl. Only she didn't die from exposure. We found her body in the snow, purposely," Archer finished; his voice, which was naturally so close to her identity and I ask you what's good psychology—"

"What's the cause?"

Archer was lighting one of Basil's cigarettes. He inhaled deeply before he answered, "Heat stroke."

"What?"

"Heat stroke."

"Phut—that's impossible!"

"That's not my trouble" with police work. The impossible is always happening. The body was found about six this morning by WPA. Heat stroke—mm-hmm. Remember how cold it was? The body was lying under the snow and there were no footprints, so it must have been there some time. But the WPA men swear it was hot when they found it. Not just warm, but hot as a fever patient. By the time the preciput note got it was still warm. They call it the 'Red Mamma Case.'"

"They would!"

"Inspector Foyle got an assistant medical examiner to do an autopsy at once. Just before I left the office this evening, Foyle brought me a preliminary report. A lot of technical gibberish about being unable to assign the exact cause of death, and then he says: 'the exhibition of the internal organs, namely, heart, lungs, liver and liver, especially, testes that normally are found in the case of deaths from heat stroke.' Archer snorted and stroke." And you say it's not a case for psychiatrists?"

"Perhaps not as sure." Basil picked up the poker unhurriedly and prodded at the logs to be sparked them spirit. "Archer, I'm going to the snow. I don't know what's going on, but I'm sure that it's not natural. Never have there been so many prostrations by heat stroke in a December night. Never have there been so many people found dead in the snow. Even Statistics admits that some epidemic is going on. Pneumonia, cold and exposure. Influenza. Not all this dead body were unusually hot to the touch. Not many showed decay by the cooling."

"But how could it get unnaturally hot to start with?" demanded Archer. "Freeze can't get heat from—from—"

"I don't know your doctor meant to say that the girl died of heat stroke. He was probably just using the term to describe her condition. What about chemicals analysis?"

"No results so far," Archer sighed. "The laboratory fellows can't help feel just what a waste it is. But they can't always tell you what they're looking for."

"Then you'll have to fall back on psychology."

"Psychology couldn't possibly help—when we don't even know who the girl is! That's the point I'm trying to make."

"Are there no clues at all?"

"Nothing. She was about twenty, the doctors say, and a virgin. Her clothes were cheap, very eyes, dark hair, and lashes. No one has been reported lost in a blizzard. But they can't always tell you what's missing."

"Then you'll have to fall back on psychology."

"Hey," broke in Sam, "Couldn't the fingerprints stain be a kinda dye or something?"

"Fingerprints stain is impossible. The complexities are beyond all the internal systems. At first the skin looks red and then discolor. For some of the other symptoms there is no doubt. Signs of heat stroke. Internal organs shattered and ruptured. Blood corpuscles destroyed. Blood poisoned. Kidneys and liver broken down. Cerebral hemorrhage. Fatty degeneration of the heart muscles."

"Phut—" said Basil.

He studied the body. "No fillings. No dental work. Not rich enough for their teeth like that."

"Maybe the clothes were cheap!" protested Dalton.

Basil noted the shabby, black dress with traces of green at neck and wrists, the high-heeled peppy shoes, the cheap, imitation fur coat and things. "They were not in bad taste, but they were all machine-made and shoddy.

"She doesn't look like a girl who would wear furs like that."

He turned to the coat. "Of course, black cloth with no fur. In the lining was a label: 'Bazar de l'Etoile de Paris.'"

"That's the most inexpensive department store in Paris," he explained. "Not even a first-class department store. Her nails are absolutely clean except for a trace of soap—might be any soap. Her clothes are poor quality, and all the clothing that's turned out by the gross. Mass production is the modern detective's worst enemy. Not cost to poor stuff, too, but it has a French label. Probably bought in the white panelling. Juniper, a soft-spoken Jamaican negro, who had been with Basil Willing since John Hopkins days, served the commissioner with coffee and brandy, murmuring hospitably, "Hey yeas", nah, hey yeas!"

Jolliffe Claims Crisis Engineered By Premier Drew

Toronto, March 29. (CP)—The present political crisis in Ontario was deliberately engineered by Premier Drew, Edward B. Jolliffe, official C.C.F. Leader, said today in commenting on the defeat of the Progressive Conservative government in the legislature last night.

"For three solid months," Mr. Jolliffe continued, "he has reasonably followed a course which might have not be accepted by the opposition majority in the legislature.

"He did everything he could to make his own defeat inevitable because he is determined to force an election, if he can, before the end of the year. He knows that when the war ends the policy of his government will be exposed as miserably and disastrously inadequate. "Actually, there's no necessity for an election now. The government ought to resign".

ALIES CROSS LOWER RHINE

Airborne Landings Made On Great German Plain Leading Toward Berlin

Decisive Battle for Europe Now Believed Under Way

Paris, March 24 —(CP)— British, Canadian, Scottish and United States troops of Field Marshal Montgomery's 21st Army Group poured across the lower reaches of the Rhine near Wesel today while the Allied 1st Airborne Army dropped from the skies behind German emplacements north of the Ruhr.

The German towns of Rees and Wesel already had been entered in the early hours of the operation and hundreds of prisoners seized in the fighting.

Montgomery's initial bridgehead was 1½ miles inland. Montgomery said his men "the Allies drove more than 1½ miles inland.

Early field reports said British commandos were the first to smash the vaunted Rhine barrier as the long-awaited attack in the north opened.

Canadian troops participated in action were elements of the British 2nd and Canadian army command—a British tank unit and men of both the U. S. 9th armies, two Scottish divisions—under either British 2nd or 1st

Royal Navy and United States Navy, Canadians included.

That Canadian troops were in the crossings was made in the area of Wesel, rail and industrial city of 25,000 at the northwest corner of the Ruhr.

Though British Commandos storm-ed across the river there and quickly established a bridgehead.

By afternoon, a dispatch from Montgomery's headquarters said, the first pontoon bridge had been completed and the first of the British tanks to cross the Rhine were rolling toward Berlin with the bridgeheads by 12.47 p.m. Saturday—already 2,000 yards—exactly two miles deep.

British in Van.

The British 2nd Army command-ed by Lt.-Gen. Sir Miles C. Dempsey was in the van of the crossings and in the first hours of the advance was going "according to plan," A.P. correspondent Hugh Moore reported.

Tanks already were across the river.

The first British units across the Rhine were from the British 50th Royal Tank Regiment.

British, American, Canadian and Scottish troops poured across the Rhine at perhaps seven places and were "making good progress."

Even as Gen. Montgomery's forces crossed the Lower Rhine, the American 1st. and 3rd. Armies were expanding their bridgehead over their fronts east of the great barrier river on its middle and upper courses.

Red Sweep Beyond Captured Keustrin In Drive on Berlin

Defenders of Baltic Ports Of Danzig, Gdynia Split

London, March 24 — (CP)—Red Army troops were described by the German radio as driving today toward Berlin in a renewed offensive that had swept six miles beyond captured Keustrin to within 31 miles of the capital in its initial phase.

There was no confirmation from Moscow, where a Soviet communique announced that Russian forces had split the defenders of the Baltic ports of Danzig and Gdynia, and were clamping huge pincers on Moravia, Bohemia and Vienna far to the south.

German broadcasts said waves of Russian infantry and tanks had smashed through German defences along the Berlin-Oder River line and had speared to Golnow on the main Keustrin-Berlin trunk railroad.

The enemy asserted he had stalled the Red army drive with a counter-attack at Golnow, but said the Russians still had gained a new bridgehead, indicative battle was in progress.

A thunderous 80-minute artillery barrage and attacks by hundreds of Soviet dive bombers were said to have preceded the assault, into which, Berlin declared, Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army threw 400 tanks and 12,000 infantrymen.

Major Offensive 24 Hour

The major Russian offensive against Berlin is immediately at hand," said a Berlin broadcast in German controlled S.T.S. agency in Stockholm. London sources expected the belief Zhukov had massed 100 divisions, possibly 1,500,000 men, for a climactic drive on Berlin.

Approximately 200 miles northeast of the Berlin from Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky's 2nd White Russian Army halved the Danzig-Gdynia pocket, spearing a three-mile wedge to the Bay of Danzig, mid-way between the big naval base.

His troops captured the coastal town of Zoppot, and at the north-ern end of a three-mile arm to the west, Soldeau officially, three miles south of Gdynia, and at the opposite end seized Schmierau, 2 miles north of Oxhoft.

Link Severed.

At the same time land links between the two ports were severed. Advancing in Pomerania, the Red Canada Informed authorities about the disappearance but so far failed to turn up in the west.

For more than a year and a half Canada has been a stopover Ontario and into New York State checking clues and questioning persons who might be told him regarding his uncle's disappearance.

Work To Knees in Mud.

Late information in the case led the Inspector and District Police officers will be in Brockville next week far from where Hutt once worked. There in a light searching and digging and finally hit on the decomposed body in a shallow grave.

MURDER CHARGE LAID AGAINST CLARENCE HUTT

Brockville, March 24 (CP)— Clarence Hutt, 32, stood charged today with the 1943 murder of Ont-ario 36-year-old uncle as police solved the disappearance of the retired farmer almost two years ago with the finding of his decomposed body in a shallow grave on a back-woods farm in this southeastern Ontario district.

Police laid the murder charge late yesterday at Brockville jail where Hutt had but eight more days to serve of a one-year sentence for perjury in connection with the sale last spring of an automobile to Gordon Hutt, his late uncle, George McFadden.

The charge was laid just a few hours after officers, led by Inspector S. C. Gurnett of Toronto branch of the Ontario Provincial Police, found the decomposed body of the missing farmer, a bachelor who lived alone on a Wilmsburg, where McFadden lived. Hutt and Gordon were sent to view the body of the missing farmer, a Mr. Hutt, by Coroner Dr. Harold Morrisburg for a post-mortem examination in an attempt to determine the cause of death.

Two Years of Search.

Finding of the body ended almost two years of police work in the case of McFadden, who disappeared in July 24, 1943, was not reported missing until some months later. Within a few days of his disappearance, he was last seen leaving Brockville in his car with Hutt.

Hutt returned later driving his uncle's car and told police said he told him his uncle had boarded a train for the west and had said Hutt for the use of the car. Officers added that Hutt later changed his story, saying he had driven his uncle to Ottawa. But McFadden was not seen again.

Inspector Gurnett took over the case after a relative in Western Canada Informed authorities about the disappearance but so far failed to turn up in the west.

For more than a year and a half Canada has been a stopover Ontario and into New York State checking clues and questioning persons who might be told him regarding his uncle's disappearance.

Work To Knees in Mud.

Late information in the case led the Inspector and District Police officers will be in Brockville next week far from where Hutt once worked. There in a light searching and digging and finally hit on the decomposed body in a shallow grave.

GREATEST ARMADA EVER ASSEMBLED HELPING TROOPS

3,000 Allied Planes Smash at Northern Ruhr and is Left Burning Like Torch

By HENRY B. JAMESON

London, March 24 — (AP)—More than 3,000 Allied planes, the greatest armada ever to fly from Britain at one time, swarmed toward northwestern Germany today and joined thousands more bombers and fighters streaming up from continental bases in lashing Germans east of the Rhine.

A huge force of British heavy bombers struck at the northern Ruhr during the night, and pilots reported whole towns and villages were "burning like torches."

Fifty-three spots in the Ruhr area were bombed heavily during the last three days were blasted for the first time by 1,000 bombers at 8 a.m. by 400 Marauders and Havocs of the U. S. 9th Bombardment division.

The British-based Allied air fleets created a English coast in mass formation bigger than any one force in support of ground landings in Normandy last June 6.

Five Bomber Fleets Active.

At 10 a.m. the enemy warning service reported five bomber fleets over Germany.

Fighter escorted said the day was so full of aircraft that it was impossible to estimate the number of four-engined bombers hundreds of fighters were over the combat zone, sweeping a path for the big planes.

The German warning service said bombers and fighters were south of Bremen, over the Wilhelmshaven area, south of Emden and over Hamburg.

The enemy indicated that the smaller forces were in the Ruhr, Munster, Osnabrueck, Hildesheimbruck and Oldenburg.

As London's massive assault was launched an area of at least 1,000 square miles behind the British and Montgomery's troops across the Rhine and Wesel, already secured for by the record Allied bombing offensive of the last 10 days.

The highly successful attacks were made on enemy troops, massed for a well fortified position in which were yesterday afternoon and last night by R.A.F. Lancasters.

Also Hit Berlin

Lancasters also hit Berlin last night for the 22nd consecutive night, shot up two airfields and several trains in the area.

Watchers on the English coast said the Allied air armada was the greatest ever assembled in the history of the war.

"The sky was packed with aircraft," said a coastal eyewitness. "They had to be content to keep on wing and packed together.

"Hour after hour, hour the great Allied aerial cavalcade still was going out. After the armada had passed over a long continent still more were coming from the heart of England, maintaining an unbroken line."

Break-up of German Army Expected In Few Weeks by Washington Officials

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, March 24 (AP) The German army was expected today by Washington officials to begin disintegrating soon.

Officials said the end for a widely-held belief that the war in Europe will be over by the next few weeks except for large-scale mopping-up operations.

There has been no real expectation that Germany will surrender, but Washington officials have regarded here as something capable of surrendering Germany.

Under the unprecedented Allied military pressure of the war's final stage—culminated today by the mass crossing of the Rhine—a political upheaval in Germany is possible, they said.

But for the moment the Nazis retain their terror-grip on the country and no official with whom the subject has been discussed believes that Hitler or any of his top associates intends to surrender.

This prospect foreseen here is that the battered German army simply will go to pieces in the months ahead. The Allied steamroller is expected to pull back into central Germany and then consolidate what is left of defences of the Bavarian mountains to wage guerrilla warfare as long as possible.

This prospect offers Hitle reward for his few old-line non-Nazi junker, officers left in top positions in the army.

From this grows the strong belief that surrender of large units of German forces now may be another Allied blunder without warning. crime records might be able to save something from the wreckage of Germany by giving up while there still is time.

The German army is entering its final battles short of some vital supplies, notably oil, and badly outnumbered by the Allied forces. The German air force is about finished.

By EDWARD D. BALL

With the U.S. 3rd Army Across the Rhine, March 24 (AP) — The 3rd, Army rapidly widened today the Rhine bridgehead which it established Friday after crossing the stream in one of the most audacious of the war.

Lt.-Gen. Patton's troops continued to pour across the river, steadily strengthening the force on the eastern shore.

Enemy opposition remained light. A new blackout permitted correspondents from reporting additional information today. They were permitted to say that the Germans, who were utterly surprised by the initial thrust, reacted late Friday-day with one small counter attack that was repulsed.

Months of preparation and reheasal paid off handsomely as advance troops, reinforced by a steady flow of men and supplies, maintained the pressure on the enemy, which found the amazing coup had caught completely by surprise.

The astounded enemy failed to fire even one burst of fire when the Americans crossed across the Rhine in assault boats Thursday night under a bright moon.

It was two hours after the crossing that the enemy fired the first heavy artillery salvo. American artillery, using the most powerful barrages that outranked the Germans, had a hundred to one.

By late today the enemy troops had been shoved across the bridge and the Germans were shelling, bombing and strafing the crossing site. Patton's lightning army already had driven a wedge two miles deep into Hitler's inner fortress.

It was another of the lightning-like strikes by which the Third Army has been famous.

OPINION HOUSE TO BE DISSOLVED WITHIN A WEEK

Premier Drew Announces Course of Action Has Been Decided On

Toronto, March 24 —(CP)—The fate of Ontario's 21st Legislature, is to be decided within a week, announcement of Premier Drew's cabinet Friday night, but provision was made for the life to be extended until the election will be delivered within the next week and a provincial election.

After a three-hour conference with his colleagues, Premier Drew announced course of action has been decided upon and added that he would say no more "until necessary formalities" have been completed.

This included that immediately the administration's decision will avail its official information by Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews. It is assumed the Premier will call back to the council chamber Thursday night when the government will meet and the lieutenant-governor will be asked to resign and will instead ask dissolution and an election.

Mayor Conference

Earlier yesterday it was reliably learned that Lieutenant-Governor Matthews had assured the Premier he would call the latter to form a government, possibly in conjunction with the Progressive Conservatives. Premier Drew's refusal to comment on Jolliffe's said there was no need of an election and he would not be interviewed, it called upon.

If he should refuse a request for dissolution, the Lieutenant-Governor would have a measure of precedent in the case of Mackenzie-King-Byng controversy in 1926. On that occasion, Prime Minister Mackenzie King asked for dissolution at the first session of the House and was refused by Governor-General Byng. One difference in the two cases is that the King administration was defeated in the House, as has the Progressive Conservative government.

Will Note Supplies

Should the expected dissolution next week, the House may vote supplies and clean up bills and other business, but the bulk of the session's lawmaking program must necessarily remain unfinished.

Still before the Assembly are two important government measures, the Municipal Act and the Election Act, along with other administration bills and private bills affecting municipalities throughout the province.

PRIME MINISTER AT HEADQUARTERS WHEN DRIVE OPENS

Churchill Addresses Troops and Declares Last Big Heave is on

New York, March 24 — Prime Minister Winston Churchill was at Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters when the Allied offensive across the Rhine began, CBS broadcast said today.

Mr. Churchill's message said: "Here I am with the chief of the Imperial General Staff (Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke) and Field Marshal Montgomery's headquarters on the eve of the greatest and most memorable battle of forcing the Rhine.

British soldiers, it will long be told how with our Canadian and United States Allies and other Allies, this superb task was accomplished. The eyes of the world are fixed and the crust of German resistance is broken, the decisive battle for Germany has begun.

"May God prosper our arms in this battle and bless the cause for which we are fighting, our King and country, for dear life, and for the freedom of the world."

Montgomery Gives Address

Gen. Montgomery addressed this message to the British assault troops:

"On the 7th of February, I told you we were going into the ring for the final and last round; there would be no let up, no rest, we would continue fighting until our opponent was finished.

"I told you that this would be a hard round; is going very well on each of the first two days of the battle.

"2—In the west the enemy has been driven back to the line of the flower of at least four armies—the Parachute Army, 5th Panzer Army, 15th Army and 7th Army. The 1st Army, further to the south, is now fighting in the Ruhr.

"In the Rhineland battles, the enemy has had about 130,000 prisoners and there are many more to come. Enemy casualties amount to about 200,000 since the 8th of February.

"3—In the east the enemy has lost all of Pomerania east of the Oder and large part of the Rhineland, and three more German armies have been routed. Enemy armies are within about 35 miles of Berlin.

"4—Overhead, Allied air forces are pounding Germany as never before and it will be interesting to see how much longer the Germans can stand it."

Gen. Simpson's Troops Use Boats Driven by 55 H.P. Outboard Motors

By ROBERT EUNSON

With the U. S. 9th Army East of the Rhine, March 24 —(AP)— Lt.-Gen. William H. Simpson's Ninth Army troops crossed the Rhine under fire in navy landing craft manned by sailors and soldiers and established a bridgehead on the east bank.

Reinforcements from one of the war's most famous divisions, which beat the Germans first in the Normandy hedgerows and later chewed its way through the fortified Linz defences in the first thrust under an earthquake barrage.

Right after the Alligators hit the beach navy-manned landing craft started ferrying in loaded jeeps, tanks, jeeps and bridge supplies.

The navy task force had been training with soldiers in the rear areas.

Also used were LC.V.P.S. which carry a three-quarter ton truck or 36 men. The L.C.M.S. have a crew of five, the L.C.V.P.S. a crew of 4.

Much reconnaissance was required to select the route to get the landing craft to the banks of the Rhine. Engineers were on the right spot at the right time, and they delivered the infantry into the heart of Germany.

FREAK EGG

It may have been that the hens on the farm of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Rose, Marsh Hill, near Stirling, were celebrating St. Patrick's Day, or that they believed that Shamrock Saint had driven some of the traditional snakes from his native soil to think of shock but suffice it to say that one of the "Biddies" down on the Rose hen roosts and deposited an egg that resembled closely one of the slithery denizens that infest the Emerald Isle.

The shell of the egg was soft. It had a half-inch "head" like that of a snake, and its tail tapered to a point from 1¼-inch width.

Mrs. Rose, who retrieved the freak, insisted on keeping it for a shock, but breathed a sigh of relief when she was convinced that the snake had not invaded the sanctum of her egg container.

Market Customers Disappointed as No Syrup Offered

Disappointed customers were very much in evidence on the local produce market today as for the second week-end since the beginning of the season local farmers failed to offer any maple syrup.

Sap runs to date have been very disappointing according to farmers although a few days of thunderstorm night's slight frost there was a flow of sap in the trees and it was expected there would be a good run on Saturday. But the heavy fall of frost in the past ten days, it was stated.

The offering of apples featured the market with best grade Spys selling from 10 cents to 12 cents per quart and cooking varieties at 8 cents per quart and per bushel, with the latter bought at the basket with regular cooking varieties selling around $1.00 the bushel. Best grade of eating apples sold for 75 to 75 cents the peck.

On the inside market eggs seemed slightly easier, prices holding at 32 cents for firsts and down to 30 cents. Mediums were 32 and 35 cents and select 30 cents the dozen. A small offering of fowl was quickly taken up at from 25 to 40 cents the pound.

A good lot of mixed dry wood was held at $11 the cord, while several farmers offered young pigs at $7 each.

NOT ONE

More men started across. Their long boats danced crazily on the water, which was now running too slow of fires on the east bank.

"Where's Jerry?" asked the officer as he cast about for them; "I've got a date with Capt. Raymond Bitney of Bloomer, Wis."

"Maybe it's both," said another captain.

"This is like a picnic," chimed in Lt.-Col. Lord Davenport, of Devonshire.

But about that time the pleb ended. German burp guns on the other side cracked. That was 20 minutes after the first assault troops pulled ashore.

Things Start Popping.

"Things began popping then all right," said Capt. Bitney, as the smashing guns fired blue tracers over way.

From the east bank came bloodcurdling screams as the Americans charged into the enemy guns.

"That was a Heinie," commented Pte. Bruce Hufbauer of Charlotte, N.C. "They all do that when they get close—like cats on dogs."

The first captives told Lieut. Stephen Duke of Cleveland, O., that they had been dumped on the river bank two days ago and that they did not even have time to dig their regiment. Asked why they did not shoot they replied: "We were eating."

Two hours after the crossing our artillery erupted into action — and gave the Germans a hundred for one.

AIRBORNE

200 Miles from Berlin.

The troops of Lt.-Gen. Courtney H. Hodges and Lt.-Gen. Patton were 200-odd miles from Berlin, while those of Field Marshal Montgomery crossed the river 290 to 350 miles from the capital. Gen. Eisenhower's crossings, which the Germans had branded as "unbelievable" meant Mainz, were within 302 miles from the Russian armies on the Oder.

The 3rd. and 7th. Armies were driving into the heart of the Palatinate, capturing its capital, Speyer.

Units of the American navy were moved secretly inland months ago to assist in the new battle, Associated Press War Correspondent Wes Gallagher reported from the Rhine. Nearly every type of landing craft and amphibious vehicle developed in the British and American armies in the past few years was used, and these were operated by sailors.

Britons First to Cross

British Commandos were the first across; the fire-fae-blackened Britons were followed shortly during predawn darkness by waves of Allied troops.

The airborne troops floated to earth later in the day, their white and colored chutes and in swooping gliders. Gen. Eisenhower drew a short distance across the river.

The whole attack was mounted behind a massive 60-mile smoke screen —perhaps the greatest artificial blinder ever established.

With the first light of dawn, engineers rushed to the lower Rhine and started throwing pontoon arms. The German defences had been pounded by days of artillery and aerial attack. The airmen had dangled German communications leading to the rear.

One estimate was that 16 German divisions faced the Allies in the north. These were said to be commanded by Lt.-Gen. Kurt Student, the parachute specialist who was thrashed soundly in the Kleve area last February.

Churchill at Headquarters

Prime Minister Churchill and Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the British general staff were at Gen. Montgomery's headquarters when the great offensive was launched.

Air blows preceding the offensive were the ideal tank country—heavily massive.

Photos showed "whole towns and villages burning like torches all night." Channel side dwellers in Holland, Belgium and Germany saw the size of the fleets since Normandy was invaded.

PRIME MINISTER

"3.—The enemy in fact has been driven into a corner, and he cannot escape.

"Events are moving rapidly.

Defeat is Certain.

"4.—Complete and decisive defeat of the Germans is certain. There is no possibility of doubt on this matter.

"5.—The 21st Army group with now cross the Rhine.

"The enemy possibly thinks he is left behind this great river obstacle. We will agree it is a great obstacle; but we will show the enemy that is far from safe behind it. This great Allied fighting machine, composed of integrated land and air forces, will deal with the problem in its own way and time.

"7.—And having crossed the Rhine, we will crack about in the plains of Northern Germany, chasing the enemy from pillar to post. The German army is fighting hard, on occasion, the sooner the war will be over. And that is what we all desire: To get on with the job and finish off the German war as soon as possible.

"Over the Rhine, then, let us go. And good hunting to you all on the other side.

HITLER SAYS

Hitler declared: "Lord Mighty in Battle' give us the victory in this our fateful undertaking, and we will done in all our battles since we landed in Normandy on D-Day".

Liberal Leader Issues Statement On House Crisis

Toronto, March 24 —(CP)— Mitchell F. Hepburn, Liberal leader in the Ontario legislature, said Friday in a statement that Premier Drew "has pursued a persistent policy of deliberately ignoring and challenging the opposition members who constitute a majority of the elected representatives of the legislature."

Commenting on the defeat of the Progressive-Conservative administration in the House Thursday night, the former premier said:

"It has now reached the point where the sovereign power of the people of Ontario themselves must make the final decision."

Mr. Hepburn's statement follows:

"Premier Drew has pursued a persistent policy of deliberately ignoring and challenging the opposition members who constitute the majority of the elected representatives in the legislature. Never once to my knowledge has he consulted Mr. Nixon, Mr. McLeod or myself before bringing in ill-considered Tory legislation which we must, according to our parliamentary procedure, either support or do as we did Thursday night—cast a vote of confidence into the government.

"I believe his administration to be thoroughly incompetent and that in his handling the very gravest crisis possible. The 700 Statute of Failure in legislation and 32 orders-in-council he promises will be exposed to the public in due course.

"However, notwithstanding Premier Drew's arrogant attitude towards us, the Liberal members are prepared to co-operate with the other members of the House in order to clear up the order paper to the extent of passing legislation which are Bills and in the public interest and further, to vote sufficient supply to carry on the business of Ontario during the period of a general election.

"It has now been clearly demonstrated that a minority government which has no intention of co-operating with the majority of the members has been given power to carry on indefinitely in a democratic country.

"It has now resolved itself to a point where the sovereign power of the people of Ontario themselves must make the final decision."

Shortage of Building Materials Cause Of Endless Delays in Construction

Toronto — It's easy to start building a house in Toronto, the difficulty is in completing it.

There is plenty of material to construct a basement—lots of sand, gravel and cement. There is a shortage or scarcity of everything needed to build the superstructure—all metal, wood and clay products. Some builders refuse to sell new houses that are nearly completed. They've had too much experience with new buyers pestering them day and night to know when the house will be put on, or when even rough floors will be laid, or when the finishing touches will be completed. The builder doesn't know. It's something like trying to predict a finish a house he ordinarily would build in three months.

One wholesaler estimated that more than one-quarter of a contractor's time is spent off the job, scurrying around to get materials that his harried months ahead for his job. Competing wholesalers try to outbid each other's customers with certain materials which, when delivery is promised, have received at a particular time. Then they don't.

Priorities for manpower have been raised in some building supply yards to the level of the demand, but the labor is not available. In other lines plants are busy with war contracts and have not the facilities to produce civilian needs.

All plumbing supplies are difficult to get. Heating has caused a shortage in cast iron grids or soil pipe. The shortage can be attributed to unskilled labor, coupled with unchanging specifications. Result: in at least one foundry making soil pipe at a loss.

Bottlenecks in other lines of materials of little items that sell at near 36 cents apiece. Difficulty to get half-inch galvanized elbows may prevent installation of a water system. Also scarce are sinks, boilers, radiators, hot air furnaces, bathtubs.

"Plumbing shortages are not attributable to lack of manufacturing processes, but to lack of the "missing labor," said a manufacturer.

Lack of Lumber.

One large lumber dealer reported he has no lumber. Specifically in the interior hardwoods, he said the lumbers of prewar years stopped at a couple of years ago. Even sizes in doors or trim. A. J. Bailey, president, Ontario Retail Lumber Dealers, said lumber is a vital need in the direct war effort and there has been available for civilian needs.

"Builders all over the country are using lumber which is not as well seasoned as they would like it to be," said Mr. Bailey. Most lumber dealers in the Province are selling lumber as fast as it comes in fresh from the bush, he said, and so, keep any stocks on hand. Dealers said they don't expect to have to sell lumber to civilians when some of last winter's cut will come in.

Brick Supply Short.

Brick production is largely a matter of labor. A higher priority was given to brick in the Province of Ontario than in Quebec because it was available because most men who can make bricks are not in the army and wants. Bricks are in short supply.

"All hardware is hard to get," a wholesaler said. "Firms making household articles are overloaded with war contracts and subcontracts.

"Nearly every householder in Toronto has a close relative in the services and is putting up with civilian shortages because he believes the sacrifices will get over the thing they want to finish the war," said Clayton C. Hurlburt, president of Toronto Homebuilders' Association.

Spain's Relations With Japan Near Breaking Point

Madrid, March 24 —(AP)— Spain's relations with Japan are strained toward the breaking point Friday as the government formally charged the Japanese with "systematic and premeditated" undermining of nationals in Manila.

Indignation spread rapidly. Whether it would lead to an outright break with Tokyo—and possibly a declaration of war—was not yet indicated.

The government communique made public Thursday night, summarized a list of 172 Spanish men, women and children reported to death by the Japanese while American troops were overrunning the Philippine capital.

The communique did not say whether Spain has officially protesting to the Japanese government. It is known, however, that Japanese Minister Yakichiro Suma was called to the foreign Ministry Monday and asked for an explanation, which it is reported, he was unable to give.

CAT CALLS AND DOG BARKS OVER BILL TO LICENSE CATS

Springfield, Ill., March 24 —(AP)— To the accompaniment of cat calls and barking dogs from spectators, a bill proposing licensing of cats was introduced in the House of Representatives Wednesday. Prescribing a fee of $1 each, and penalties of the bill, would be a crime and punishable by a fine of as much as $100 and a jail sentence up to 30 days or both, for persons "encouraging cats to catch birds."

2 TORONTO POLICE OFFICERS CONVICTED OF ASSAULT

Mayor's Brother Shot and Killed

Gary, Ind., March 24 —(AP)— Lawrence P. Finerty, 46, brother of Mayor Joseph E. Finerty of Gary, was shot and killed Saturday afternoon early Friday at the rear of his home in Highland, a Gary suburb, shortly after he and his wife had returned from a wake.

Manual Waller Scott of Highland said it was "an out-and-out gangland killing." He said it was carefully planned and that no amateur did the job.

Mrs. Virginia Finerty, the widow, said her husband was shot by "a man who fired one charge into her husband's head from a sawed-off shotgun."

Mayor Finerty, in a statement about his brother's death, said "although I have heard that Larry had been mixed up in racketa from time to time, I didn't think he had any connection with them since he had gone into business. I don't know how to explain his murder."

Homecoming to Liberated Country

There has been another homecoming, that of Queen Wilhelmina of The Netherlands who visited after nearly five years of exile from there this week the liberated portions of her native land and saw the evidence of war's desolation.

As the Germans are beaten back and crushed everywhere people who have fled before the enemy have hastened and are returning home after the years of German domination. These homecomings are events which cause a surge of emotion in those who have passed through the torture of living under the German rule or have had to dwell abroad. Most of the people had to suffer under the Nazi yoke, many of course of late by younger men got away through their keen-wittedness to serve the Allied forces. This is true of The Netherlands, of Norway, of Denmark and other countries. Those who were compelled to live subject to the enemy's occupation stood loyal in the face of hardships and shortages of food and it is hence not to be wondered at that when the Queen of The Low Countries went home her eyes were filled with tears as the thought of the fortitude of those who dwelt under enemy rule and helped by sabotage the cause of freedom.

Norway holds large bodies of German troops and those who came to dominate that country will probably never be able to get back into Germany for Norsemen harass them. Allied forces see to it that the sea is closed to any movement of Germans across to occupied Denmark or to Germany.

Denmark is yet wholly under the enemy occupation, but it has been a country much sabotage by the Danes who have hatred and detestation for the invaders. Denmark still suffers under the Hun but the clouds are lifting and the Danes can see that not far distant is the day when Denmark will be rid of the Germans.

So across Europe these returning exiles are coming back following the steps of the Allied armies on the East and West.

Flour Mills Come to People

Mobile flour mills, each able to supply the needs of 50,000 people, have been specially produced in Britain for liberated Europe.

The United Kingdom authorities evolved the idea of an emergency flour plant when the Allies first landed in Italy and realized that the mills destroyed by the enemy could not be restored quickly enough to feed the people. Leading dietitians were consulted and it was decided that the best temporary solution was to provide means of producing locally sufficient quantities of well ground 100 per cent wholemeal, which could be manufactured with simple equipment.

Despite their large output of 16 cwt. of wholemeal flour per hour, these mills are small and so simple that they can be operated by unskilled labor. Each unit is entirely self-contained and mounted on skids so that it may be easily moved from place to place. It is equipped with enough spare parts for a year of continuous work, operating if necessary for 24 hours a day.

Mandalay

Mandalay which has again come into British hands is one of the best known place names in the language; since a poet named Kipling who knew the ways of the East wrote his stirring ballad. Countless singers have sung the words which are music in themselves along with the setting that is so well known.

The city is about the size of Ottawa, says the Ottawa Journal, adding that "it was built in 1856 as the capital of an independent Burmese King, Mindon. It is, or was before the war, a great Buddhist religious centre, full of monks and containing a great many pagodas and monastic buildings."

Mandalay was given attention first by a poet and then in this war by its strategic position on the Irriwaddy river. Everyone can remember when the conquest of Burma was undertaken under Admiral Mountbatten and now the full measure of the British successes in that land are being understood by the reading public. The task has been one of the most trying, one of the toughest jobs of the war and it has been carried out with success after success against insects, snakes and disease and transportation problems which have been some of the most onerous and difficult of the whole Second World War.

His Majesty the King has sent a message to Admiral Mountbatten bearing the congratulations of the Empire calling the victory at Mandalay a "notable landmark" in the war.

There was a day when the successes of Japan in the tornado on the lands of the Far East was most threatening but through brilliant strategy, intense effort and the courage of brave men of the British forces in Burma, of the Americans in the islands of the sea and especially in the Philippines and of the New Zealanders and Australians the menace is being steadily ground down, the Japanese driven back until control will be the battle of Japan. In fact already that battle may be said to have opened with the mighty raids by air on Tokyo and other cities of the homeland of the Japanese containing targets.

If the inspiring strains of the music of "Mandalay" run through the heads of the people of the Allied Nations these days it is because they have witnessed and seen Burma and the other successes of the Allies in the East. And through many minds not only the music but the words of the song will run,

"On the road to Mandalay,
Where the flyin'-fishes play,
An' the dawn comes up like thunder
Outer China 'crost the Bay."

For the British have come and the Japanese are going. Mandalay of course signifies the power that is destroying Japanese militarism and recovering the territories which the Nipponese stole in their treacherous and sneak outbreak of war.

Burma and the Philippines unite to draw attention to the fact that for the Hun and Jap the same fate is being carved—both the Axis powers are on their way out as threats to the peace and security of growing nations. Both Tokyo and Berlin have witnessed the same course. the Jap and Hun aggression, the sudden growth at the start because the enemies were armed to destroy mankind, then their reaching of a pinnacle of evil territories gathered as loot and in the third phase, the falling-away like a mountain of ashes blown by the winds of freedom which are sweeping the remaining strength of the two aggressors in Germany and in Burma and other territories the Japanese had occupied.

The conquest of Burma means a deep impression has been made on the East. Formerly the Japanese made prestige for themselves but it is passing swiftly and Britain has shown her ability to life up to her great prestige in the East as in the Western World.

Snow "Fleas"

(Cornwall Standard-Freeholder)

Workers in the maple woods during the "sugaring" season sometimes find dusky patches on the newly fallen snow. Examination reveals that the patches are formed by countless thousands of small, jumping insects. These insects are commonly referred to as snow "fleas." According to Dr. F. A. Urquhart, of the Royal Ontario Museum, they are not related to fleas at all and should be called "spring-tails."

Spring-tails are active throughout the year beneath the bark of fallen logs. During the late maple sugar season the sun is sufficiently strong to warm the logs in which they are living and the insects venture forth and are found on the snow. Although they are a nuisance in maple sugar camps because they get into the sap, they're otherwise harmless and the name "spring-tail" has been applied to them because they do possess a springlike "tail" or fork-like furcula on which permits the insect to jump and because they jump they have been misnamed "fleas."

TO THE YOUNG

Pay no heed to us, dreamers youthful!
We are the old, and our wisdom is stale.
We are doubters, all of us, to be truthful.
We have gone timid, and fear to fail.

We have no courage for pioneering.
We have no faith in the strange and the new.
We are forever the past revering.
Thinking no glory is left for you.

Pay no heed to us! Go your own way!
Follow your dream till you make it true.
We are content with the safe and the known way,
You who are youthful must shape the new.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANNINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

30 YEARS AGO

March 26th., 1916.

The Rev. Dr. Brown, pastor of Holloway Street Methodist Church, went to Toronto today.

Mr. Gordon Reeves is visiting at his home on Ontario Street.

Mr. Fred R. Osborne of Calgary, an old Belleville boy, is visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Robb, who have been spending the winter at Long Beach, California, will return home shortly by motor car.

Mrs. G. T. Raymore, formerly Miss Bertie Osborne of this city, is visiting her mother, Mrs. O. B. Scantlebury, College Hill.

Mr. William Burke of Ottawa, and Mr. Patrick Burke of Montreal, Pakla, are here to attend the funeral of their father, the late Burke, who died on March 31st, at the age of 86 years. He was one of the oldest of the old settlers, resident in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hardwick were pleasantly surprised by a party of young people at their home on Bridge Street last evening, the occasion being the anniversary of Miss Master. Cecil Hardwick's birthday. A very pleasant evening was passed.

30 YEARS AGO

March 26th., 1916.

Mrs. Daniel Foster is observing today the 80th anniversary of her birth. Many friends will be pleased to extend her their congratulations and good wishes on which this appears.

Up to noon today the sum of $17,000.00 had been contributed to the Long Patriotic Fund, the objective of which is $30,000.00.

The flooring of the footbridge is being renewed today and more too soon.

The annual tea meeting at the Tabernacle was a most enjoyable affair and was largely patronized. The arrangements were in charge of the members of the Ladies' Aid and they deserve much credit for the success of the event. Mr. John Elliott acted as chairman.

40 YEARS AGO

March 26th., 1906.

The hockey season is about over and sports lovers are wondering if Belleville will have a rink next season. Many people think that a good up-to-date rink would pay.

Mr. J. Earl Halliwell, barrister, of Stirling, was elected Grand Master of the Royal Black Knights of Ireland at the Sackville Castle at Ottawa recently.

Mr. Irwin Wallace is home from Montreal on a short visit.

50 YEARS AGO

March 24th., 1896.

Destroyer Love To Pick Up Airplane Pilots Out of Ocean

By ERNIE PYLE

(Copyright, 1944, Scripps-Howard Newspaper Alliance)

In the Western Pacific —(Delayed)—Destroyers love to pick up airplane pilots out of the ocean. When they rescue our Lieut. Jimmy Van Fleet, all the officers on the whole planet had plunged over the side, it was pilot-rescue No. 18 for them.

They keep a book-score on it, just as carriers keep a box score of the planes they shoot down. They even keep records of their speed and try to set a new record. They succeed, too. Jimmy seven minutes after he went over. Their record rescue is three minutes.

On the destroyer they put Jimmy to bed, got him a hot drink of rum and some morphine into him, and sewed up the gash in his scalp. The doctor joked as he sewed, telling Jimmy he was sorry he couldn't find a bigger needle, so it would hurt more.

Jimmy was nightmarish all night. He didn't get sick at his stomach until next morning, when he tried to get some breakfast down. He had a headache next day, but after that he was all right.

Destroyers treat rescued pilots as though they were kings. They put Jimmy up in the skipper's private cabin, since the skipper was on the bridge day and night anyhow.

Jimmy wore the skipper's bathrobe and house slippers and underwear. The skipper came in a couple of times to take a look at him, actually apologized for intruding.

Fishing out pilots is such a frequent occurrence that the skipper even keeps a bundle of razors and toothbrushes in his medicine cabinet for such sudden guests.

By the time Jimmy got up, the laundry had washed and pressed his clothes. He didn't have his wallet with him, so his pictures and private papers were spared a scrubbing.

This certain destroyer has fished out so many pilots that they have a scroll already printed up for each one, and all they have to do is fill in the name. It's a picturesque certificate like you get when you cross the Equator.

Across the top of Jimmy's scroll was engraved the words—"The Order of Forgiveness for Dripping Aviators."

And beneath it was this—"Know ye that Lieut. James Van Fleet, on such and such a date abruptly approached the Equator in a forward direction due to the peculiarities of his aircraft, and being unprepared for the honored as a Blank's dripping aviator."

Engraved over the scroll was a huge arm reaching out from a destroyer, hauling a man out of the ocean by the seat of his pants.

They returned Jimmy to us three days later, when they were delivering messages and mail from the flagship. They sent him over in a breeches buoy, which is a sort of heavy line strung between the two ships.

We got Jimmy aboard, and then we sent something back across in the chair to the destroyer. You'd never guess what it was. It was 20 pounds of ice.

Our carrier always does that when a destroyer rescues one of our pilots. Apparently all carriers don't, for the destroyer sent back a scribbled note saying "Thanks a lot. This is the nicest thing that has ever happened to us."

After they told me the whole story, I sent a message back to the destroyer asking for the names of the men who rescued him. The destroyer came right back:

Lieut. (jg) Thomas Sinclair, First Class Franklin Calloway, of (4033 Oakland-st.) Philadelphia, and the one Third Class Melvin Collins, of (102 North Vine-st.) Ottawa, Iowa.

They're smart on that destroyer. Because a few hours later here came another message saying "If Jimmy successfully operations off Leyte last fall—"

Jimmy Van Fleet is 26, and in civilian life was a lawyer in Cleveland.

Capital Closeups

Ottawa, March 30.—(CUP)—The new session of parliament resulted in the eviction of 50 key staff members of the Health Department from temporary quarters in the House of Commons.

This city of cramped space had nothing to offer in the line of office room when Health Minister Claxton established his organization, custodian of the country's health and reconstruction after family allowance payments.

He retained some room in the old Canadian Bank of Commerce building, but was not a welcome tenant as Veterans Minister Mackenzie also was short of room.

So he squatted in the parliamentary offices and took over many suites bearing the labels of other ministries. Black and white cardboard signs were tacked over the brass ministerial plates and the business of the department was launched.

But then parliament was prorogued and the 50 were transferred to date some members. For instance, the arrival of Garfield Case, new Progressive Conservative member for Grey North, means that Hon. G. O. (Chubby) Power will lose his job as a part or his former Air Ministry suite on the fourth floor of the House.

The new Air Minister, Col. Colin Gibson, moves into the Power suite and merely has the Air Ministry sign changed. Power's office is a Privy Council office and substituted for Hon. Brooke Claxton's suite on the floor. Trade Minister MacKinnon is the acting Revenue Minister.

Thoughts From Abroad: Needing a drink after the prorogation party in the House was PM.-Lt. Rene Jutras, of the Commons' youngest member.

He doesn't know whether he will stand for election, but says he was a couple of times last fall when the rebounds from conscription were unfortably near his station that he might have got back to Canada "to speak his mind."

"The tall, allen French-Canadian will be back," predicted one of the national conscription controversy with conscription of conscription.

Surveying what appeared to him to be hasty, "ill-considered amendments" made in the heat of debate he made we want to fly home and vote against them, but was unable to guard their word for I'm sure they'll be passed in the end. Conscription is given abroad under strict circumstances, he says, and only major operations with anesthetics and bone setters, but the Army.

WHAT SHOULD CHILDREN WEAR

Children need more protection than grown people. Keep them warm but not overheated. Keep their feet dry. Change their underwear and their dresses frequently. Keep their rooms cool. Keep them out of drafts. Keep them away from people who have colds. Keep their noses clean. Keep their mouths clean. Keep their hands clean. Keep their bowels regular. Keep their appetites keen. Keep their weight up to normal. Keep their eyes and ears and throats examined by a competent physician. Keep their teeth in good condition. Keep their tonsils and adenoids out if they are diseased. Keep their minds free from fear. Keep their bodies free from worry. Keep their hearts free from anxiety. Keep their souls free from sin.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

"Dead" Teeth

Do you agree that a "dead tooth" is a menace to health as long as it remains in the mouth?—(Mrs. L. M.)

While I was 13 the dentist removed all nerves from a number and filled the space. X-rays do not disclose all of these teeth but I have been told by dentists I have advised extraction—some phalidian names, others do not.

(P.D.C.)

Answer—Yd sacrifice such a tooth only when good clinical evidence of some damage to health warranted. Never on X-ray evidence alone. A tooth which has had its nerve properly called "nerve") has been removed is not "dead" necessarily, but may be quite serviceable for many years. Somebody should bring suits against dentists and or physicians who arbitrarily advise extraction of dead teeth. Some of the best of the atrocity might reasonably claim at least $100 compensation for each tooth so unnecessarily sacrificed.

Change

Mother is in the change and has a lot of trouble with her feeling.

Answer—Send a stamped envelope bearing your address and ask for (no clipping, please) pamphlet "The Menopause."

WORMS

I have Ben Told eel raw carrots will rid the body of worms.

(W. M. KER.)

Answer—You ought to know Ben by now. Carrots doesn't is a booklet dealing with worms, household pests, vermin, copy mailed on request to The Inquirer and a stamped envelope bearing your address.

Clippings

Why are you so difficult about clippings?

(P.J.)

Answer—Clippings waste our time, are too easily lost. If you will ask for them in your next note you will not understand what it is all about anyway.

Hazards of Arctic Convoying

By LT.-COMM. PETER CRANSHALL, R.N.

I have seen a lot of carrier flying. It is a dangerous job at the best of times even when the sea is calm and wind and weather favorable. When the carrier is a converted merchantman, pitching and heaving in an Arctic sea on the British-Murmansk run—then the tiny flight deck is covered in snow and the water is so cold that a crash over the side may mean the loss of an arm or leg through frostbite—then it becomes just about the most unpleasant form of flying imaginable.

It is not pleasant even when you don't have to fly. When you stand a four-hour watch at your gun or on a look-out platform or on an open bridge and wait for something to happen—while the cold creeps up from your fingers and toes and your arms and through your whole body until you can feel nothing at all and then very slowly, you begin to notice the pain of being near freezing. Then, after a while, there is nothing but the pain and waiting—waiting—can go below to mess deck or wardroom and try to snatch a little warmth before the next spell of duty.

Those are the conditions under which the men who sail the convoys from Russia to Russia and back again have to live—and to fight.

I know this sea lane where there is almost perpetual darkness in the Winter, where the sun never sets in Summer, where the temperature is often 50 below zero, where all the power of nature combines with the ingenuity of man to increase the horrors of war—yet this sea lane provides the most rapid means of carrying British and American supplies to Russia. That is why the convoys had to go through at all costs; there was no practicable alternative.

The Nazis, too, realized the vital importance of the convoy route to Russia. The German admiralty gave orders that the Allied convoys must be smashed, that no effort be spared to do it. The result was a tremendous onslaught consisting of every type of ship and aircraft that the German command in Norway could muster.

Then came the battle of the destroyers. In April, 1942, five old lease-lend American destroyers manned by British crews drove off seven of the modern German Narvik class in a spirited action which lasted for two and a half hours. Three days later, the same convoy was attacked by eight U-boats, but the commodore and his ship were the first casualties. Nothing else was last seen in the water, a half-smoked cigar in his mouth, waving on the remaining ships. That battle against the U-boats lasted for four days and nights.

But there were not only submarines. The next convoy to Russia was attacked by 238 waves of bombers. Thirteen ships were sunk, but the remainder sailed on with their valuable cargo of tanks, munitions and aircraft. The struggle had begun in earnest and the first big sacrifices had been made, but the ships got through.

The next convoy provided, perhaps the grimmest story of all. The main escort forces were detached in order to try to intercept the Tirpitz and other German heavy ships which had been reported at sea. The convoy itself steamed northeast, but was intercepted by an enormous force of dive bombers, torpedo boats and U-boats which destroyed 24 of the 35 merchant ships.

It was a strange scene of butchery which had an added poignancy because throughout the days and nights of the battle the sun never set; there was none of the mercy of darkness to relieve the agony.

But there were still a few ships afloat. They could still get thru. The commanding officer of an escort vessel took the remaining merchant ships under his command, and together the little party pressed slowly northwards and into the polar ice cap. There they went to ground; they let their ships' fires die out, they painted the southern side of their ships white, and they waited.

To the south they could see German reconnaissance aircraft looking for them, but their improvised camouflage was so effective that they were not seen. They stayed in this strange hide-out for days until the distant roar of the battle had ceased, until the sky was once more empty, until the ice lay still and quiet all around them and the bombers went home. Then, very quietly, they flashed up their boilers and began to creep steadily eastward along the edge of the ice floes until at last they were able to turn south towards Archangel. Once again the Germans had failed, in spite of every advantage, to annihilate the convoy.

After this action it was decided to increase substantially the size and numbers of the escorting ships. The threat of the Tirpitz could not be disregarded. The ever-increasing air attacks had to be met and overcome. And so in the next convoy, in August, 1942, a large part of the British battle fleet put to sea in a gigantic covering operation. The Tirpitz did not put to sea; had she done so she might have saved the Navy and the R.A.F. the trouble of sinking her later on. Another and very important unit was added to the convoy escort on this occasion—the aircraft carrier.

Many friends of mine, flying in Swordfish, from such carriers have had to be lifted from their open cockpits after landing because they were frozen in their seats and could not move without assistance.

During one recent Russian convoy run British pilots operating from two American-built escort carriers completed a total of 1,600 hours in the air on that one trip alone. Most of them were flying Swordfish. One of them was lost in spite of determined air and submarine attacks.

depth-charged and sank a U-boat—several others were damaged. Not a single ship of the convoy was lost in spite of determined air and submarine attacks.

Jap Island of Formosa Is Ruggedly Beautiful

Formosa has had a half century of experience with Japanese colonial prosperity and has found it means prosperity for just one people, the Japanese. Now its predominantly Chinese population can look hopefully toward the armies of General MacArthur and the armadas of Admiral Nimitz for rescue from the Nipponese overlords, Dwight Pennington writes in The Kansas City Star.

Only 225 miles north of Luzon, Formosa is a logical stepping stone in the campaign to drive the Japs back to their native islands. In Japanese hands it remains an obstacle to any landing on the China coast, less than 100 miles to the west. Americans could make it not only a base for attacking the Chinese mainland, but one lip of a pincers which, in conjunction with Luzon, would seal off the China sea route to Indo-China, Malaya and other occupied areas to the south. It is also on the route from the Philippines to the Japanese homeland, and the 700-mile gap is bridged by the stepping stones of the Ryuku, or Nansei islands.

Training Ground for Japs.

For the Japanese, Formosa has been a training ground, a staging base for attacks in more remote areas, a centre for naval and air craft operations, and a source of food and raw materials. Its value has been acknowledged by the United States in numerous air attacks, some of them by carrier-based planes.

But Formosa suffered an air attack long before the Americans entered the war in the Orient. The Chinese surprised the world, and especially the Japanese, by sending eight planes on February 22, 1936, to attack the capital and nearby cities. It was the first time since 1884 that territory of the Japanese empire had been subjected to enemy attack.

Before Pearl Harbor, Formosa was afflicted by only a comparative handful of Nipponese marines, and most of these considered their residence in the island temporary. In all, they probably numbered some 300,000. There were 5½ million Chinese, definitely under the thumb of the ruling group, and perhaps 150,000 aborigines not well enough suppressed, for they occasionally lifted heads from Japanese and Chinese campfire hunkers to add to the skull collections in their mountain huts.

Overlords Remain in Cities.

For the most part, the Japanese did not venture into the mountains, but remained in the cities and the rich valleys, drawing extra pay because they were away from their homes. If overcrowded homeland. About 1940, thousands of troops were poured into the island. The world was to learn later that they were being trained for jungle fighting in the most difficult terrain, preparatory to mass assault on their mountains.

This mountainous area mountains stretching up to almost 13,000 feet in the north—one-fifth the size of Missouri—is as widely beautiful as any in the world. A semi-tropical climate and rainfall ranking in places with the heaviest in the world produce rich vegetation. So it is truly the island beautiful—"The Formosa" as Portuguese navigators, who discovered it for the western world, exclaimed at their first glimpse. The name seemed to fit so well that subsequent Japanese efforts to change it to Taiwan had little response from the remainder of the world. Chinese Went Own Way.

On Formosa, though, the Japanese were in full control. They did their best to alter the Chinese way of life. Only Japanese were taught in the schools. Chinese were not allowed to publish newspapers. Shinto shrines were erected, and efforts were made to compel the Chinese to worship there. But the Chinese, with passive resistance, went their own way and maintained their identity.

Some benefit in the way of commercial and economic progress have been provided by the efficient Nips, in the interests, of course, of their own convenience and increased revenues. Railroads and highways have been built. Headhunting has been all but eliminated. The tea and camphor industries have been developed to important export proportions, and the fertile plain along the west side of the island has been put under cultivation. Most of the work has been done by the Chinese.

Camphor Main Product.

Camphor, of which Formosa was the larger exporter in prewar years, is handled by a government monopoly. A Japanese, writing in 1907, pointed out that camphor was an essential ingredient of smokeless powder and boasted that "fortunately for us Japanese, practically the whole of the world's supply" comes from Japan and Formosa.

Obviously, new processes have ended the dependence of powder makers on natural camphor.

In Formosa, the best camphor trees are found at an altitude of about 4,000 feet. Great forests of them stretch through the interior, the trees often reaching a height of 30 feet. Such a tree would keep a single distillery stove busy several years and produce camphor valued at perhaps $6,000. Smaller trees are roughly cut by small crews of camphor hunters, usually Chinese.

Camphor Process Explained.

To obtain the camphor, the wood of the tree is chopped out and the chips are placed in a retort above boiling water. The fumes from the retort pass through coils submerged in flowing water from a cold mountain stream, to be condensed into white crystals resembling snow. This is a story of an enterprising native who, on a cold day, mixed some snow with camphor oil to give it the proper odor and sold it to the official buyer as camphor.

Except for the heavy rainfall, the obstacles to conquest of the western lowlands and the valleys where virtually all the settled population lives should not be too great. The rugged heart of the island and the craggy east coast are different matters; but it would seem that these will not have to be taken at once. The Japanese can be certain that the Formosans, among the headhunters they have failed to pacify, and left to the fate they deserve.

AA rations go farther with a Ford V-8 Engine

MERCILESS TESTS on the battlefield were not included in the program when Ford engineers designed the V-8 engine. But five years of war have only proved what a grand engine the Ford V-8 really is.

If you've been slogging a Ford truck through axle-deep mud for mile after mile over war-torn roads; you know what a stout heart the V-8 has.

If you've been nursing the family car along on an AA ration book, you know what economy of gas can mean to a V-8 owner.

There's good news for future Ford owners. Constantly through these war years the V-8 engine has been refined and improved. When you get your new Ford, you'll get several years' engineering advancements lumped into one.

WAGAR—DUNFORD

The church was decorated with pussy willows and daffodils for the occasion, with Rev. George Kelly officiating. Mr. Kelly played the wedding music, and accompanied Miss Ila Dunford, cousin of the bride, when she sang "O Perfect Love", during the signing of the registers.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was lovely in a floor-length brocaded taffeta dress, fashioned on long lines with sweetheart neckline and long fitted sleeves coming to points over the wrists. Her floor-length veil of embroidered net was caught to a scalloped cap of lace and sweetpea bouquet of red roses and sweetpeas. She was attended by Miss Aileen Jackman of Peterborough, in a pink net frock over pink taffeta, with blue flowered hat, and carrying pink roses.

Melville Andrus was best man, and the ushers were Elwood Northey and Charles Dunford.

At the reception, held in the Dunford home, where the bride's parents received the guests in a navy pebbled crepe ensemble, with matching accessories, and corsage of pink roses.

For her going away costume the bride chose a powder blue suit with matching accessories. On their return, Mr. and Mrs. Wagar will live on the groom's farm in Prince Edward County.

Facial Expression Evidence Of the Emotional Outlook

Dusty Anderson is both gay and beautiful.

By HELEN FOLLETT

CHARACTER, or lack of it, is revealed by the mouth as by no other feature. The expression of the lips passes on to the beholder all impressions of meanness—confessions of petulance, selfishness, bitterness or austerity.

There is the nagger's mouth. And the whiner's mouth. Observe the lips of the weak sister who can never come to a decision or her own who must ever be a burden to those members of the family who are strongest. Observe that her lips are soft and flabby, drooping at the corners.

The cheerful, courageous woman has a radiant face; it is alive and alert, carries no cloak, no matter what is happening. Good humor and courage are the duty face as a doleful one, realizing that depressing effect that is the opposite expression has on other invidiuals.

Intolerant Woman

The critical, intolerant woman is tight lipped, keeps her teeth clicked together. In the course of time her face becomes hard and brittle. It looks as if even a ghost of a smile would crack it. Make-up is no help to her; she might as well throw the rouge and the lipstick out of the window; they only give accent to an unpleasant countenance.

An excellent treatment for keeping the muscles surrounding the mouth resilient is this one; apply a heavy cream. Place the first finger in the centre of the upper lip, thumb at one end, second finger at its other. Draw the lip ends up to meet the centre in a Cupid's bow and repeat.

Pleasant Expression

The mouth should grow lovelier with the years, if life has taught a woman anything. If she has learned that one should be sweet and kind to one's fellow creatures.

The woman who has her little hatreds, who likes to think about them and talk about them, will pay for the privilege in her expressions. She will wear a facial expression that is anything but compelling. The woman who is full of love looks beautiful, and nobody loves her.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A "Teen-Ager" Protests

"How old must a girl be to have her love-affair taken seriously?" writes a fifteen-year-old correspondent, Esther B., reminding me that Shakespeare's fourteen-year old Juliet isn't scornfully dismissed as if she were a precocious "teen-ager".

"Is 'first love' a thing to be laughed at and made fun of?" she inquires. "I am certainly as much in love as any grown woman could be. My boy friend is 18, and he too hasn't really loved before. Our problem is a terrific one because we have no money to marry on, but our parents won't even listen to us.

"Didn't we have plenty of great-grandmothers who married at 15 and managed their lives perfectly? In those days, people knew enough at all the romance about 'teen-agers' as if a girl was an idiot until her twentieth birthday.

"My boy friend can't enter one of the service because of his eyes. He is willing to continue his education until so am I. But why shouldn't we marry meanwhile? Our parents could afford to finance us. Don't suspect they were never as much in love as we are, that they don't really know what love means. I haven't wasted my emotion on other boys, so I can give all my heart and soul and self to this one being whom I love and want to spend my life with.

"Is it reasonable to ask us to wait five or six years before we are even allowed to mention this thing that is greater than life itself? Come to our rescue, Miss Fairfax! (Signed) Esther B."

This American Juliet is so unconscious in argument that I am disposed to think her parents make a mistake in not at least talking the matter over with her. While girls of 15,16,are still children, a few are fairly mature at that age and ready to be. In her case, I should think a compromise could be reached between treating her as a child and accepting seriously her wish for immediate marriage.

If the boy in the case is promising, might not a seat an engagement be permitted, with the promise of marriage in a couple of years time, if the desire for it persists? And has it occurred to any grown up that it may be humiliating to "teen-agers" to be treated merely as human beings who haven't yet come to their senses?

Special Library Corner for Camera Fans is Mooted

Just what service can a public library be to a city or community other than in the fulfillment of its conventional role of providing timely and interesting books and serials to the liking of its members?

The above problem is one which for the past few years has been given considerable attention on the part of Corby Public Library staff members and after some careful thinking, Miss Olive Delaney, local librarian, has evolved several new ideas which are certain to further popularize the local reading library.

The first of these ideas and one which it is expected will meet with the approval of many camera fans in the Belleville district is the establishment of a special corner where handbooks on the art of photography will be available. This corner will be made more appealing by a display of photographs taken by local camera users.

While there is no intention of attempting to compete with the fine stock of books on photography now available in Belleville and district, who would welcome the convenience of looking up on their picture taking technique. Each year with the coming of Spring thousands of new fans take up an almost immediate upswing in interest in the hobby. Such a wartime film is hard to get and it is felt, by providing them with complete coverage of the mechanical side of picture taking and dark-room procedure. In addition there are books dealing with correct composition, portraiture and child photography. Magazines on photography will also be available.

It is expected the above corner will be installed by right of the main entrance to the library and will be made more interesting by a display of photographs or "snaps" taken by local camera users.

Here is a chance to a chance to display that prized "snap" for public inspection. All types of snaps will be welcomed; it doesn't matter if the picture is perfect or if the interest is more along portrait lines.

Of Care Given.

Miss Delaney promises the best of care for all types of pictures submitted and they will all be returned later. The staff will be attractively art-corner mounted with cards arranged for identification of the "snaps" which fe dashed.

Present plans call for opening the new corner on the first day of April ist., so fans desirous of seeing pictures displayed therein are advised to get in touch with the library staff immediately.

BURRS

19th Birthday Of Burrs W.A. Marked by Tea

Burr's—Proverbial March weather which prevailed on Wednesday afternoon failed to detract from the enthusiasm of one of the largest crowds to gather at the annual tea party of Burrs Women's Association. The occasion marked the 19th birthday anniversary of the society. Five tables, attractively clad with green and white, accommodated around 160 diners who were loud in their praises of the dainty repast served. Several flowering plants added pleasure to the day. The program was likewise lighted by the presence of Miss Margaret Houston, one of Belleville's talented children, who delighted her audience with three Irish songs. Nine pupils from Bowerman's school under the capable direction of Miss Marion Millet favored with three numbers in song. Mrs. Ralph Preston and Miss Mary Second gave well chosen readings, while much applause followed selections by Misses Moody, Zacharias and Wood on guitar, violin and accordion, and Mr. H. Hall for a step dance. Mr. Murney Parks acted as chairman. Mrs. Floyd Huffman, president, conveyed her appreciation to those who had a part in the splendid attendance and to those who so generously contributed their talent to the program. Returns for the evening were $60.10.

The Marry Go Round

The Matrimonial Primer.

A prospective Spring bridegroom wants to know why he must pay his suits on his wearing a wedding-ring. He wouldn't know, now, neither would he'll discover that there are times when the best of husbands needs a string or something around his finger to remind him that he's married.

Marriage is a state of mind—what lots of men have to learn through the wedding-ceremony are only one per cent married and the other ninety-nine per cent pure bachelors.

Some men are born with a genius for marriage. With others, it is a predisposition; no matter how often they try it, it simply won't "take". A girl usually has a good reputation for marrying a man. But when an exasperated wife asks her husband why on earth he ever married her", it is almost pathetic to see the pleased look of bewilderment that comes into his eyes.

Most marriages are not broken up. They merely sag in the middle and come apart from lack of proper support, when the man begins to think of the woman as the person who censors his diet, makes him wear his overshoes and needs to know where he spends his time.

Every truly happy marriage is a "mutual Admiration Society"; and the trouble with lots of marriages is that somebody stops to criticize. Someone German "Zuliss" for the "Mutual Admiration" of the wedding. Thus, all the star-dust get brushed off immediately.

The mind may "make its own Heaven" but a bad wife can surely make a little hell. . . . They say a husband or a Purgatory is still strewn with cut flowers, rice and old shoes.

One marriage constitutes a higher education in the school of Experience—and a successful marriage rates a Ph.D.

Fashions THAT LEAD THE Easter PARADE

Enchanting Highlights in 1945 Styles

Feminine fashions, the costume look, brilliant color—that's a brief preview of Belleville's Easter Parade. And going in for a bit of fashion fortune-telling, these highlights are forecasted as newsmaking come Easter.

On local streets, one will see little cape suits, capelet-effect coats, dresses with sweet cape sleeves.

Speaking of dresses, look for stand-out back bows, side draped effects, tunic dresses dramatized with bow necklines, cape sleeves. And watch the swing back baby toppers take top honors!

Look for the Directoire influence in Easter Fashions too. Stemming from the 1912 period, they are definitely feminine, strikingly simple. One will see crisp young suits with cutaway jackets with accent of fullness at the back; double breasted coachmen reefers with wide pique revers and deep pique cuffs—very much beau-brummel! Fitted little Eton jackets atop pencil-slim skirts are another evidence of the importance of the Directoire influence. High bonnets designed for flat-top or pompadour coiffures are one charmingly feminine and lovely—the way one's Easter bonnet should be!

Very important too, are fashions that are bloused and belted. For example, one will see the bloused belted line in elegantly simple dressmaker coats, in brief fitted jacket suits, in versatile ensemble coats. And for the perfect finishing touch, look for ladylike feminine accessories to Headline the 1945 Easter Parade.

Coats with a "Dress" Look Important; Capes New; Swing Toppers Click

Fashion looks to fitted dressmaker coats to take top honors in the Easter parade. Nightly Es. too, because they are so very figure-flattering, so elegantly simple and versatile. Gently tailored with softly rounded shoulders, the newest of these dressmaker coats feature deeper armholes, smooth collarless necklines, small belted waistlines—all of which contribute to that feminine air. Real fashion news is noted in cavalier capes, cape-effects. And look for braid accents, new cuffed bell sleeves (so graceful!) rolled scarfs and soft stitching details. Matching navy blue and smart black are big color favorites with a lighter blue, beige, soft brown and grey tones noted. Needless to say, because of their great simplicity, these are marvelous background coats for your fur scarfs, your brilliant quick-change accessories which of course makes them smart practical additions to your wardrobes. Other important coat silhouettes that achieve that "dress" look are shirtwaist coats, lumberjack-effect coats both of which have slightly bloused bodices, cinched in belted waistlines. For those who prefer a more tailored coat, there are sophisticated town reefers with slick two-button closing, flange shoulder detail. That perennial favorite the satin trimmed braid twill reefer is also noted. Full length box coats return for Easter with news in tuxedo fronts, collarless necklines, bell sleeves, braid accents. Bright tuxedo fronts and cuffs are noted for dramatic color contrast! Very practical point about the new Easter coats is that they are all designed to "ensemble" with the print dresses for that important costume look. Speaking about ensembles, the redingote is in the spotlight for Spring! Simple fashion mathematics makes it the top Spring duet because strictly tailored coats and gay prints dresses are made to go with each other smartly—or to step forth solo! Sheer wool, tails, moire or alpaca are perfect mediums for the coats, while rayon crepe and sheers are smooth for the dresses.

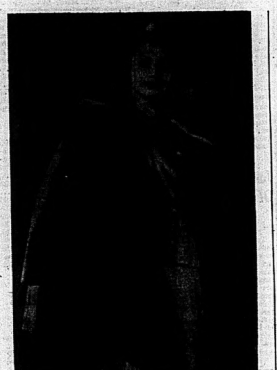
SENTIMENTAL PRINTS EASTER CHECKS

Pretty prints, Victorians prints, delicate scrub prints all these are newsmaking for Easter. Urbane black background prints, animated black with pastel prints —all conversation-ing, prize-ty-making, different! Noted at advance press showings were very new sentimental message prints, some with "I love you" notes! And double check checks for Easter! Checks used for striking contrast on navy or black, with checked bolero topping slim basic dresses. Checked taffeta bows for that stop-look charm! Checked gloves are much in evidence too. For extra-smartness, pink and black striped hose stop slim dark skirts—drama plus. Fashionable little suit dresses will be big favorites and these bandbox-fresh with oversize frilled lingerie bows. Bolero score with vivid stripes dickies, collar and cuffs. Side draped skirts on these bolero suit dresses give them a brand new look. Sophisticated yet young are the navy sheer dresses with brief sleeves and matching fitted jackets—double duty wearability again.

Vivid Pink Spotlighted

Viva Mexico! Viva its brilliant dazzling colors that are newsmaking news in American cottons for 1945! Definitely new and excitingly feminine is vivid pink in colors for casual and date-time charm. Sunbronzed girls, brilliant greens, electric blues, mentions red—these are just a few of the jewel-tones that vivid pink will make fashion headlines this year. Look for them in casual cottons as well as in date-time beauties. Smart sophisticated blazer cottons are scheduled for bigger success than ever this year in dress-up cottons as well as sports clothes. So very fashionable, they combine good looks with great practicality because they stay fresher longer, look cool—and of course they are right for a day at the office as they are for dinner dancing later.



Easter star—Davidge's rose wool suit and topper coat.

Soft Collarless Suits Star; Companion Toppers Important; Bolero Suits Score

Fashionably speaking, all signs point to a bright Easter! Especially so when it comes to suits, which of course will be the No. 1 choice for the Easter parade thru Spring. Slated for top honors is the soft collarless suit which is noted in such a wide variety of style, fabrics and colors that there is a type to delight every taste. Brilliant details of dressmaker details add more fashion news. Wonderfully figure-flattering is the one-button collarless suit with V-shaped detail on front jacket terminating at waistline which achieves a beautifully broad-shouldered, slim-hipped look. Modified dolman sleeves are noted on some of these suits which adds to the costume look. The dressmaker collarless suit with V-shaped front and waistline tucking is also slated for success. But to get back to—much pink (and the fashion spotlight! Shocking pink, pale pink, rose-pink—just definitely pink for Easter! Gold, grey, beige, blue, navy and black are also noted. Another important color underscored for Easter is lime. A pale, yellow-green, it is wonderfully fass flattering and new looking. Perfect partners to these little suits are the young topper coats and these harness when collarless. Broad-shouldered with crisp swing backs, these are noted in matching as well as contrasting color. Very fashionable are the checked topper coats, noted with matching or solid color suits. And of course, there are the young go-everywhere toppers you'll ensemble with all your dresses for that costume look.

BRIGHT COLOR CONTRAST

Watch the suit with the bright jacket—it's new and news for Easter! Dramatically smart for suit-ample, is the bright pink jacket atop slim black skirt—superb color duet! Then there are spirited combinations of black and white checked collarless jackets (again the collarless trend!) atop slim black skirts. The-tailored classics of course are suit with us, but it is the dressmaker suit that is Easter fashion news. Young sophisticated bolero suits return and are scored for big success! Bandbox fresh in navy blue, their brief bolero jackets set off a trim waist, their slim skirts spotlight pretty legs.

NECKWEAR LOOKS BACK

Looking ahead to Spring means turning the fashion clock backward, insofar as Spring neckwear is concerned. Lingerie collars and cuffs, reminiscent of other years, are scheduled for new popularity with the soft dressmaker suits, making the fashion headlines for the Easter parade and after.

PINK AND BLACK FASHION NEWS

Spotlight news and strikingly smart are the background cotton prints, very fashionable in pink and black plaid! Noted are black grounds with pink prints, scroll motifs. The silhouette is slim, young, feminine. Look for pretty pink details as scooped-out low necklines, brief little sleeves, dainty ruffles, slim skirt. Solid black date-time cottons are ultra smart, and simply marvelous with brilliant accessories. Very important color combinations are brown with rose or pink, royal blue and chartreuse, shocking pink and grey. Noted too in dress-up cottons featuring the bowered-up look are high bow necklines with striking contrast achieved by very brief sleeves (almost sleeveless). Is black right on pastel blue. Many use black grosgrain ribbon for under-chin bow, for fashion band down center front giving the cool dress silhouette that new "soft" look. Scallop prints are very effective in this type of dress. Satin striped cottons make fashion news and are under-scored for "Sunday best" wear!

Spring costume refreshment—a groom-fresh white batiste dickie with eyelet jabot.

Easter Accessories Recall Charm and Femininity of Turn of Century Fashions

Ladylike—that's the word for the costume accessories that will grace the charming Easter paraders in this year of 1945. There's a new-old softness, a delicate air of femininity pervading the neckwear, jewelry and other fashion "trimmings" now on view at counters across the nation. Spring travelogues and home-comings, plus the renewed interest in quality and color, result in a wide selection of gorgeous freshness to delight wearers as well as their "public."

Jewelry Turns Sentimental

Lockets, chatelaines and Victorian dog-collars are making news for Spring, and come in many variations, at prices to meet budgets of varying levels. There are the very grand "jewel" types, studded with semi-precious gems, and there are equally attractive costume pieces whose effectiveness belies their modest prices. The lockets are classic and novelty types, many with room for photographs. Velvet and satin ribbon threated with pearls or studded with rhinestones for the dog-collars which are being worn by grandmother, mother and daughter, regardless is their charm. Most of these have matching or at least "corresponding" earrings, in the same romantic mood.

Among the newly re-discovered jewelry fashions are bangle bracelets, in sterling silver and gold-plated versions worn in multiple groups with the new long length gloves for both daytime and evening. Slim or heavy, these bracelets match or mix charmingly, and make unusually attractive gifts.

HATS WHICH RIVAL THE RAINBOW

The new hats for Easter 1945 will definitely tend to be higher and handsomer, though not always wider. A hat that reaches upward gives your spirits a lift and if done with finese is flattering to almost any face and figure. Not all wearers can wear a very large hat, but the smartly simple clothes of the new season all need the drama of an "important hat."

Very Brief Sleeves, Peplume, Side Draped Skirts Score; Boleros, Suit Dresses Important

Feminine sophisticated dresses will be worn by the best dressed ladies in the Easter parade. These will be worn fashionably with ciz-zazzly simple dressmaker coats for that important costume look. As for the dresses themselves, they are cleverly moulded to underscore your best points and show real fashion news in very brief capelet sleeves, in crisp peplums to make your waist doll-size, in side draped skirts to streamline hiplines. Capelet shoulders and sleeves are very significant in the Easter dress pictures and these achieve the important rounded, easier shoulder-line which very dramatically set off suave high necklines. Young new surplice closings lend themselves marvelously to these capelet sleeves affecting that moulded look again. Dresses with beautifully new dressmaker V-necklines are also noted and are accented with feminine-fresh lingerie frills for that refreshing touch. Wonderfully fashionable for the more sophisticated girl are the slim tunic dresses with mandarin or bow necklines, brief cap sleeves, slim belted waistlines. Noted in fresh navy blue, black or vivid flower prints, they are real figure-flatterers.

Redingote Silhouette News

Spotlight news is the sudden flash of fulness noted in dress skirts—the backswept silhouettes! Exquisitely slim, ultra feminine, you'll see it with a ripple of fulness down center back—high fashion definitely! Then there are slim dresses with pert back bustles or bows. Or charmers with provocative back cut peplums. Women with slim hips and slender arms are terrifically versatile and new is the slim back peplum dress with separate lace frilled peplum dickie—double duty beauty for you this Spring! Of course the peplum silhouette is very important for Easter and you'll be seeing crisp ruffle peplums on gay print dresses, peplums on plain fashion effect. Another significant trend noted—dresses with swing skirts—this at outcome of the ballerina skirts we've been reading about from Paris. Three-Goal Spree in Final Period Helps Team to Win 6-5

(By The Canadian Press)

Toronto, March 24 — (CP)—Niagara District is pitted today against the Oshawa-Whitby District in the finals of the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association basketball championship at Central-Technical.

In each of the four divisions—senior and junior girls and boys — a team from one group meets a team from the other. In the senior boys, it's Stamford collegiate and Oshawa Collegiate. Peterboro Collegiate meets Niagara Falls in the junior boys.

Welland high school has a team in both girls finals. The seniors oppose Bowmanville high school and the juniors clash with Cobourg high school.

Led by star forward Johnston, who scored 20 points, Central beat Midland high school 53-31 in a boys senior game that was the class of the meeting. Stamford collegiate from the Middlesex who were threatening at the half, finished with 31 points in the last half. Kettle, with 21 points, was high scorer for Midland.

Albert College Ousted

Lions Goody led Cobourg to victory over Peterboro in a senior girls contest with 16 of her team's points in a 35-13 victory. It was a rough-and-ready contest and Dillon of Peterboro was the most effective for Hamilton in the rugged play. There were nine penalties called on Albert College and by the fifteen. A lively incident occurred when Miss Hill after getting a dislike free-for-all developed with spectators and players participating. A soldier received facial cuts in the fracas.

CHAIRMAN BANS DRAW DECISIONS IN BIG FIGHTS

Maurielello 3-1 Underdog in Betting Wins Decisively From Lee Oma

By TED MEEKER

The ban, as significant as the no-foul ruling a decade ago, was started at last night's Tami Mauriello-Lee Oma heavyweight slugfest at Madison Square Garden where Mauriello, a 3-1 underdog, surprised a crowd of 18,381 (gross gate $101,918) by winning decisively.

Eagan said that Jimmy Bivins-Melio Bettina draw of a week ago when the three officials voted three different ways, Col. Eagan explained his action as "possible before the Lee-Maurielello bout started.

"I have instructed the officials," the Colonel said, "to judge every score along with the round-by-round method. If, for instance, they have each fighter winning five rounds, as happened on one card last week, they are to decide the winner on the total point score. In this way all draws will be eliminated."

Says Attempt on Life Of Goebbels Thwarted

Stockholm, March 24. (AP)—The Free German Press Agency said Friday an attempt on the life of Propaganda Minister Goebbels was thwarted when one of the nightly attacks of R.A.F., Mosquito Bombers on Berlin occurred a half hour later than usual.

The Agency said Goebbels usually went to a centrally-located air raid shelter at the same time each night during attacks, but that on this night there when a time-bomb planted in the shelter exploded.

YANKEES FIGURE ON PITCHING TO HOLD TEAM UP

Four Real Boys in Borowy, Bonham, Dubiel and Donald Will be Back

Atlantic City, N. J., March 24 — (AP) — Pitching strength today figures to make the New York Yankees a pennant contender even if the bubble-ball catcher lack the customary home-run punch.

With first baseman Nick Etten unsigned and unreported about playing and centre fielder Johnny Lindell expecting to be called to navy duty within 30 days, much of the power will be missing from the Yankee lineup.

Second baseman George Stirnweiss, the only major leaguer to get 200 hits last year when he batted .319 and took home the batting prize from George Case with 56 thirty will be the key man of the attack unless he is called to the armed forces. He recently was reclassified 1-A.

In the absence of Etten, Oscar Grimes (.278) who yesterday was drafted to take a pre-induction examination will be on first, Jersey Joe Busso at second, Stirnweiss at short, at short and either Don Savage (.261) or Frankie Crosetti (.239) at third.

Herbert Morris (.302), Red Meisinger (.239) and Lindell (.300), are expected to form the regular outfield trio.

Mike Garbark (.261) leads the German catching staff with rookie Bill Drescher, a .270 swatter at Newark, and Herb Compton, drafted from Binghamton at a .277 season, providing the opposition.

Manager Joe McCarthy has Hank Borowy (17-12), Ernie Bonham (12-9) Wash Dubiel (13-13) and Atley Donald (15-10) from his "44 starting pitcher brigade and 10 other hurlers. Brigham Young product Floyd Sevyes who won 10 straight for Newark and wound up with a 1-1 record for New York, and Joe Page, the only lefthander on the staff.

ONLY A MIRACLE CAN HELP TEAM SAYS DICK IRVIN

Eddolls and O'Connor of Canadiens Are Out for the Season

Toronto, March 24 —(CP)— Montreal Canadiens, two games down in their semi-final series with Toronto Maple Leafs, arrived here today for the third game complete with the respective list of records garnered in the regular National Hockey League season and an even more impressive list of injuries collected in the two games at Montreal.

Canadiens skyrocketed to the top of the N.H.L. entry in the season and coasted home with a comfortable lead over Detroit Red Wings who finished second. They established three individual league records — Maurice Richard's new all-time scoring mark of 50 goals, the mark of five goals and three assists in a single game set against Toronto Maple Leafs and Elmer Lach's total of 54 assists.

But all they have gained in the two games of the series which Leafs won 4-3 and 7-2 is this list of injuries announced last night by coach Dick Irvin: Defencemen Frank Eddolls, out with a bad ankle; centre Buddy O'Connor, out for the season with a broken knee; Lach, suffering swollen ankle, and Richard, nursing a bruised calf. Lach and Blake are expected to play but their efficiency will be impaired.

The once-confident Irvin, who has won seven N.H.L. titles in nine years" several months ago, may have had a premonition of the sad night that "only a miracle" can beat Canadiens into the finals.

Here are the probable starting lineups:

Montreal	Position	Toronto
Durnan	goal	McCool
Lamoureux	defence	Hamilton
Bouchard	defence	Metz Gottselig

Turf Consultant Of an Old Rivalry

By FRED KERNER
(Of Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 24 — (CP)—The Stanley Cup finals, scheduled to open between Detroit Red Wings and Boston Bruins Monday night for the prize to National Hockey League supremacy, will also include managers Art Ross and Jack Adams in the first continuation of rivalry between the two veteran managers in the last decade.

For many a year, Ross and Adams have sat across from each other in the sports arena and battle each other on N.H.L. policy and decisions.

Boston and Detroit both have won the Stanley Cup three times. Twice they have met in the series' finals in which Boston won a game in four straight games, and in 1943 Detroit won in four straight games.

In the intervening year they met in a semi-final series which Detroit won 2-1 and this year the two fourth successive time they meet — also in a semi-final.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

It was Johnny Recolta's turn for the spotlight in the golfers' winter wars when Miami, Fla., Greenshoro, N.C., he breezed through the opening round of the $7,000 open, turned in a 66 to lead Sam Byrd and Ralph Nelson who were two strikes behind.

Truett Sewell of Blooper Fame proclaimed yesterday he was all primed for the 1945 baseball wars. Eagan season as he cavorted on the mound for Pittsburgh Pirates, Boston Pirates at Mineola, Ind. After working out with Cleveland-rookie at the Cubs' baseball camp at Catalina Island, Calif., Phil Wrigley announced he was all primed for the 1945 baseball wars.

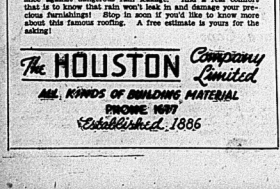
Hamilton Tiger-Cats start an upset when they defeated Hamilton Broadcasting Wanrors ladies 34-28 in the opening game of the semi-finals of the Ontario Ladies Senior Basketball series. High scorers for the winners was Miss M. Ireland with 11 points.

Ted Kennedy, the flying Swede, at last came through with a victory in his tour of the U.S. indoor track circuit when he defeated Wes Kraw of Bainbridge naval training station in the feature event of the night's games at Cleveland, O., in the slow time of 4.19.6 which is actually the world recordholder had been beaten three times by Jim Rafferty of New York.

CAPTURED GERMANS NOT COMPLAINING

Rome, March 24 —(AP)— Recently captured Germans in this front have for the most part set to less enthusiastic about Hitler than Italians who were taken prisoner six months or more ago, Allied Headquarters announced Friday.

Most of them now blame German leadership, lack of adequate training for the newer soldiers, and a shortage of war materials for German reverses.



Toronto, March 24—(CP)—Pretty Roxy Atkins of Toronto has become probably the only girl wrestler in Canada and football could not ask a more popular and capable woman to look after he cause. The 5-foot-2-inch bundle — now Mrs. Norman Campbell — has packed quite a wallop in her western elites to discuss the possibilities of a Canadian football championship series.

From the smithereens around in the west it looks as though football will soon to the skies. But that's the way Roxy does things. All you remember, after competing in the 1934 British Empire Games, Roxy went to the Olympic games in Berlin where she gathered points as well as being judged the most graceful girl competitor. For the record, she still boasts every Canadian open hurdle record as well as holding a U. S. title.

For this year, Roxy's tentative plans call for the playoff in Toronto in the only pro wrestling facilities to stage such a series at the present. At least two Toronto business houses are behind the work entirely by one of Canada's outstanding woman athletes, success is all but assured.

Trois Will Out:

This story comes to Canada in a roundabout manner. Suffice it to say that it happened during a club golf tourney at Lodi links in Delhi, Indiana. The journey drew few entries and after it ended a Canadian made for added fun. Spectators numbered four.

"You were third, sir," came the tactful reply.

Pleased, the major asked how many had turned in their cards.

The steward, bowing low in the style of the Shah, replied: "Three, sir."

Non de Plume:

Boston wrestling promoters have discovered a fitting name for one of their protegee who is starting on the way up in the rassel game. He is advertised as "McKaskill the Nova Scotia Giant." Which is, no doubt literally large Scotsman — killed himself with a broadsword before getting a exhibition of his terrific strength, he picked up a 500's accuracy and used it as a pitchfork. He never was a wrestler — but he certainly would have made good at what they call wrestling these days.

They Like It Rough:

The Ford Hockey Association playoffs at Windsor are not meant for shy-aways. In one game of the series, the Ridgetown team used everything — happened!

Bill Hamilton, one of the goalies, threw his stick at referee Roy Bocchini 40 feet away. His aim was bad, and so Bocchini survived the attack and gave Harrison a match penalty.

2. Rocky Bockhorn, coach of the team Harrison plays for, had to be banished from the bench — with the assistance of city police who escorted him right out of the rink.

3. The 181 finally materialized into a free-for-all.

Bonnemort, who had been told by Rickey and not much of that since reaching camp, replied: "Do you mean, by that, I'm fired?" Rickey said my hand open when I deliver the ball?" . . .

SCALE MODEL OF V-2 ROCKET ON EXHIBITION

London, March 24 —(CP)— A scale model of a German V-2 rocket, shaped like a pencil and as long as a telephone pole, has been placed on exhibition here and Londoners are getting a chance (about 10 cents) a look to see what kind of weapon Hitler has been hurling at them. Proceeds go to a fund for relief of families of R.A.F. fliers killed in the war.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Science First.

An Irish priest offered sixpence to any boy who could tell him who was the greatest man in history.

"Columbus", answered one boy.

"No, Washington", answered another.

"No, Patrick", shouted a bright little Jewish boy.

"The sixpence is yours", said St. Patrick?"

"Right down in my heart I knew it was Moses", said the Jewish boy, "but I wanted a business".

Did You Hear—

There's talk of staging harness races on a big scale in Belleville next summer . . . Why not set up circuit this night? Take a native horse, which finished sixth in a field of eight, and match him against Panama City's Juan Franco track champion, which finished first in a race it happened: There were eight horses in the race . . . Two of them Eastern Canada horses, Seattle, with Nats Vegs up, and Diablo Rojo, ridden by Lois Bryan, owned and trained by Lois Bryan.

Diablo Rojo, Seattle, with Nats Vegs up, and Diablo Rojo, ridden by Lois Bryan, owned and trained by Lois Bryan, raced neck and neck the best . . . In the home stretch, however, Bryan and Vegs rolled side by side, started to fight. Bryan and Vegs stopped. Bryan clubbed Vegs with his whip.

Dancing Girl finished first by a neck, but the stewards disqualified both horses for foul tactics and gave the race to Grand Beach, which had finished third, three lengths behind . . . That never stopped Grand Mood, the fourth horse, up to second, as on he raced. Jockey Bryan, as an entry with Diablo Rojo, he also was disqualified . . . The purse home, Lois Bryan, owned, would money, and Liberal moved to the show steward.

Knocking on Door.

St Shorti's Belleville "Y" girls basketers drew a bye into the L.O.B.A. playoffs in North Toronto today. They left for the Queen City this yesterday to take part in the series . . . Skipper Shorti has 14 players on his squad and includes the Jacobs-Collegiate late star Margaret Taylor.

Left over from the local quintette that went to the L.O.B.A. finals in 1943 was Marion Hockey, Ruth Oliphant, Alfie Gilbert, Nora Stoller and Miss West Sports Thrill and girls, plus Dot Hockey, Fay Rowbotham and Dorothy Wonnacott made the journey to the provincial playdowns last year, but Margaret Taylor, star performer taking their first L.O.B.A. provincial competition this year includes Evelyn Allison, Margaret Bush, Helen Garrow, May Mc Cormick, Lois Burkholder and of course Margaret Taylor. Fortified with the greatest number of Intermediate players entering the Belleville "Y" girls in their history, Coach Shorti and Captain Coach Shorti feels his local lassies should bring him the cage bacon tonight.

Listen to 'Em.

The "I-told-you-so" clan were working overtime along the main stem of the city today after the Canadiens two straight in Monday night's opener. Not very little of the mumbles seen laid on the line to indicate the boys were serious. There is one exception, however. Jack Adams, coaching boss of the Detroit Red Wings, following none other than Ed Thomas, who sponsored hockey here for many a successful season.

"Watch those young Leafs, they're as hot as a baked potato coming out of the oven", predicted Eddie even before the series opened.

As for the first two games in the Leafs-Canadiens series it was a straight case of "the law of averages caught up" and also the fact "anything can happen in a short series". Both games in Montreal saw the closest checking of the year, so-much-so the red faces of Leafs' coach Irvin accused for all the advantages attempted by Canadiens' Dick Irvin.

In Detroit it was a different story, the Boston Bruins went all out to beat the Red Wings two straight, thereby ending defensive hockey, but the Bruins second victory was a costly one, they lost the services of Jimmy Orlando Cain, the result of a broken collar bone.

Remember When.

England's Revd Perry clinched his five-game professional tennis series with Big Bill Tilden at Wembley 25 years ago tonight. Triumphant in New York and Chicago, Perry won the match history the 44-year-old American in straight sets—6-4, 6-4, 6-4.

LESSON NO. 22
By ALBERT E. GORDON
The Kibitzer

A little bidding helps you clear a fancy bidding atmosphere, do, in order to good advantage, do, in fact. Here's what you handle the hand:

♠ K 7 4 3 2
♥ Q 9 7 4
♦ 8 6 5
♣ Q 6

You have several tricks, one of which is a spade, a biddable spade suit; adequate support for any suit except diamonds; follow the order of choice in "1-A-N"; takeout, assist, no trump.

Any jump shows tricks enough to make clear a game. Any unmistakable one-jump in anything also admits three trick hand. Any high-bearing two suit bid, a high-jump bid having two sure tricks.

If partner opens with one club, respond with a heart; takeout willing to one spade. If he then bids two spades, you have no more takeouts and so assist. Jump to three no trump.

If partner opens with one diamond or one heart, respond with one spade. If he then bids two clubs, one-jump again to a bid of three; that will partner opened.

If partner opens with one spade, jump again to a bid of four spades, as he then bids four no trump. Here's the basic bidding convention signal for showing one ace and one king.

Will this enough to help make a game, why does responder make a jump bid, assist without any tricks? To warn partner against a slam by unless he has an unusual extra trick hand.

When partner one-jumps on the second round, why may he go to three? two sure tricks? By not making an immediate one-jump he has warned partner he may not have two sure tricks.

There is a good reason for everything that is correct.

G.I. Visits Delight British Families

Witney, England, "In this quiet village on the edge of the Cotswolds, English families and our American servicemen were brought together for months past been cementing ties that will outlast the war, and that, perhaps, will help significantly in the decisions made about the future peace of the world by diplomats and politicians at the Paris conference opening tomorrow.

Since last September every Sunday afternoon has been dedicated by a voluntary group of British men and women to mitigating the homesickness and loneliness of their guests, the big re-habilitation hospital at Ramsden Heath, a few miles away. And what it reveals of the warmth and kindness extended to the boys from home by communities of which Witney is typical, a Sunday visitor says, is a richly rewarding experience says the New York Times.

Pleasure, not Rank Rules

Mrs. G. J. Linsell, wife of a business man who moved here after having been bombed out of their home in London, is major domo of the group. "Our only rule is pleasure to participants on both sides. No precedence, no routine now and the results, she testifies glowingly, are always surprising. Out of more than 500 GI's who have accepted their hospitality, only nine have been unsatisfactory—some through misbehavior, and there is always a surplus of invitations awaiting acceptance.

Just on schedule, a big bus hummed up to the door of her home fronting the picturesque village green yesterday afternoon. Out of it swarmed twenty-odd "trimmings," others pattering about helping to prepare and serve that traditional British repast—tea. Nothing gives them more satisfaction, their hostess explains, than the privilege of making themselves at home in the kitchen and they take advantage of such opportunities with alacrity.

"What a really lovely hero," said a tall lad from Oklahoma City, who towered, tanned and debonair above the family group, in which there was an obvious favorite. "It's a chance to drop into a deep chair before somebody's fireplace and forget about the war for a while and imagine we are back home."

Scores of appreciative letters from the boys and from their parents testify to the effectiveness of the Witney hospitality.

British rations would not permit the sharing of Amerikan cakes and cookies, indispensable to these informal teas or early suppers, without the occasional gift of sugar, preserves, pastry and similar dainties with which the hospital willingly supplements the family supplies. But the favors, the Witney committee insists, are not on all one side. Most of them have sons of their own in the service and these convalescent wounded, on the eve of their return to duty, leave their elder son, an RAF pilot was lost over Germany.

So these Americans and these English, in their separate and unobtrusive ways, are steadily and constantly coming to understand and evaluate each other's qualities and to make monkees of the Theobalds of Westphalia, whose guiding slogan has been "Divide and conquer."

With Canada's Naturalists

Toronto, March 26 —(CP)—Naturalists Canada and the United States plans are being advanced for war memorials which might better commemorate the men and women who have sacrificed their lives for their country in the present war than the stone and metals memorials. British naturalists report that plant growth is rich and rapid wherever bombs have pitted the earth. Probable explanation of this compensation by nature is that the chemicals in many bombs actually enrich the earth in which they finish their flaming career.

How busy is a beaver? Timed by a stop watch, a beaver working on a dam in Algonquin Park cut through two inches in diameter in exactly 50 seconds.

X-ray examination of beaver skulls show why their sawing equipment works so efficiently. The upper incisor teeth are placed in the jaw in a semi-circle, the base line of which is two inches long. Four-inch incisor teeth in the lower jaw are anchored the whole length of the jaw bone and reach below the molar roots.

And speaking of efficient jaws, these of insects are hinged at the sides and bite inward like pincers held horizontally instead of downward, vertically like humans and animals. Wasps have extraordinarily powerful jaws to masticate wood into the pulp from which they fashion their paper nests.

Sometimes the mathematics of nature are strange and rather wonderful. For instance, an area of ground sufficient to produce 1 ton of grass annually will support 1,000 field mice with each mouse 600 pounds. And so, owl, weighing half a pound or so, can devour 1,000 mice in a single season!

Housewives may complain about the pains necessary to provide three meals a day for the family but a patient naturalist reports that an industrious wren puts any housewife to shame. A mother wren has been known to make as many as 10,000 trips to her nest with food for her young in the period from dawn to dark in one day.

Housing Situation in Canada At Most Acute Stage of War

(By The Canadian Press)

The implications of the Canadian housing situation may touch not only the old lady who lived in a shoe and had so many children she didn't know what to do was a Canadian she would never shoe before May 1, (b) revamping the interior to take in boarders, or (c) hanging tight and hoping for the best, which would be the end of the story.

Thousands of Canadians could no longer appreciate the whimsy of the old lady fairy tale as, from one coast to another, they face the grim approach of May Day, traditionally the traditional day with all the pessimism. Because thousands of them, a national survey by The Canadian Press has showed, have orders to move and no place to go.

In several official quarters, classified "congested areas" and in a lot that aren't, officials are predicting housing shortages that, in some notable cases at least, will deteriorate to the points previously untouched in this war.

Veterans Add to Pressure

And the return of thousands of war veterans, many of them ready to settle down, added growing pressure to their problem.

In the "congested areas"—Hull, Oshawa, Israel, Montreal, Quebec city, Victoria and New Westminster, B.C.—municipal shelter administrators watchfully handled out permits without which no new construction may be occupied family quarters, checked moves within the cities from district to district, appealed to those with any available space to rent it to those with none, clamped down on rent racketeers. In other areas, not difficulties but only for one reason or another not "congested areas" local officials wrestled with their own problems.

In Vancouver, a man offered to rent a sailboat anchored in the harbor provided no children came; only short people because the boat was short. In Regina, tenants found themselves evicted by purchasers. In Saskatchewan's farmers, riding the crest of their greatest prosperity wave in years. In Toronto, a couple and their eight children were ordered out of the one room they had been occupying because Fire Chief Survey of Main Centres.

Here, briefly, are some of these reports:

Maritimes: Halifax - Dartmouth report 1,000 families seeking homes. Rentals board has 1,000 applications on file. Deadline May 1 and no place to go. Officials appeal periodically to landlords to rent vacant flats. Papers print attractive offers for "reasonable" accommodation. Housing Board officials said in Toronto—and the one couple advertised for a home for themselves and their 11-months-old baby." Cellars, attics continue warnings that they are not habitable.

Quebec: Quebec City estimates 3,000 to 5,000 families living in rooms or slums. Population has jumped by 170,000 to 150,000 in 1939. Total of 1,500 families have applied for the 300 subsidized rental units to move May 1. Montreal Housing Corporation Eviction notices number 200 compared with 50 in 1939. Only 1,000 subsidized rental units to move May 1.

Ontario: Toronto's situation, authorities say, is more acute than ever." Six times as many families as last year have orders to vacate them by May 1 and there is "literally nothing in prospect."

Nervous Breakdowns Reported

Officials report nervous breakdowns among wives of servicemen, "several cases of near hysteria" among returned veterans whose wives they have no home. In five minutes one woman pleaded a dozen times to vacate her home and a telegram telling of the husband's death in action overseas.

In Ottawa, incoming "tide pretty well stemmed" but nine of 10 prospective bridegrooms being refused "hunting licenses." A freelancer who walls "Ottawa, give us a break. We've been looking for a small clean, furnished apartment for a year." Officials launched a campaign for single homes to become double homes.

Hamilton, jammed with war workers and returning servicemen, has acute situation.

Brockville, with wives of trainge officers, "acute," so.

Woodstock is "crowded but not serious."

Brantford has 263 families seeking homes, dozen families ordered to leave old factory office building, situation now at worst yet, and getting worse still.

Kitchener seek, permits to construct 300 houses, 100 people seek quarters before May 1.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was opening his mail and ma said, Has anybody won the contest, Williams?

Meaning the $6.10 prize contest for the best idea how to make Cousin Oscar go home, and pop said, Here's a rather original suggestion from Mrs. Claudius Bond. She says she never fales to read Benny's article, and she suggests putting some kind of a powder in Oscar's coffee to keep him awake all night and also spoil his appetite at the same time. Mrs. Bond thinks if he's deprived of his major luxuries, eating and sleeping, he'll be more likely to go back. By golles it's not a bad idea, pop said.

But where are we going to find a double-duty powder such as that? I asked pop, and Mrs. Bond didn't enclose one in her letter, that's a fact. Here's a suggestion for a man of imagination, I said. Samuel Schwartzberg he said.

What does he suggest, ma said, and pop said, He suggests that I take Oscar all over the country on a big amusing contest. Now that horse racing has been abolished, he thinks it ought to be a big success, with entry fees for contestants and an exhibition charge for the general public, and of course no admittance charge for the driver. Yes gods listen to him now. And then of course when I get Oscar near his home town I can drop him off and that'll be the end of him and I'll be living from the fatten of the booty and we'll live happily ever after, pop added.

It hardly sounds practical, somehow, ma said, and besides it might not be legal, and anyway, the idea is to get Oscar out of the house, and Mrs. Williams, she said, and pop said, That's true, and another Oscar like it would be unpatriotic to take up transportation space just now for such a selfish purpose. Well, we'll keep on hoping. You never know what the next mail is going to bring, he said.

Which you dont.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER I

"Head Willing! Well, I'll be—"

It was Piery Lambert all right, looking more like a pink and white pig than ever.

Basil grinned at the microscope. "Limpetia Rimes and Malish Ends from Floor of Palace Theatre," she intoned. "Scooey!"

"Belated cigarette stumps than complexes and libidos." Lambert tipped a wheel of Nederland Handbuch der Organischen Chemie off a kitchen chair onto the floor, and pushed the chair toward Basil. "I read that blasted book of yours," he informed Basil. "You might just as well be an astrologist or a snake doctor. How long were you in Vienna anyway? Six weeks?"

"I was in Paris, London and Vienna nearly eight years."

"Expatriate, eh? Well, let me tell you the Freudian theory is absolutely repudiated by the medical profession in this country." And don't smoke! Just like a psychologist to pull out matches the minute he gets in a lab."

"Still the same old Piery with the charm of manner," observed Basil put away his cigarette case. "Not so very long ago the medical profession was 'repudiating' the germ theory."

"That's different!"

"Oh, yeah?" returned Basil, poking that bun was not an egotistical. "I didn't come here to talk psychology. I came to get some information about one of your cases. That girl whose body was found in the snow—still warm."

"Oh, the 'Red Hot Momma Case.' What do you want to know?"

"Cause of death."

"Frankly, I haven't the remotest idea—yet." Lambert thumbed rapidly through a pile of typewritten reports on the table. "Most poisoners are so conservative. They stick to the old stand-bys—arsenic, morphine, strychnine or cyanide. So we use 'em and when something new comes along we're stumped. Here's a copy of Dalton's report on the autopsy. What do you make of it?"

Basil glanced at the first page and sighed. "Autopsy reports always remind me of Keats' ode to de Quincey, who said: 'What a beautiful ulcer!' Jean Martin's discretion surface of left lung purplish red. Bluish surface smooth, medium reddish brown, . . . dark grass green, . spleen a rich, dark purple. Mm, yummy. Delicious. Who would ever suspect Dalton of such aesthetic sensibilities? I don't expect any moment to see that the endocardium is in the Cezanne colors and the writhing of Van Gogh-marked Post Impressionist infusoria. . . . Could it be some liver poison? Chloroform? Or phosphorus?"

"I thought of that. But some things — like the marked destruction of blood cells — don't show in the picture."

"In the picture! You're as bad as Dalton."

"The anemia, thinness and enlargement of the spleen rather suggest chronic malaria. But though malaria makes the skin dark and sallow, I never heard of it turning the face nearly yellow and leaving the rest of the body a normal color."

"And though malaria causes high fever it could scarcely account for the extraordinary heat of the body after death," added Basil.

"Nothing I can think of offhand would account for that!" admitted Lambert. "Heat stroke in December! It's just screwy!"

Basil was looking at a photograph of the dead girl clipped to the report. "It's queer but I've a hunch I've seen this girl somewhere before."

Lambert stared. "That—Basil, I've heard queer speculations! I have the same hunch myself. She makes me think of somebody and dog-gone it, know why? I haven't seen her the same time for years."

During the evening dinner, Basil's thoughts turned to the dead girl's face with the long, gray eyes and long, black lashes. The memory of that face haunted him persistently. It was just ahead of him. After dinner, he went into the living room and sat down in a wing chair. He closed his eyes and tried to concentrate on self-induced hypnosis. He never do for a psychiatrist; to let his own conscience get the better of him.

At last the word "magazine" floated into his mind. He saw dozens of magazines every week. Mostly scientific journals that had little to do with girls. Or art! Ridiculous!

Jumper! Where is that old magazine you were reading Sunday? The one with the girl riding a surf board on the cover?

Basil grinned. "Why, it's in the kitchen, sir."

"I'll get you another. But let me have that one now. It's important."

It was the May number of a sensational Fetish magazine. The cover had once been glossy and highly colored. Now it was dog-eared, smudged and spotted with grease. The surf-rider wore a scarlet bathing suit and she was as blonde as a daffodil. She did not resemble the dead girl in any way.

Basil glanced at the illustrations inside. Then the advertisements. Why should he connect the dead girl's face with this magazine? He turned it over and looked at the advertisement on the back cover. There was just enough in crime detection to get a thrill out of his discovery. For there she was—a photograph of the orders showing her just as he had imagined her in life. The wide gray eyes—black lashed. The diagonal black brows. The hollow cheeks. The smooth waves of dark hair. And the skin a warm ivory with no hint of a bluish stain.

Like all women in advertisements, she was impossibly slender and slim. She had been photographed in evening dress—a deep, square neckline and clinging to be satin. Her only ornament a long rope of pearls. Underneath the photograph in red letters was the word.

Poor girl! What a rotten life a man has been—selling her face and figure and seeing them blazoned on the magazine stalls and billboard. But doubtless she had no choice.

At last, Basil read the words printed below the picture:

"Miss Catherine Jocelyn, lovely debutante daughter of Mrs. Gerald Jocelyn of New York and Paris, whose coming-out party this winter promises to be the most brilliant event of the season. Miss Jocelyn —Kitty to her intimates—is famous for her svelte and willowy figure. Read what she has to say about X-Why.

"'I like X-Why because it's ABSOLUTELY SAFE. Now I've begun to reduce the X-Why Way, I can eat all the chocolate and marshmallows I like without counting calories. And never has my skin had such a rose-petal glow for X-Why is not only harmless—it's tonic and a beautifier as well!'"

"(signed)"

"Catherine Jocelyn."

Basil read on, fascinated by the ingenuous effrontery of the girl's advertisement copy writer's style.

"Why not be modern and keep slim with X-Why the reducing method of the sophisticate? No diet! No massage! No tedious exercises! Just slip an X-Why tablet in your evening cocktail and you'll never have a spare-tire waist or balloon hips!" X-Why comes in a luxurious, modernistic bottle. Now dollar size—$1.00. Pocket size—$7.50."

At the bottom of the page was a little boxed notice from an unobtrusive young man whose highnecked white overall buttoned down the back. It said that he was a scientist. And the mystic runes:

"Address Box 7777, Room X. The Basic Way To Health."

"Oh, Old Persian Beauty secret!"

Basil's police commissioner was standing through some letters his cheeks still pink from their morning shave.

"Well, what did Dalton say?"

Basil made himself comfortable in an armchair.

"Have you seen the body?"

"I saw photographs."

Basil took the X-Why advertisement out of his brief case.

"What an extraordinary resemblance! And I never noticed it!"

"Resemblance? It's the same girl. I checked up by the Bertillon method."

"But that's impossible."

"Why?"

"Because this Miss Jocelyn is still alive!"

"How do you know?"

The commissioner pressed a key and spoke into the inter-office telephone. "Evaris, have we Wednesday's Times?" He smiled at Basil. "Artifice all Bertillon himself made a mistake in the Dreyfus case."

"A mistake about handwriting," retorted Basil, "is important. But about identifying a face."

When the paper came, Archer turned to the social page, folded it and handed it across the desk to Basil.

There was another photograph—black and white this time.

"Miss Katherine Jocelyn, who leads her first season's ball at a dance given by her stepmother, Mrs. Gerald Jocelyn. . . . Most brilliant function of the year. . . . Nothing like it since 1929 . . white velvet with the Jocelyn pearls. . . lavish decorations. . . two famous dance orchestras. . . three supper rooms and a bar. . . There followed a long list of guests.

Basil handed the paper back to Archer, "So this girl's party took place the night the body was found?"

"Exactly. The body was found just before dawn Wednesday while Kitty Jocelyn was dancing at her coming out party. I know, because my own niece was there. You see, Willing," Archer's indulgent eyes almost patronizing, "you've been working too hard since you came back from Europe. You've been living like a hermit. I don't suppose you've read those magazines or gossip columns, do you?"

Basil smiled faintly. "I can't say I have."

"If you did, you'd know all about Kitty Jocelyn. The Commissioner relaxed like a lecturer sure of his subject. "Rhoda Jocelyn, her stepmother, is a widow. Until now they've lived abroad. Paris, Rome, Vienna and so forth. She's had spring pictures began appearing in newspapers and magazines over here: 'Miss Jocelyn wearing a hat from Bendel's.' 'Miss Jocelyn wearing a So-and-So dress.' You couldn't turn round without seeing her. It was an epidemic."

"No wonder Lambert thought the girl looked familiar. He must have seen this country!"

"Oh, she and her stepmother arrived just a few weeks ago, and opened the old Jocelyn house in Washington Square. Big party was held. That was her first public appearance and I have it on the authority of my niece Isobel that she is an 'eyeful.' Of course there must be her picture. I believed that poor, little weed who was found in the snow was a hothouse flower like Kitty Jocelyn."

"Then why the question here? The dead girl may be a relative."

Archer's fingers drummed a tattoo on the desk. He shook his head. "Willing, you know we can't guess. Only a girl at the party started all that on the strength of a chance resemblance."

"Carefully guarded!' From what you say, she sounds like a well-advertised personality."

"And if it's dead girl were a relative of the Jocelyn's, they would have come to us already and reported her missing. I can't bother people like that unless I have something more tangible to go on.

"There's one thing I can do," came in that little of guests at the party. Nicholas Dantine. Is that the International munitions man?"

"Must be. He arrived on the Queen Mary three weeks ago."

"On business?"

"Oh, no! His secretary told the ship news reporter that his visit to America was strictly personal and had nothing to do with finance or politics."

"And the reporters, like good boys, believed everything the secretary told them?"

"We—ell," Archer moved restlessly under Basil's gaze. "Come to think of it, there's as an amount rumor that he's going to marry Kitty Jocelyn. Probably nothing in it and yet—he was at the dance and he's a bit old for debutante parties. Between forty and fifty, I should say."

"Old?" Basil laughed. "I'm between forty and fifty, myself, Archer. We doddering old guys thing senile caprices for very young girls sometimes. And when there's a scheming mother in the background—or a stepmother. . . He finished. Here's a picture with a story.

"Well, it has nothing to do with Kitty," Archer said impatiently. "If you like you can see Dantine. People and shops claim that X-Why advertisements. But, I warn you, we can't do anything without more evidence."

Assistant Chief Inspector Patrick Archer was the officer in command of the Detective Division at Police Headquarters. A tall, compact, resilient man, he regarded the entire universe with the alert skepticism of a wire-haired terrier. Though he and Basil disagreed on many subjects, they were friends.

Basil remembered Archer when he was the X-Why advertisement. Yes, he'd seen the queer combination of face and figure before. But that's about the queerest part.

"What are you going to do about it?"

"What can I do if the commissioner says 'Hands off'? You can't question people like the Dantines unless you have a strong case, and I've nothing but a resemblance. Of course, if the Jocelyn dame were missing it would be different, as it is, we've got to wait and see what the man who's trying to trace the body can pick up."

"Did you make inquiries in the street where the body was found?"

Banks in Ireland Are Stuffed Full of Money

Eire has a glut of money. But it is not people's pockets; it is in the banks. Ten banks, including Northern as well as Southern Ireland, show deposits for last year totalling the equivalent of $1,470,000,000, this representing an increase in the single year of $130,000,000, Hugh Curran writes in the Vancouver Province.

Financier's say that this accumulation of wealth reflects the transformation of stocks into money owing to restricted trade and shortage of supplies, combined with a high percentage of accumulated savings awaiting investment. With the return to normal conditions there will undoubtedly be a large switch-over to trade, capital market and other outlets.

These vast sums of money are not left idle in Irish banks. Therefore they are in London money market where they are invested in British securities. Eire has $1,500,000,000 invested in London, but it is impossible to purchase goods with it. Being in the sterling bloc, this country needs foreign exchange, primarily dollars, and these cannot be got.

Post Office Savings

The same story of glut of money comes from the post office savings departments. Last year was another record year of savings by the small saver, or people who receive salaries and wages. The amounts deposited in these banks rose by about $40,000,000, compared with $35,000,000 in the previous year.

The remittances from emigrants to Great Britain, where many are getting high wages in war work, form a considerable part of these small savings.

With the return of normality after the war, Eire should be in the position to make huge purchases of goods of all descriptions. The fact there are indications that certain countries are taking steps to put in early... I understand that Canada is already improving its trading relations, and for certain products she is ahead of the United States. The fact that shipping facilities come almost exclusively from Canadian ports must have some thing to do with this.

It is not without significance that the Argentine is advertising in Irish papers for agents to sell products which are produced there, and for some which are produced in may be taken for certain that this country will exercise a close watch on those countries with which it deals to see that they buy at least as much as they sell here.

That Eire, Britain's will remain the main market for agricultural surplus is, of course, inevitable. Whether it will be as valuable as in former years is not so certain. It is part of Britain's policy not to allow her agricultural industry to fall to the level it had reached before the war.

There is also the possibility that countries, Canada for one, will endeavor to come to terms on a contract with Ireland. This country places a good deal of reliance on the home market, as has been mentioned.

With the development of its industrial program, which has been greatly handicapped by the war, it is hoped there will be much greater employment at home, and that there will be a further improvement in the standard of living of the people generally. All this would make for greater home consumption, but even so there is bound to be a very considerable surplus for export, and Britain is the obvious market for it.

Patrols Park in Plane, On Wolf-Hunts

Algonquin Park, Ont., March 23 (CP) — His wartime ramblings over, 31-year-old George Phillips has come home to Ontario and found excitement by "dive-bombing" preying wolves with a small plane and rifle.

A year ago he was a squadron leader commanding an R.C.A.F. transport command unit at Natal, Brazil.

Phillips says he has wolves are an increasing menace to deer and beaver.

Badger-Gopher War Brewing in B.C.

A short time ago the Minister of Agriculture for British Columbia announced that, as a result of serious damage to crops by gophers, his department would wage war on the rodents by turning loose a number of badgers, Dan McGowan writes in The Vancouver Province.

As a result of the temporary absence of gophers from Saskatchewan and Alberta, badgers are becoming very plentiful there and possibly these provinces might have a few carloads of these animals for sale. In British Columbia, just how many of the shaggy beasts would be required to mop up the gopher populations has not been stated but it would run to many thousands if the scheme is to succeed.

Even if so many badgers could be imported and set to work in the farms of the coast province it is doubtful if they would materially thin the ranks of the ground squirrels. In the middle of the last century there were comparatively few gophers on the prairies of Western Canada yet that same region contained a very large number of badgers. At that time there were about ten dens to the square mile. In fact the badgers outnumbered the gophers.

Lived Off Buffalo.

The flesh of fallen buffalo was their chief source of food and when these wild cattle suddenly disappeared the dependent badger tribe began hacking into a severer degree of attack on the gopher.

However, the subsequent incursion of farmer settlement and the giving of the plains to the plow resulted in gophers increasing in numbers sufficient to support the existence of the badger breed.

Although the badger is generally considered carnivorous in habit he is primarily a vegetarian and the animal is in large measure vegetarian. Certain it is that the gophers stand in no great awe of the teeth and claws of their alleged foe.

I have seen a badger hashing on the earthen mound at the entrance to the den while a score or more gophers stood upright on their several hummocks nearby and whistled derisively at the drowsy enemy.

Show No Fight.

But the gophers have been amazed, and amused, at seeing an intrepid rodent standing erect on the earthwork of a burrow in which three badgers were then lodged. The gopher must have known that they were at home because only a few minutes previously they had been sunning themselves at the mouth of the den. Yet there he stood, with folded arms, as nonchalant as if there were no badger between Red River and the Rockies. There is no such bravado in the presence of a coyote or when a hawk is soaring overhead.

The American badger, present in some parts of British Columbia, is one of the least known small mammals in this province. Of a retiring disposition and averse to publicity, it is nevertheless a vivacious creature, keenly alert and alive to all that is going on in the neighborhood.

Keeps Self Clean.

Despite almost constant contact with the soil, somehow it contrives to keep amazingly clean. An instantaneous twitching muscle, operating over soil parts of the body, seems to free the coat from dust and loam. The pelt, fitting very loosely and thus easily shaken, is so thick as to prove troublesome to hunters and taxidermists. It is also tough enough to withstand the thrusts and turn the prongs of a hay fork.

An adult badger weighs about 15 pounds and is a little over two feet in length. The body is very flat and thus, when the animal squats on a grassy meadow it is remarkably well concealed. As befits a dweller in narrow shafts and tunnels the legs, the ears and the tail are very short.

Being a member of the weasel family it is a courageous fighter capable of giving battle to a whole pack of dogs. Unless when angered this bandy-legged burrower is seldom heard giving voice. Then, however, it hisses, grunts and growls in a manner that leaves one in no doubt as to its extreme displeasure.

Prefers Life in Ground.

In moving about on the surface of the ground the badger is not very fleet of foot; in fact, it toddles rather than runs. Most of its time is spent underground, although genial days it is fond of airing its silver-gray coat in the morning sunshine.

With the exception perhaps of the mink, it is the most powerful and most expert digger in the animal world, the long claws and muscular forelegs being splendidly adapted to the business of speedy excavating.

The creatures are believed to mate in autumn prior to hibernating. The young are born in May or June, the usual number in a litter being three. They remain in and around the home burrow until almost full grown and well-enough educated to fend for themselves.

Little is known of the intimate domestic life of the species, but it is apparent that sociability is not an outstanding trait.

Works With Coyote.

Although a strong competitor with the coyote in the gopher meat market it is noteworthy that these rivals find it profitable to pool resources when hunting. It is not unusual to find a badger-coyote team engaged in bagging ground-squirrels. While the badger plies pick and shovel the astute coyote, lurking nearby, keeps a sharp eye on the emergency exits from the dugouts, picking up victims as they bolt in hot haste and deadly fear. The more timid tenants, dreading Scylla overhead, doubtless become prey to Charybdis below.

This is an ingenious and paying partnership, one for which the coyote, the most enterprising animal in Canada, is no doubt largely responsible.

Many Attend Craig Funeral In Peterborough

The funeral, conducted by Canon R. F. Robertson, was held in St. Johns Anglican Church and was attended by practically the full executive of every sports organization in Peterborough as well as representatives from every other walk in life.

YANKS BESIEGE FRANKFURT

One Officer Dies In Fire at Air School, Deseronto

Officers' Quarters Completely Destroyed

(By Staff Reporter)

One officer member of the station staff is dead, and two others taken to hospital, as a result of a fire which swept through and completely gutted the officers' quarters at No. 1 Instrument Flying School, Deseronto, early today.

The identity of the dead officer is being withheld pending notification of the next of kin.

He is believed to have been sleeping in the northern end of the H-shaped building, and firefighters were unable to get near him due to the flames and smoke. Two other officer personnel were reported missing at first, but later proved to be off the station and were accounted for.

The fire, of unknown origin, started shortly after 3.30 this morning and was rapidly beaten through the building. The station fire equipment and personnel raced to the scene of the fire at the south end of the station but such headway had been made in the low-built structure that any attempts to extinguish the flames were futile.

It was possible to save some of the blaze that the greater part of the equipment and personal effects of the officers housed in the building had been destroyed.

Wing Cmdr. J. L. Bervin, the commanding officer of the station, announced that a court of inquiry will be held. It was also said the two men in hospital were not seriously injured.

Mild Weather Hits Syrup Production

By DOUGLAS GREEN
(C.P. Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 26 (CP)—The usually strident cry of "sap's running" which signifies the opening of the maple syrup and sugar season in eastern Canada has been stilled almost to a whisper by the fault of the weather.

It's a quirk of nature, agricultural authorities said today, that bright, sunny days and frosty nights are necessary to produce a good volume of sap. But this spring the weather has been mild, and it's expected that the 1945 crop will be "extremely poor," perhaps 40 per cent of normal.

Districts which normally are highly productive report that the sap is running at all, and prospects are that this year's crop will be worse than that of 1941, which was a bad year.

Quebec accounts for about 80 per cent of the Dominion's Maple production.

The productive area in eastern Canada is largely limited to Ontario and Quebec south of a line between Thedosane, Que., on the north side of the Ottawa River, Lawrence and Nipissing, Ont. In Ontario production is heaviest in the Muskoka, Parry and Glengarry counties.

Production in 1942 was estimated at 2,262,000 gallons of maple syrup and 2,207,700 pounds of farm-made maple sugar with the great farm value of the crop $9,055,200, an increase of 57.5 per cent over the value of the 1942 crop, which was $5,750,000.

CHURCHILL TO DESCRIBE VISIT

London, March 26 — (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill is expected to give the House of Commons an eyewitness account of the new western front offensive as he witnessed it on a visit to the Rhine's east bank.

Mr. Churchill almost certainly will appear in the House before its adjournment-today for the Easter holiday, and it was felt he would miss none the opportunity to describe the opening phases of what he has called "the big heave."

Nazi Underground Warehouses And Factories Bombed

London, March 26. (CP)—Allied bombers lashed out with another two-way bombing of Germany today after launching what may be one of their most concentrated hunting out and blasting German underground factories and warehouses.

The German radio reported numerous Allied bomber formations swooping over the Reich proper and others flying north over Austria from Italy.

Last night Mosquitos attacked Berlin for the 24th consecutive night and American night-prowling planes joined in hammering German targets. The night attacks followed yesterday's pulverizing of German strongpoints and reinforcement centres in front of Field Marshal Montgomery's drive into the Ruhr by thousands of Allied planes.

The kick-off on the campaign against hidden underground objectives was made yesterday by a force of 250 British-based Liberators which attacked three buried oil storage dumps between Hamburg and Brunswick.

4,000 Sorties Flown

Altogether 8,000 sorties were flown yesterday, with the Liberators reporting good results against the underground oil targets at Ehmen, Buchen and Hitzacker and with 800 R.A.F. heavy planes smashing at freight yards at Hannover, Osnabruck and Munster.

Approximately 6,000 German vehicles of all types from tanks to wagons were destroyed by the tactical air forces over Rhine bridgeheads.

The German air force put up little more than token resistance. Nineteen German planes were knocked down in the air and others destroyed on the ground, bringing to 100 the number destroyed in the last three days.

19 Bombers Lost.

Allied losses were ten heavy bombers, a medium bomber and 29 fighters.

The Mediterranean Allied Air Force, meanwhile, out 2,400 sorties yesterday, set a new low in losses, dispatching only 700 heavy bombers making saturation raids on four railroads in Czechoslovakia and Austria lost two of their number.

Thousands of transport-borne bombs were showered on fields which the Germans had used to oppose the Russian advance, or caught a large number of German planes on the ground. One formation of Mustangs caught six fighters just as they were taking off and shot all of them down.

Allied Rhine Offensive Plunges German People Into Deepest Gloom

London, March 26 — (CP)—The Rhine Allied offensive has plunged the German people into the deepest gloom, dispatches from neutral European capitals said today, but there seemed general agreement that it still is too early to look for a complete collapse of the German home front.

Advices from Bern said the comparative ease with which the Allied armies swept across the Rhine had started the greatest wave of defeatism and despair yet recorded in Germany.

These dispatches emphasized, however, that even though the German people apparently have lost all hope that their fear of the Gestapo still is so great that any immediate uprising to oust the Nazis and bring a quick peace seems unlikely.

There were some hints that the first real break in the German home front — when it comes—may develop in the armies. Swiss frontier reports said opposition to the Nazis appeared to be increasing in Austria and that leaflets had been secretly circulated in Vienna urging anti-Nazi demonstrations.

These reports asserted that 20,000 Austrians had fled to the hills to avoid conscription for the Volkssturm (People's Army).

The Nazi press, meanwhile, apparently was trying to prepare the German people for further reverses. German broadcasts last night quoted the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung as saying that Gen. Eisenhower's offensive also shifted the centre of gravity of the war to the west."

The paper warned that "it would be mistake to shut one's eyes to the significance of the successes achieved by the Americans in the last few days," but tried to bolster home morale by asserting that the Allies "will not take the German armies by surprise."

Adolf Hitler's own Voelkischer Beobachter predicted an Allied drive into the great northern German plain and more airborne landings.

CANADIAN COR VETTE TORPEDOED

H.M.C.S. Trentonian Torpedoed and Sunk With Loss of Six Men

Ottawa.—Tenth Canadian corvette lost in this war, H.M.C.S. Trentonian has been torpedoed and sunk while on convoy duty, with the loss of one officer and five ratings, it was announced today by Hon. Angus L. Macdonald, Minister of National Defence for Naval Services.

Ninety-five officers and ratings survived the sinking and the fact that loss of life was so low in comparison with many other sinkings was attributed to the fact that all depth charges had been made safe and the crew was able to get all Carley floats and the ship's whaler away before the corvette went under.

Under command of Lieut. Cmdr. S. Glasco, R.C.N.V.R., of Hamilton, Ont., the ship sank in from 10 to 15 minutes after a torpedo crashed into her. It was the fourth attack made on her by the enemy in the Mediterranean in the course of the convoy duty. Had they been below in the messdecks the casualty list would have been much greater. Those lost wear at action stations.

The ship's whaler and Carley floats kept the survivors afloat until rescued by two Royal Navy motor launched. One M.L. arrived within three hours and rescued so many as it could carry away. The second one arrived on the scene three quarters of an hour after the torpedoing to pick up the remaining survivors, who, by then, were stiff and exhausted from exposure in the cold water.

Lieut. Glasco, Lieut. W. Burnley Kinsman, R.C.N.V.R., of 4019 West 5th Ave., Vancouver, the first lieutenant, and Lieut. J. E. Reeves, R.C.N.V.R., of 646 Carleton Ave., Ottawa.

DREW DISSOLVES ONT. LEGISLATURE, ELECTION LIKELY

Premier States He Tried to Avoid Election While Troops Were Fighting

Toronto, March 26 — (CP)—The Ontario Legislature sane, already in confusion following Premier George Drew's Saturday announcement of dissolution of the House, today faced the prospect of further tumult as reaction to the prospect of a second wartime election campaign in the province continued.

A. A. MacLeod, leader of the two-man Labor-Progressive group in the House, in a statement Sunday night termed the Premier's action "one of the most flagrant examples of his cynical contempt for parliamentary institutions."

"It is," he said, "an act of political cowardice."

Mr. MacLeod said he had been informed the 16-member Liberal Group will assemble today outside the locked doors of the Legislative Chamber and that he and Joseph Salsberg (Lab.-Prog. — Toronto St. Andrews) will join them "as a demonstration of protest" against the dissolution.

"We hope the C.C.F. members will do likewise," he said.

Trenton Officer Leads Scottish Across Rhine R.

On the Rhine, March 26 (CP)—Scottish troops of the 51st Highland Division, staging "Anzio Lauria," crossed the Rhine Friday night under a terrific barrage from Field Marshal Montgomery's guns and the battle of the Ruhr bridgehead had begun.

The Highlanders took 2 1-2 minutes to cross the Rhine. The first feet ashore was Lieut. Hugh J. Campbell, of Trenton, Ont., on loan to the British army.

Quickly following up the advantage of the first successful landing, British airborne battalion swept across the Rhine in every conceivable type of craft.

NAZI LUFTWAFFE GROUNDED

Rome, March 26 (AP)—Lt.-Gen. Baker, Chief of the Mediterranean Allied Air Forces, declared today that the German air force is "virtually grounded."

He said the last six German oil refineries still in operation within the range of his bombers have now come under attack, he said:

"Every day our pilots see a hedgeon German fighting force parked on airstrooms for lack of fuel. They strafe 40 to 50 planes daily. We average more than 2,000. The Luftwaffe is virtually grounded. I mean just that."

YANKS ATTEMPT RYUKYU INVASION SAYS TOKYO RADIO

Claim Okinawa Bombarded Three Times Saturday by Large Task Force

Guam, March 26 — (AP)—Tokyo radio Sunday said United States troops, supported by intensive bombardment, had made a large amphibious battleship task force, are "attempting landings on the Okinawa group in the Ryukyu chain, 325 miles south of Kyushu in the Japanese mainland.

The Domei report was without confirmation today.

Aerial bombardment of several of the Ryukyu islands, including Okinawa, Amami and at least 5 in all the southern Japanese home islands of Kyushu, Shikoku and Honshu, preceded the reported landings.

Tokyo said Okinawa was bombarded three times Saturday by U. S. battleships — presumably of the 16-inch type.

Admiral Nimitz has announced only that Minami Daito, 260 miles east of Okinawa, was shelled.

The enemy broadcast, recorded by the Federal Communications Commission, reported the landings were attempted on Toka Rhima and Aka Jima, small islands west of the southwestern tip of Okinawa.

Tanks Sent Crashing Across Main River at Aschaffenburg Into Central German Plains

Decisive Fighting of Whole War Now Under Way in West

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, March 26 —(AP)— The United States 3rd Army besieged Frankfurt on the Main today and sent its tanks crashing across the Main at Aschaffenburg into the plains of central Germany, a bare 200 miles from Berlin.

One unconfirmed report said Frankfurt had been entered. The last "climmed out" battle accounts hours before had placed Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton's shock troops six miles away. The city's radio went dead last night.

The 4th Armored Division again had burst loose 40 miles beyond the Rhine in a sweep so swift that the Germans were caught without time to blow the Aschaffenburg bridges. 22 miles southeast of Frankfurt. Frankfort, a city of 549,000, is the ninth largest in Germany and one of the country's greatest railroad centres.

The United States 1st Army broke from its original Rhine bridgehead at Remagen and pushed 19 miles east of the shattered river line.

Decisive fight On

"The decisive fighting of the whole war now is unequivocally under way in the west," a German military spokesman said by radio from Berlin, 285 miles from vanguards of Gen. Patton's Army.

The British 2nd and United States 9th Armies-in and north of the Ruhr were 10 miles east of the Rhine on a solid 31-mile front and battle dispatches said a general breakout there was expected momentarily. Elements of the 1st Canadian Army are fighting with Gen. Dempsey's forces.

More than 15,000 prisoners have been taken by British, Canadian and United States troops in Field Marshal Montgomery's attack across the lower Rhine.

In Duisburg Suburbs

The 9th Army fought in the northeast suburbs of Duisburg, vast inland port of 431,000, and within 10 miles of Krupp-ruled Essen, where the crawling Krupp works have been rebuilt seven times after bombings.

The Germans reported fighting outside Essen itself, capital of Katherine, suggesting yet another Rhine crossing by the United States 7th Army, which had labored the Palatinate and routed the last Germans west of the Rhine between Switzerland and Holland.

The 3rd Canadian front was becoming fluid as Gen. Eisenhower's offensive turned into a powerful Doolittle. Some bombers hit Hamm, second complete victory over Germany, because the Russians are now pushing on from the east in many places.

Marks more 136 miles deep in the heart of Germany and the Rhine line after less than seven days of attack. Army threw yet another bridgehead across the Upper Rhine at an undisclosed place where the river rapidly runs through a gorge.

Holland Has Become Virtually Military Liability to Germans

New York, March 26 — (AP) — The story of a Holland which has become virtually a military liability to the German command was told this week by an officer in the Netherlands army.

The officer is known as Gerard Schovers, but his name is a secret because of kinfolk still in occupied territory.

Schovers, who came out of the German-held area only a few weeks ago, said:

The Germans have built a defence line, the Ijssel river line. Dellied under Hitler's order to the West River, but it has been made useless by Allied invasion by air south.

About 200,000 German soldiers, with the help of Dutch organization workers, are stimulating activity in order to escape service at the front.

Schovers went underground in 1940. He escaped when the Nazis became suspicious of his activities.

Now a Marine, he is training a company of his countrymen at Camp LeJeune, N.C., preparatory to Far East service.

Schovers reports that the Dutch underground is working hard to locate defences and make other work seem important.

He explains that a non-military planning board in Germany accepts the advice of Dutch engineers, and if necessary, the work being carried on under direction of the Army.

Thus the Todt organization and the soldiers can conspire to prolong their operations.

Schovers believes the Nazis soon will pull out of the Netherlands. The only advantage left is the site for V-bomb launching platforms hidden in wooded areas on the Saalbuis dunes between the Hague and Haarlem. Schovers' underground information is that only 10 such devices are located in Holland.

Senate Vacancies May Not Be Filled Before Election

By R. K. CARNEGIE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 26 —(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King has 18 Senate vacancies to fill before the forthcoming general election but the feeling here is that he will fill few if any before the present session of parliament concludes.

Most speculation here centres around the four Ontario vacancies, caused by the deaths of George Gordon, Niplssing; Rt. Hon. George P. Graham, Bgnaville; Louis Coderre, Ottawa, and H. S. Little, London, Ont.

A usually well-informed source here forecast that Arthur W. Roebuck, Liberal member of parliament for Toronto, Trinity and head of the Ontario Liberal organization, and Dr. J. R. Hurtubise, Liberal member for Nipissing, would be chosen. Dr. Hurtubise would give Ontario French Canadian representation replacing the late Senator Cote and Northern Ontario representation in place of the late Senator Gordon.

Others spoken of for the Ontario vacancies are State Secretary McLarty, who will not be a candidate for Essex West in the coming elections, W. H. Taylor, chief government whip; Harry Nixon, former provincial leader, W. H. Fraser, Liberal member for Northumberland and F. G. Sanderson, Liberal member for Perth.

FAMILY GETS NO PERMIT

Toronto, March 26 —(CP)— A Windsor family of three adults and nine children, who came to Toronto Saturday after Selective Service had issued a work permit to the three, returned to Windsor Saturday night when the Emergency Powers Administration refused a permit to allow the family to live here, it was reported today.

Soviet Armor 77 Miles From Vienna In New Offensive

Moscow, March 26 (AP) — Two great Russian armies pressed ahead along the Danube River today less than 36 miles from the Austrian frontier with a massed strength indicating possibility of a not-too-distant attack on Vienna.

Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukrainian Army linked up with the 2nd Ukrainian Army under Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky in a drive that swept along a 90-mile front through Hungary with gains of up to 16 miles.

Severely mauled the Germans fell back into well-fortified defences in the Gyor area and all signs pointed to the stubbornest kind of opposition forming before the Soviet armies driving close to Bratislava.

The initial phases of the fresh offensive along the south bank of the Danube northwest of Budapest had carried 26 miles through the tough Bakony forest and Vertes mountains under conditions worsened by a well-advanced spring thaw.

Vienna was within 77 miles of the Malinovsky armies and there was much evidence at hand that the Austrian capital was going to be as desperately defended as Berlin.

Three Drives Under Way.

The Russians appeared to be developing three differentiated drives against the Austrian city. Three fires already were underway—Malinovsky's and Tolbukhin's from the south and southeast, and Marshal Ivan S. Konev's push southwestward through Moravia.

Still another appeared probable —a push by Malinovsky's northern army group north of the Big Danube bend in conjunction with the 4th Ukrainian Army moving westward across Slovakia. A junction of these two groups may be effected before the all-out Vienna assault begins.

The Germans were reported to have massed great numbers of tanks and anti-tank weapons to protect the Austrian capital.

$3,000 Prisoners Taken.

In the double offensive the toll of German tanks and self-propelled guns destroyed today was reported well over 1,000 with $3,000 prisoners taken by Russian accounts.

Meanwhile, Premier Stalin announced the fall of Hedlingsdorf, last big East Prussian stronghold southwest of Koenisberg, as the Russians pushed on and on on their northern flank.

Hedlingsdorf's fall ushers in the annual muddy season along the eastern front and today's report appears probable the Red Army will mount a spring offensive regardless of the mud.

Persons returning to Moscow from Polish regions say railway crews are working night and day in widening tracks to accommodate the heavy loads of troops and material pouring westward.

COTTAGERS OBJECT TO PEOPLE DUMPING GARBAGE IN BAY

With all manner of litter and empty bottles floating serenely down the bay of the Bay of Quinte as a garbage dump is being objected to rather strenuously by cottage owners in the Country Club district west of Belleville.

Attendance at the golf league over the weekend by the ideal spring weather, coming hand in hand some time along their property strewn with debris which apparently has been dumped from the bay during the high water level, has driven the owners to the point where they are considering the matter with a view to compelling the culprits to desist from using the bay as a garbage dump.

With high land drying rapidly as a result of warm sun and exception-ally fine weather, prospects of one of the earliest starts at spring work in years is being entertained by the farmers in the Belleville district. Much of the higher land already appears about ready for cultivation, while in isolated instances springe work has already commenced.

David Hollinger, of the Oak Hills district, had been ordered confined to bed by mid-week last week and is already reported to have done some sowing.

According to farmers fall wheat never looked better than it does this spring and as result of complete absence of winter killing of the crop up splendidly. Hepburn Critical Of Drew's Action Of Dissolution

Toronto, March 26. (CP)—Mitchell F. Hepburn, Ontario Liberal House Leader, said in a statement today that Premier Drew's action in calling for a dissolution of the legislature Saturday "is a flagrant disregard of all the decencies of parliamentary behavior and the democratic rights of the people of this province through their representatives."

Text of Mr. Hepburn's statement: The legislature has been dissolved by the announcement of the people of Ontario and their elected representatives in the legislature.

In his hurry Colonel Drew did not take time to name a date for the election of a new House to carry on. His undue haste has injured, those who depended upon him politically or social to the people of Ontario.

Hon. Gordon Conant, speaker, the Lieutenant-Governor on dissolution, has been ordered on an adjournment to Tuesday next, at three p.m., Mr. Conant's seat in the House. The vote of want of confidence was the outcome of Colonel Drew's arrogant attitude and his government's blunders. Notwithstanding the vote of want of confidence, the majority of members of the House, including myself, willingness to meet again for the purpose of passing legislation considered essential and in the public interest during the period of the coming election campaign.

Colonel Drew has further defeat Colonel Drew has, in the haughty pesh-ance of youth, been over-bounced—"I hold the ball and I just won't play any longer" and then runs home and takes the ball with him.

Regardless of his statement to the contrary, Colonel Drew called the election and the blame is his. Again I say the will of the people is the will of God, and elected representatives. The elected representatives have said that it is for the people to understand adjourned until three p.m. Tuesday next, the 27th day of March, 1945."

Colonel Drew's action is a flagrant disregard of all the decencies of parliamentary behavior and the democratic rights of the people of this province through their parliamentary representatives.

Having sown in the wind, he must now reap the whirlwind.

The 31st Army Group had driven 12 miles east of the river at some points and a total of six Allied armies had slammed across the once formidable water barrier, leaving sounder German defences barring the road to Berlin and a direction with the Red Army in the East.

More than 80 miles of the Rhine banks were firmly in Allied hands by the time darkness crept. Germany was rolling up many of vicieties all the way from north of Wesel to the Rhine bridges.

Nowhere was the bewildered and overpowered German soldiery able to check the mighty tide of more than 1,200,000 shock troops Gen. Eisenhower has hurled on the western front for the final battle.

Canadians Below Rhine

The North Nova Scotia Highlanders into a vise with the 21st Army group to the north.

U.S. 1st and 9th armies elements were barely six miles apart in the Dusseldorf area. Medic Lt.-Gen. Patton's manoeuvres were shielded in a security blanket which kept the reality German combatants Darmstadt, industrial rail centre of 115,826, was the largest city captured by the 3rd yesterday. The Allied old university city of Heidelberg was outflanked and ripe for capture.

Airmen Active

A light rain splattered the front line groups early, but it was not in heavy enough to interfere seriously with the slashing attacks which cancel out the aerial battering of German bases behind the front. Main Rever which flows through Frankfurt was crossed at a captured bridge at Aschaffenburg and reached at two other points, eight miles southeast of Frankfurt and two miles east of Maine.

40 Miles Beyond Rhine

The 3rd Army was more than 40 miles north of the Rhine and ranging ahead unchecked within "23 miles of Berlin.

Germans were surrendering by the thousands. The 31st Army Group on the north had driven to the outskirts of the 6o or so undersized German divisions in the west, has taken more than 10,000 captives. The 3rd U.S. Army bagged nearly as many more, 300,000 since the day. The U.S. 1st Army took 3,147 yesterday alone.

Allied Supreme Headquarters said 268,000 Germans had surrendered since March 1; upwards of 60,000 more had been killed or wounded.

Nearing Krupp Works.

Essen, home of Hermann Goering and the seven - times - rebuilt Krupp Munitions Works, was 15 miles or less from surging U.S. 9th Army columns.

The hollow heart of Germany was exposed. The staggered second army, front of March 1, 500,000 effectives in the west alone since the start of the winter campaign, was the force nor the mobility to recover from the multiple blows Germany was raining in increasing numbers and strength.

Final victory was in the air and in the songs of infantrymen riding tanks and clattering trucks and every conceivable conveyance.

In the north from the suburbs of Duisburg to north of captured Bees, the cross-Rhine bridge served by Field Marshal Montgomery was solid, 10 miles or more wide above the Rhine and at least 10 miles deep.

Robt. Templeton Dies in City In 92nd Year

The late Mr. Templeton had resided in advanced age, being in his 92nd. year. He was born at Perth, Ontario, On Dec. 9th., 1853, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Templeton; his father came from Kilmarnock, Scotland. At an early age he entered the employ of a druggist in his native town for the purpose of learning the business. Later he went to visit relatives in Glasgow, Scotland, and while there he accepted employment with a leading drug firm and continued his studies of the business. Upon returning to Canada Mr. Templeton obtained a position with Cassidy & Company, druggists in Belleville, whose place of business was located at the corner of Bridge and Front streets, where the Bank of Montreal is now situated. That was seventy-two years ago and at that time Belleville was a city hall was just completed and the clock in the tower installed.

Mr. Templeton remained with the Cassidy Company for a time, then entered the employ of the late L. W. Yeomans who for years conducted a big business in the wholesale drug business here. After a number of years he had the opportunity to buy the Cassiff business and for thirty-six years he carried on a successful business in the store which he entered as an employee, when he came to Belleville.

Later Mr. Templeton acquired the ownership of the block and when he disposed of it to the former Merchants Bank he moved to the west side of Front Street, near Campbell Street, where he continued in business for five years, when he sold the business to the late W. H. Latimer and the business is now Latimer's Drug Store. At that time Mr. Templeton has lived retired.

During the several years Mr. Templeton lived here he saw many changes and he enjoyed talking of the old days. For many years he was a prominent member of John Street Presbyterian Church.

Mr. Templeton was a good citizen and he will be missed by many old friends. Surviving him is one son, Mr. John Purdy Templeton of Toronto. His daughter, Miss Robina Templeton, died on Oct. 31st., 1943.

Resting at the Pinkney Funeral Home, Church Street at Victoria Avenue, the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

MARSH FIRE GIVES FIREMEN BUSY TIME

Grand rail fence posts, the property of the Provincial Highways Department and valued at much more doubtedly have their homes among the bullrushes were the principal sufferers at the marsh fire which over the weekend caused firemen considerable trouble on the bay bridge road district.

Saturday evening firemen were called to the marsh north and west of the road leading to the bay bridge and spent two hours in subduing flames which swept across the marsh and ignited grand rail posts running parallel to the highway. A second trip was necessary early Sunday morning and a third during the afternoon before the persistent flames were finally quenched. Practically the entire area of the marsh was burned off before the efforts of firemen, this despite the fact the water level is still comparatively high.

Gratuity Payments and Housing For Vets' Families Discussed by Legion

Marmora, (Special)—Two resolutions of far reaching importance received the closest attention and fullest endorsement of members of Sandbag Legion, at a meeting in the new headquarters of the Marmora Branch on Sunday afternoon for the annual meeting of zone 32. The first resolution emanated from Marmora Branch, 207 and read, "As a meeting of Branch 207 Canadian Legion held March 18th, 1945, the question of War Gratuity was discussed and resolved as follows: "That this Branch No. 207 present to the zone commander to be presented up for donation at the zone meeting to be held in Marmora the question of war service gratuity of soldiers killed or who died in the service of their country. Motion—This branch is unanimous in supporting full payment of War Service Gratuity of soldiers killed or who died in their service of their country to next-of-kin or otherwise."

The other resolution was moved by Comrade George Gimlett of Tweed, seconded by Comrade W. M. Magee, of Marmora and read thus:

"Whereas the housing situation is acute to the service forces of overseas, Be it resolved that this convenient be strongly urged to set aside 50 per cent of war time housing for overseas families.

Be it further resolved that provision be made in communities where there, is no War Time Housing for the accommodation of members of overseas families.

And be it further resolved that this resolution be forwarded to Dominion Command, that time Mr. Coburg on Sunday, April 29th for immediate action in pointing out the serious condition that service members families are up against."

Will Submit Resolutions.

Both resolutions will be submitted to the district meeting in Oshawa for necessary action and later presented to the Annual meeting of the Ontario Command.

Sunday's meeting at which forty Legionaries represented Norwood, Peterborough, Lakefield and Marmora was greeted by District Commander George Gimblett who later turned the meeting over to Zone Commander R. C. Hotrum. After the roll call and other incidental business the chairman asked that branches of the zone submit an expression as to his suggestion that delegates at these zone meetings be charged 50c per fifty members to two per fifty.

The two resolutions were then dealt with after which the election of the zone commander for the ensuing year took place. It was moved by W. Mumby and seconded by Joseph Parker that R. C. Hotrum be renominated as zone commander for Zone 32. It was then moved by V. Stewart and seconded by K. F. Hotrum that nominations be closed, thus re-electing Comrade Hotrum. Following the duties of his honor conferred on him the zone commander alluded in happy vein to the many activities of the branches in the zone in the past year. He also dilated on the fine spirit of membership in the Legion. Closing certificates were taken by the district commander following a vote of thanks to the zone commander for his fine work during the past year.

In the social hour which followed members of the various branches were introduced to one another and the Marmora comrades were pleased to renew acquaintances with their past president, T. E. Pritchard who was one of the Peterborough delegation.

ALBINO MUSKRAT TRAPPED

MARMORA

Pte. Geo. Bateman Home After Five Years Overseas

Marmora, (Special)—Another original of the Maple Leaf has returned home to his wife and child in Marmora after five years service overseas. He was with his regiment for its full three years stint in readiness for England over five years ago, visiting France, Sicily and Italy in turn. Now, home through varied experiences without a scratch and looks the picture of health. "I am forgetting about close calls, and even souvenirs at this time. I am real glad to be home".

Private Bateman thought Florence to be the most attractive city in Italy but found Rome to be an extremely interesting too. On leaves he had ample time to take in the sights of the Eternal City with its crowning Vatican City with its Swiss Guards. Naples itself did not appeal to him to the same extent but he found Pompeii very interesting.

His was in the same Company as Capt. R. J. Scott and commented upon Pte. Raymond (Sandbar) Noble, who has been mentioned in different reports for his proficiency as a sniper, and his fame was a tradition with the regiment. Since coming home he has enjoyed a renewal of acquaintances with Sgt. Nobs, C. Cpl., and other local originals of the regiment, who were also home on rotation leave.

Family Cat Gets Tail Caught on Shaft of Motor

This is the tale of a tail of a cat. This is the story of the inalienable curiosity of a feline beauty whose natural yen for probing things of a strange nature led to discomfort and near fatality.

Today, "Smoke", handsome yearold grey Persian kitty, the family pet of Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Bird, 31 Palmer Road, is limping ruefully reminding on the queerness of human curiosities, and nursing a broken tail, that in places resembles the flat appendage of the beaver.

It happened this way. The Bird family washing machine was humming merrily as it is nearly wont. Mrs. Bird was busying herself as is the washday custom, while Smoke scribing her bushy tail walked carefully around the kitchen in a supervisionary manner.

Came an ear-piercing shriek. Then another shriek. Another. Rushing to the machine, Mrs. Bird saw "Smoke" rolling in agony her tail twisted around a shaft connected to the motor. Quickly disconnecting the machine, Mrs. Bird tried to extricate the cat. The terrified animal still sensitive piercing cries, its fear clawed Good Samaritan out dangerously, refused to let her approach.

Calling in neighbors Mrs. Bird obtained pillow and covering the cat, tried to separate its tail from the shaft. It was not until the machine was lifted bodily, and turned upside down that several people finally rescued Smoke from her predicament.

Smoke is feeling somewhat better this morning, is eating, but has a very sore southern appendage, which is believed to be broken, and decidedly flattened out. Mrs. Bird had a subsequent busy time cleaning oil, water, and some blood from the kitchen floor.

Two Sailor Sons Of Doran Family Home on Furlough

Two youthful navy veterans, half of a quartet of a fighting Belleville family, arrived home from the west coast the other day on a well-deserved furlough.

They are Able Seamen T. G. (Jerry) Doran and Leading Stoker C. E. (Ted) Doran, sons of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Doran, 19 Pinnacle St.

Both sailors have been members of the "front line crew" of Canadian converted cruiser since December, 1942, which commissioned as a Canadian port for war repairs.

Jerry joined the Royal Canadian Navy four years ago and saw service with the Royal Navy for two years. He was "in" at several major invasions and on D-Day was a member of the crew of a landing assault craft which carried troops from transports to the beachheads. He has seen service at Arzeio and at Greece with his ship and had several interesting experiences when landing there.

Ted, who has been in the service for the past three years, is on a minesweeper for a year. He recently completed a petty officer's course. The two brothers met in Esquimalt in June, 1942 and both were assigned to the same ship.

Another brother Pilot Officer "Art" Doran, R.C.A.F., returned last June. He completed twenty operations. Stoker Petty Officer Doran, the fourth member of the quartet has been in the Navy for a year and at present is stationed at Sydney, N.S.

Cost Accountants Hear Speakers On Post-War Plans

The regular monthly dinner meeting of the Bay of Quinte Chapter the Society of Industrial and Cost Accountants of Ontario was held at the T.M.C.A. under the chairmanship of Mr. Mary Vanner. Fifteen members were present.

Following out a program adopted late fall, the local chapter had for its speakers for the evening two of their own members, Lorne McDougall and A. D. Counsell. Mr. McDougall spoke on "Municipal Post-War Planning in Belleville" and enlightened his listeners on the various plans and projects which have been, and are being entertained by the following committees: Board of Health, Hector Board, Parks Commission, Police Post-war Planning Commission. Some of the projects discussed included: The parks and beaches development, sewage disposal, dock extensions, survey of the labor situation, construction of the esplanade, new fire station, and the question of rehabilitation for returned soldiers.

Mr. A. D. Counsell, chose as his topic "Post Transportation Is Our Concern" and outlined in his talk the great opportunities available to the railroads in the post-war era, but the speaker warned that these same railroads will have to be right on their toes if they want to keep ahead of the air and automobile competition that will be offered by their close competitors the bus and the truck.

The speaker also told the audience of a little of history of the railroads of the U.S.A. and Canada and also gave some interesting facts in connection with a recent speed survey covering all roads of the North Frontier Continent.

Upon conclusion of each talk a question period was conducted which proved very interesting.

The speakers were introduced by Mr. Don LaFrance and the chairman of the chapter were extended by Mr. Murray Simmons.

Forcing the Rhine

Military and other history will for all timetime record one of the greatest events of the war and one of the greatest in human annals, the co-ordinated crossings of the River Rhine on Friday night and on Saturday and the landing of forty thousand airborne troops, accompanied by the greatest air fleet that ever crossed the English Channel with a total of about ten thousand planes involved on the side of the Allies.

United Nations' power has been demonstrated steadily for a long time but at no time was there a more brilliant performance, as it was then. Theyy. It is coupled with the name of Marshal Montgomery and with the tireless Prime Minister Churchill who was with the British General Staff at Montgomery's headquarters. The British Premier said that "British soldiers, it will long be told how, with our Canadian brothers and valiant United States Allies, this superb task was accomplished . Once the river line is pierced and the crust of German resistance is broken, the decisive victory in Europe will be near.

"May God prosper our arms in this noble adventure and our long struggle for life and Country, for dear life and for the freedom of the world."

General Montgomery who knew so well what he was preparing for the enemy over a few days ago he spoke of "the last round" in the war has been able to say "the last round is going very well."

Over the weekend the advance of the Allied armies across the Rhine was marked.

The Western Front has been hard on the German commanders as on the enemy armies. First Rommel, then Rundstedt, both out, and now Kesselring brought from the Italian front by Hitler to take over command of the crumbling defences of the west and to try to put up a last ditch stand for Hitler. Rommel was eclipsed in North Africa, and finally wounded on the Western Front where" he. was stationed when the Allies' thronged the beaches of Normandy and made their amazing drive across France. Rundstedt, his successor was lately supplanted and if Kesselring is in charge now, he has too been dealt a smashing blow by the crossing of the Rhine.

German generals have been given a series of mighty thrashings by the Russians, British and American military leaders and armies and the seat of German militarism at Prussia and Brandenburg is now controlled by the armies of Marshal Stalin.

The loss of the Rhine barrier is one of the greatest defeats in all history given the race that has had a record for military aggression for long centuries.

Germany Forced to Pay for Crimes

German militarism or tyranny show itself as it is and it is just the course that the Allied Powers are right to be expected to take. Holding out as she is doing Germany is bringing upon herself a terrible retribution. It is the old story of crime being run to earth by the forces of righteousness and justice. Germany and Hitler, Himmler, Goering and the others of the Huns are typical criminals and gangsters, caught in the trap of their own setting and of the path of their own making. They have all the weaknesses of criminals and the events of these latter days show in clear light how morally weak these men are. What is happening to them is natural. They have by their vice turned the world against them and humanity goes in to clean out the warlike enemy, the Nazi Germans, the Junkers and militarists.

Bingen

Bingen on the Rhine, taken a few days ago by American troops, is a famous spot because it lives in legend and romance with the story of the famous Mouse Tower and the poem of Caroline Norton telling of the death of a French Foreign Legion soldier at Bingen.

Those who went to school some years ago cannot forget the lines of Caroline Norton, "Bingen on the Rhine," nor can they forget "The Children's Hour" by Longfellow which refers to the legend of the Mouse Tower.

Caroline Norton was a granddaughter of Richard Brinsley Sheridan, one of the great names in English drama, author of "The Rivals" and "The School for Scandal" and one of the greatest of English orators.

Bingen is on the Rhine River is the ruin of the Mouse Tower. Legend says that a cruel Bishop Hatto caused hundreds of people to be burned to death in a barn and that when he sought refuge in the tower he was eaten by rats and mice. Near the town of ten thousand people is the well-known Bingerloch, a whirlpool, which was at one time a dangerous passage to navigation until 100 years ago when the sunken rocks were blasted out to leave a channel for ships 210 feet wide.

The Mouse-Tower is situated on a rock in mid-stream and legend says that a cruel bishop named Hatto caused hundreds of the poor to be burned to death in a barn and when he sought refuge in the tower, he was eaten by rats and mice.

In the neighborhood are the ruins of a castle where the Emperor Henry Fourth was imprisoned. Near Bingen the Germans erected a memorial for victories in the war with France in 1870-71.

Bingen though a small town whose population numbered 7,600 in 1906, is known to the English-speaking race chiefly as the centre of the legend of the Mouse Tower and the story of the death of a French soldier of the Legion, rather than for its own importance. It was formerly a wine producing neighborhood.

Rhubarb

(New York Times)

Noah Webster says rhubarb plants are tall, coarse herbs with large leaves and thick- succulent petioles. Technically this seems exact and sufficient. But these early spring days, when the nubby green and reddish heads are beginning to poke above the cold brown soil, the countryman is justified in his belief that Mr. Webster could have let himself go a little and still be far from comprehensive.

"Oil Shack" Popular Spot on Ship

By Ed Reed

In the Western Pacific—(delayed) One of the first friends I made aboard our aircraft carrier was a tall, well-built, bronzed sailor named Jerry Ryan.

Jerry, a lieutenant, smokes a pipe sometimes, and always wears his sleeves rolled up. He's from West Scout-ut, Davenport, Ia., but his wife is living in Indianapolis. She's a correspondent for Chain.

Jerry has served one hitch in the Navy before the war. He knows all the ships in the navy and can tell you a lot about them. Everybody likes him. He isn't especially talkative, yet it's safe to say he's more popular than anybody else on the ship.

Ryan is the "oil king" on the navy as "a good man." He's skilled in his work. He's dependable and a very smart. He'd die before he'd curry favor with anybody.

Here the ship's officer can depend on utterly—if that officer plays square with him. He'll get a pretender so quickly it would make you dizzy.

Ryan's concept of right and wrong is very sharply drawn, and the Irish in him makes battles when it comes across. The other boys were telling me of his accidents.

It was one of the days when Jap bombs hit his deck. He was on the pinnas. A great hole was torn in the deck. Several men were killed or severely wounded. Both of their comrades were still lying mangled on the deck.

A sailor came up to look at the damage, and Ryan overheard him say, "Oh boy, this is great. Now at last they'll have to send us back to America for repairs."

Without saying a word, Ryan turned and struck him down.

Ryan runs what is known as the "oil shack." From this little domain his confidences are known to all. He has dials and gauges and a phone with a direct line to the bridge. He hourly records of oil pressure and water levels and all that stuff.

The "oil shack" is a small room about the size of an apartment bathroom. In it are a desk, a bench and drawers full of tools, and one fourth big canvas cot.

Ryan's oil shack is a social centre. There is always somebody hanging around. You can get a cup of coffee there, look at sea shell collections, see card tricks, or find out the latest rumors. Ryan's oil shack is never five minutes ago.

Jerry brews coffee for his guests on a kind of stove over an electric grill. And soon he is going to make fudge. He learned it from a standard in the Philippines typhoon.

Some nights we pop corn in the "oil shack." Ryan who comes to eat popcorn is a Negro—a tall, athletic fellow from his home town of Kansas City. They were on the ship together for a year before they discovered they were from the same place.

The colored boy's name is Wesley Cooper. He is a cook. He was a star basketball player in the high school he attended in the Philippines typhoon.

Some nights we pop corn in the "oil shack." Ryan who comes to eat popcorn is a Negro—a tall, athletic fellow from his home town of Kansas City. They were on the ship together for a year before they discovered they were from the same place.

The colored boy's name is Wesley Cooper. He is a cook. He was a star basketball player in the high school he attended in the Philippines typhoon. When he gets done with his work he is considerably waiting for him at the University of Iowa.

Wesley comes to the shack almost every night after supper. He holds one hand up to it, and listens and grins and doesn't say much.

We were popping corn one night. One of the boys said: "Wes, how about getting some corn, Sambo?" And another one said "Wes, bring back a bag of peanuts, Sambo." And "And bring me a sandwich when you come down, will you Sambo?"

And Wes grins and his white teeth flash and he says: "I suppose you'd like for me to go up and cook you a whole meal?" And he never made a move.

Another of my best friends is Howard Wilson, a boy-next-door sort of fellow. Lieut. Jimmy Van Fleet, the fighter pilot who wrote for the Post a few months ago, is in fact they are good friends.

Wilson is a low-voiced, handsome and highly intelligent man of 26. He is a graduate engineer and a good business back in Pinday. He is part owner and general manager of three movie theatres. His wife is running them while he is away.

Wilson is the assistant engineer of the old houseboy, Jimmy Van Fleet was a boy friend Wilson and borrower money when he got hard up. Now the younger Jimmy drives a plane.

Wilson is the comparable humor of officers' quarters, and the old Howard lives the lower life of a sailor, sleeping in a hot, stuffy, crowded compartment, and wearing dungarees.

That's the way things go in wartime. Howard is old and wise and Jimmy is young and wise. Jimmy is the slightest. He accepts the war as a big adventure.

The other pilots know of my friendship with Jimmy and they keep keeping on the good side of Howard to insure he'll have a job when the war is over! He says he is.

DREW DISSOLVES

Saturday brought these developments:

1. Premier Drew announced the House will be dissolved and an election held as soon as arrangements can be made for the return of overseas servicemen in accordance with the Active Service Election Act which was passed last year.

2. C.C.F. Leader E. B. Jolliffe, opposition house leader, charged the premier had "deliberately plunged Ontario into a general election by calling and obtaining dissolution when it is neither necessary nor convenient."

He said a number of important "first sittings" would have cleared up the outstanding business of the session and "could not possibly have authorized Mr. Drew or his party to any serious inconvenience."

3. Mr. MacLeod called the Premier's decision "a usurpation of the supremacy of parliament."

4. The attorney-general threw into confusion the public accounts of the province and is a warning of dire ends to which party politics may go to subvert the majority will of the electorate people."

Drew Gives Statement

In his statement, which followed his second conference in two days with Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews, Premier Drew said his government had sought to avoid a provincial election but now that the first of them are locked in mortal combat with a powerful foe, an immediate election would be the fairest method of ascertaining the will of the people.

It would, however, be "contrary to constitutional practice for the government to take further support from a Legislature which had voted want of confidence in the government or that "by every possible device, which it has at its command, impeded the business of the Legislature and made it impossible to proceed with necessary legislation and business."

The large list of business items left hanging by the dissolution, which will also have to be dealt with later this week. The new Securities Act, the Elections Act, the Mines Act and the private bills affecting several provincial municipalities were all before the House at adjournment Thursday, and at his press conference on Thursday said that the dissolution would be dealt with until this week if a special session was called. Dissolution would be held "as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made for the presentation of legislation."

Continue Subsidy

The Premier said, however, that in the case of sugar beet, hog and cheese subsidies, the continuance payment of subsidies will continue during election.

"Satisfactory arrangements" have been made for supply of Premium Sugar exported." Payments can be made to the government on warrants signed by the Lieutenant-Governor.

The question of payment of sessional indemnities to members was in the hands of Province Treasurer Leslie Frost, the Premier said. Because the House sat only 26 of the stipulated 30 days, there was speculation that payments would be made on a per diem basis instead of the full $3,000 indemnity.

"Oil Shack" Popular Spot on Ship

By Ed Reed

In the Western Pacific—(delayed) One of the first friends I made aboard our aircraft carrier was a tall, well-built, bronzed sailor named Jerry Ryan.

Jerry, a lieutenant, smokes a pipe sometimes, and always wears his sleeves rolled up. He's from West Scout-ut, Davenport, Ia., but his wife is living in Indianapolis. She's a correspondent for Chain.

Jerry has served one hitch in the Navy before the war. He knows all the ships in the navy and can tell you a lot about them. Everybody likes him. He isn't especially talkative, yet it's safe to say he's more popular than anybody else on the ship.

Ryan is the "oil king" on the navy as "a good man." He's skilled in his work. He's dependable and a very smart. He'd die before he'd curry favor with anybody.

Here the ship's officer can depend on utterly—if that officer plays square with him. He'll get a pretender so quickly it would make you dizzy.

Ryan's concept of right and wrong is very sharply drawn, and the Irish in him makes battles when it comes across. The other boys were telling me of his accidents.

It was one of the days when Jap bombs hit his deck. He was on the pinnas. A great hole was torn in the deck. Several men were killed or severely wounded. Both of their comrades were still lying mangled on the deck.

A sailor came up to look at the damage, and Ryan overheard him say, "Oh boy, this is great. Now at last they'll have to send us back to America for repairs."

Without saying a word, Ryan turned and struck him down.

Ryan runs what is known as the "oil shack." From this little domain his confidences are known to all. He has dials and gauges and a phone with a direct line to the bridge. He hourly records of oil pressure and water levels and all that stuff.

The "oil shack" is a small room about the size of an apartment bathroom. In it are a desk, a bench and drawers full of tools, and one fourth big canvas cot.

Ryan's oil shack is a social centre. There is always somebody hanging around. You can get a cup of coffee there, look at sea shell collections, see card tricks, or find out the latest rumors. Ryan's oil shack is never five minutes ago.

Jerry brews coffee for his guests on a kind of stove over an electric grill. And soon he is going to make fudge. He learned it from a standard in the Philippines typhoon.

Some nights we pop corn in the "oil shack." Ryan who comes to eat popcorn is a Negro—a tall, athletic fellow from his home town of Kansas City. They were on the ship together for a year before they discovered they were from the same place.

The colored boy's name is Wesley Cooper. He is a cook. He was a star basketball player in the high school he attended in the Philippines typhoon. When he gets done with his work he is considerably waiting for him at the University of Iowa.

Wesley comes to the shack almost every night after supper. He holds one hand up to it, and listens and grins and doesn't say much.

We were popping corn one night. One of the boys said: "Wes, how about getting some corn, Sambo?" And another one said "Wes, bring back a bag of peanuts, Sambo." And "And bring me a sandwich when you come down, will you Sambo?"

And Wes grins and his white teeth flash and he says: "I suppose you'd like for me to go up and cook you a whole meal?" And he never made a move.

Another of my best friends is Howard Wilson, a boy-next-door sort of fellow. Lieut. Jimmy Van Fleet, the fighter pilot who wrote for the Post a few months ago, is in fact they are good friends.

Wilson is a low-voiced, handsome and highly intelligent man of 26. He is a graduate engineer and a good business back in Pinday. He is part owner and general manager of three movie theatres. His wife is running them while he is away.

Wilson is the assistant engineer of the old houseboy, Jimmy Van Fleet was a boy friend Wilson and borrower money when he got hard up. Now the younger Jimmy drives a plane.

Wilson is the comparable humor of officers' quarters, and the old Howard lives the lower life of a sailor, sleeping in a hot, stuffy, crowded compartment, and wearing dungarees.

That's the way things go in wartime. Howard is old and wise and Jimmy is young and wise. Jimmy is the slightest. He accepts the war as a big adventure.

The other pilots know of my friendship with Jimmy and they keep keeping on the good side of Howard to insure he'll have a job when the war is over! He says he is.

Toronto. The three men helped get the wounded away from the ship and Gooch, who could swim, took charge of a Carley float.

The terrific explosion stunned all for a moment", he said, "and then we found ourselves in the water and that there was no hope of saving the ship. Then the destroyer came alongside.

Wounded Lie on Deck.

"We scrambled up top", he continued, "and found a lot of the wounded lying on the deck. I sent word to the ward room that the entire room was flooded. The ship was sinking by the stern and I helped me get one of the wounded off. By this time the decks were awash.

"After we got away from the ship and reached a carley float the bows of the ship reared straight straight out of the water and we were afraid she would turn over. But she straightened with relief when it went straight down.

"I could feel she was gone soon as she was hit," said Lieut. Donald Gooch, R.C.N.V.R., of 3 Wellington Road, Westmount. "All the lights went out and I got out of the water on the confidential books and then took a look around to see if I could get on deck. I had to swim hard to get away from the bows as the ship reared up. I made my way to the whaler."

Masterfully Stunned.

So terrific was the explosion that Lieut. Gooch was momentarily masterfully stunned and some knocked unconscious with the concussion of the explosion of Bofors shells firing ship. Coder Barrie Meyer, of Regina said he was momentarily stunned but "nothing" until picked up from a floating float by the rescue ship. He dislocated his knee and was suffering from burns.

There was a terrific explosion and I remember coming to face down in the water with pieces of gun shields," said Able Seaman Ernest Hobbs, R.C.N.V.R., of 9630 Heal Ave., Vancouver. "Meyer was underneath me and I got him clear and then jumped into the water."

No One Aboard From Trenton.

Lieut. Harrison was also rescued and was awarded to learn on the news broadcast that Trenton, their corvette "Trentonian" had been sunk while escorting a convoy duty and had taken part in D-Day operations during the invasion of Normandy landing boat climbers the then commander, Lieut. W. E. Harrison, R.C.N.V.R., of 3 Wellington Road, Westmount, is reported missing. The record "Whirling Mattie," sung by the pupils of Trenton High school, while crossing the Atlantic was a great favorite.

Recently Lieut. Harrison was given a promotion and appointed to command the sunken Trentonian. Command of the Trentonian was taken over by Lieut. O. Glasser, formerly of Hamilton, Ont., where his father is a dentist. He joined the Navy in 1941 and was previously in command of the "Trentonian" sunk 14 minutes after it was torpedoed and its crew scrambled into the water, up less than an hour afterwards.

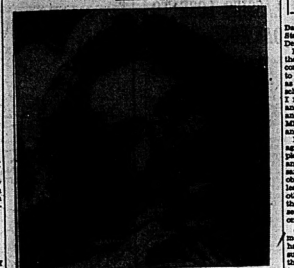
Bathing Daily for Beauty



Jinx Falkenburg believes in following a thorough bathing routine

By HELEN FOLLETT

THERE ARE GIRLS who always have the freshness of young trees in the spring dew about them. If they are, they bath friends, all of them. They race for shed-of the girls in the locker room who are casual about bubbling. who depend upon complexion preps that they take out of the make-up kit.

In every pore of the body is a sweet gland that is constantly exuding body wastes and a substance to keep the skin soft. Bathing daily is necessary for the wellbeing of both body and skin. These emulsions must be removed daily, if one is to be really clean. Then, too, there are the dead cells to which the odor of perspiration clings. There is considerable debris on the rotting shape.

Bath Brush Necessary.

To go over the skin surface lightly with a soaped wash cloth does not make for fastidious cleanliness. The bath brush is a great help in the few minutes in fairly warm water to loosen dead cuticle that is to use a heavy brush vigorously. The brush should have firm bristles that do not soften when they come in contact with water. A fine bristle brush costs plenty, we agree, but it is worth the money.

After the thorough scouring have an alternating hot and cold shower; follow these with a brisk rub down. Then you can use your fragrant bath tonic or dusting powder.

Bath Salts.

By bathing the skin all over the body is toned to healthy glow. As an organ of elimination, the delicate gland of the skin must have keen work to do. The daily bath is a must in treatment of acne and pimples and much to do about the complexion of these unsightly blemishes.

The bath can be made luxurious by the addition of bath salts that not only perfume the water, but soften it so the bath is more thorough.

Don't forget that when you are tired, worried or nervous, slipping into the tub will pick up your energy and put you on your feet again.

Addressing The Easter Greeting

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. How should an Easter greeting be addressed to a clergyman?

2. To a priest?

T. H.

1. To a clergyman who is not a Doctor of Divinity, address the card to THE REVEREND JOSEPH WELLS. If he is a Doctor of Divinity, to THE REVEREND JOSEPH WELLS, D.D. . . . OR THE REVEREND DR. JOSEPH WELLS.

2. A greeting card to a Roman Catholic priest should be addressed: THE REVEREND JOHN J. SHEEHAN. If the priest has a scholastic degree, write "DR." after the "REVEREND"; and if he is a member of a religious order, write the initials of the order after his name: for example, THE REVEREND DR. JOHN J. SHEEHAN, O. P.

Important notes about writing these titles: Always write THE before REVEREND. ("REVEREND" is not a title, like "MR", for example; it is an adjective of courtesy.) (2) It is best taste to spell "Reverend" in full, rather than to write "Rev." (3) It is bad taste to write the "Reverend Wells", that is, without the first name.

From A Soldier's Wife

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My husband is overseas. Would it be proper for me to include his name in signing Easter cards? . . . Helene

Yes, proper, and friendly, and a greeting that will be dearly welcome to your mutual friends. Naturally your husband would want to be included in your Easter greetings, just as he would if he were at home. And, to make your card even more personal, I suggest you add to the printed message a written message: for example, "Although Tom is far away, I know you and Jim will more than ever, would want me to include his Easter Greetings with mine. So . . . Easter greetings and dearest love to you both from both of us. And a prayer for peace soon."

Consult Your Parish Priest

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I was married two years ago at an Army camp, to the chaplain. My husband was sent overseas. He will come home very soon, and although we can't be remarried, I would like to know if it is possible to renew the rings blessed in our own church and to have present our families and the friends who would like to have seen us married. Then after that we would like to have a party for these relatives and friends. Thank you for your help.

S. T.

For authority for this plan you should consult with your own parish priest, if you are not a Roman Catholic, with your clergyman. If the blessing-of-the-rings, is permitted, I believe that it may be in private, that is, with no guests present. However, at any time afterward, you could properly plan to invite your and your husband's relatives and friends to a party, calling it a "welcome-home" party if you would like to.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dangerous for Parents to be Too Strict as Too Lax.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My parents are the strictest of the strict. No boy was allowed to come to see me, but I was allowed to go to work and earn my living as soon as I was through the high school, in the plant where I work. I fell desperately in love with a man and I didn't know he was married, and had a terrible experience. Well, I got through that, thank heaven, and now hate that man.

I want to start my life over again, know some nice young people but mother and father don't mingle and go out with them. But it's the same old story, mother and father objected, so I've been contented enough leaving home and going to another city. I'm 18 years of age. And there is no danger of my having a second experience like that first one.

L. F. G.

Strict parents should try to remember that they were young, or perhaps some unhappy experience, such as the girl has had, should remember it too bitterly and take this wrong road in trying to shield their daughter. When a girl is earning her living, she is bound to meet men outside the home, and it's only common-sense on the part of parents to make things pleasant for her and to let friends under the parental roofing.

Also a girl should tell her parents she is thinking of going to another city. I hope she has enough money to take care of herself until she secures a suitable job.

Servicemen Wants to Marry Before Going Overseas

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 22 years old and expect to be sent overseas shortly. I'm engaged to a girl of 26 and have been in love with her for a long time, but my parents carry on so about my engagement that I just don't know what to do. The girl is willing to marry me now, but my parents say she is doing that only to get the allowance, which I know is not true. What do you think of that, considering the difference of our ages and the uncertainty of my return?

Just Jos

There are a number of very sensible reasons why parents and his girl must consider before one of these last-minute marriages takes place. Tell me your age, the girl for a long time—that's favorable. The fact that she's three years older than you doesn't make much difference these days, when women have learned the art of keeping themselves attractive.

Whether you'll come home safe and "beauty is a secondary question. The type of girl is she? Domestic? Serious? Maternal? One who will stand loyally without flinching? Is she the flirtatious type who makes you feel that others may admire her? Has she the "comeither" glance? Have your parents met her? Do they like her? Objection to her as your wife? These questions you must consider seriously, prayerfully.

Then, my dear Joe, there is this overall question which is apt to confront any servicoman although he may not realize it.

An ocean dividing you, are you the type to remain faithful?

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Posture rules for the housewife.

Career girls are pretty much on parade all day long. Posture is a prime requirement. The girl behind the counter and the high salaried executive realize that fact clearly enough. Being in the public eye, they make an effort to carry themselves with a certain dignified air.

The housewife hasn't any incentive to walk gracefully and majestically. She is scuttling around at home, doing the family wash, mending clothes, answering doorbells, fighting dirt, wiping the baby's nose, doing many menial chores that are tiresome drudgery, no matter how you look at them. How she gets through the day depends upon her attitude toward the vocation and whether or not she realizes the effect of the strain she carries her body.

A kitchen sink set so low that a woman has to bend down when washing dishes will, in time, cause shoulders to round forward and collar bones to pop out. With the dishpan set at the proper height for straightness, the contour of the body will take on the appearance of the ideal figure. Women who are housewife can get around this difficulty by placing the dishpan on a wooden block, raising it so she can stand fairly erect, free herself of muscle strain.

Foot discomfort is a factor that checks good posture and many figure deformities. Many women encase their feet in shoes that fit them even better than hand and glove heels. They love their old shoes, have a fondness for them as many men love their old hats. They shouldn't do it. Shoes that have spread out to the shape, that offer no support to the waist of the foot, that allow the toes to curl and the muscles of the legs makes the ankles weak. Worst still, sloppy shoes are the cause of nerve fatigue and curtied dispositions.

Research has found that a woman in a six or seven room apartment will walk seven miles or more a day as she goes about her domestic duties. If she lives in a house with large rooms and a second floor, she will cover a greater distance. She must climb up and down, and to the basement. She goes from kitchen to living room and back again. She is a pedestrian and as such she should have her shoes comfortably and properly shod.

The proper shoe for her is an oxford with a wide heel not more than one half inches high. It should be snug over the instep, wide enough so toes can wriggle.

We offer two suggestions for the boss of the menage:

Chest high, backbone tall, tummy flat.

Don't fold up like a camp chair when resting.

By maintaining correct carriage, work will be made easier. When the shoulders fall forward, the lungs are cramped so they are not properly air-washed.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN (Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa (CP) — Cheese, a food celebrated since Bible times, should not be considered as just a condiment but as an important part of our diet, Dr. L. B. Pett, Director of the Nutrition Division says.

Important nutritional because of its high percentage of calcium and protein, it is rich in the bone and muscle builders. So be generous when serving it, remembering that it is a food," he said.

Cheese is a concentrated food—the boy David in early Biblical stories carried rich gift, including cheese, to the young warriors in camp. Later, during the conflicts between the Muslems and Christians, it was an important food in the defenders' army and was a part of the booty sought by the invaders.

Canadian cheddar cheese, produced largely in the areas around Belleville, Trent, and Lake St. John, Que., is being shipped at the rate of 130,000,000 pounds a year to Britain, and in-smaller quantities to the three services, R.C.M.P. and police, the British West Indies and Newfoundland. A quarter-pound package goes into prisoners-of-war parcels, but with so much being exported, plenty is still put aside for civilian needs.

A recipe for cheese puffit, suggested by the Agriculture Department Consumer Section, is economical and can be prepared in advance—it is actually improved if it is thoroughly chilled before baking.

CHEESE PUFFIT: The recipe requires 12 half-inch slices of slightly stale bread, cut crusts, sliced four eggs, 2 2-3 cups of milk, ¾ teaspoon salt, pepper and paprika.

Trim..the crusts from the bread. Arrange alternate slices of bread and cheese in a greased baking dish. Beat eggs slightly, add milk and seasonings and pour over the bread and cheese. Cover and keep in the ice-box until ready to bake. Set in a pan of hot water, and oven-poach in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, until set. . . . Remember, if thoroughly chilled before baking, the puffit will puff up like a souffle.) This serves six servings.

CHEESE ROAST—Another delicious cheese main course, suggested by the Agriculture Department, is cheese roast. Combining cheese and beans, both high in protein it is specially good for lunch or supper.

The recipe calls for two cups of grated cheese, two cups cooked navy beans, ½ cup finely-diced celery, one teaspoon minced parsley, one egg, two cups and stale bread crumbs, two tablespoons mild fat and pepper to taste.

Mix the beans smooth with a fork, and add, with the celery and parsley, to the cheese. Add slightly beaten egg and mix thoroughly. Add fat, fairly soft, to crumbs and rub in. Add to cheese mixture until stiff enough to shape into a loaf. Roll loaf in remaining crumbs. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees Fahrenheit, for 30 minutes, or until nicely browned. Serve hot with tomato sauce. If desired, a small onion, finely chopped, may be added to the roast. This recipe serves six.

Wife Preservers.

Each can help you to save ways all day. When working or cleaning upstairs, set the alarm to ring free to start a meal, or to listen to a favorite radio program. Set it, too, to remind you of your cake in the oven, if your stove has no timer.

Fashion 3-2 Victory Sunday Night in Boston to Put Them Game Down

Boston, March 26 — (CP) — Detroit Red Wings, recovering from two successive defeats at home, subdued a 3-2 victory over Boston Bruins before a capacity crowd of 13,909 here Sunday night to vault back into the National League race. Bruins lead the eight-point semi-final series 4-3.

Assuring a fifth game in Detroit, the triumphant Red Wings played a steady type of game in contrast to their inept performances at home when they allowed Boston checking tactics to ruffle them and force them to rush and shoot wildly.

Detroit took advantage of a Boston lapse late in the first period to score twice in 31 seconds. Rookie Ted Lindsay rifled in Eddie Bruneteau's pass at 19:00 and, before the end of the period, veteran Murray Armstrong stole the puck from Pat Egan deep in the Boston zone and slammed it past goalie Paul Bibeault.

That two-goal margin was maintained until late in the middle session, when Egan whipped home a long forward pass from Gaye Stuart, which both players claimed one man short.

Bruins quickened their pace in the final frame but with less than five minutes remaining, Mud Bruneteau drew a clear shot at the nets and by scoring an unassisted 30-footer from almost impossible angle.

Gino Bonelli set the Bruins' hopes flying again a minute later when he socked home after taking Paul Goldin's passout. Faced by a suddenly revitalized forward line of Milt Dowley, Herb Cain and Jack McCall, they poured rubber at netminder Harry Lumley and with 30 seconds to go they almost did manage to throw an alphabet plaster into the last furious drive that failed to crack the Wings' defence.

LEAFS LOOK BAD AS LES CANADIENS TAKE GAME 4-1

Three-Goal Outburst in the Second Frame Too Much for Det. Boys

By EDDIE LEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 26—(CP)—Coach Dick Irvin says he is happy to regain his patching job on Montreal Canadiens was a terrific success.

The Habitants limped into Toronto Saturday and swarmed over Maple Leafs, 4-1 in the third game of their eight point semi-final Stanley Cup series before 15,087 fans. Leafs lead the series 4-2.

Irvin tossed Frank (Butch) Bathan, husky Montreal Royal, into injured Frank Eddolls' defence slot and replaced Buddy O'Connor, out for the season with a wrenched knee, with Johnny Mahaffy of Pittsburgh Hornets. The revamped squad accomplished what the team at full strength failed to do at Montreal when they lost 3-2 and 1-0.

"Butch helped a lot on defence," Irvin said. "He's big and made the going in there tough. Mahaffy also fitted in well but the whole team turned in a fine performance."

3-goal Onslaught

Canadiens seized a 1-0 advantage in the first period, then unleashed a three-goal onslaught in the second to zoom back into contention for the Stanley Cup. Bob Davidson accounted for the Leaf goal in the last period on a play with Babe Pratt and Gaye Stuart.

The tempo ranged from extremely slow to extremely fast but the emphasis remained steady on hasty thumps in the rugged contest that saw 29 penalties, six to Canadiens.

Murph Chamberlain stepped from the penalty box midway in the opening period, picked up a loose puck and set Elmer Lach up in front of the Leaf goalie Frank McCool for the first goal.

Bob Fillion touched off the second period rally with a smooth effort at 6:16 of the second period a few minutes after he had beat McCool only to have the play called back. Dutch Hiller, on a play with Mahaffy, and Chamberlain, with help from Butch Bouchard, scored before the period ended.

The teams meet again here tomorrow and in Montreal Thursday with a sixth game if necessary Saturday night.

BELLEVILLE 'Y' LASSIES LOSE TO OAKWOOD 42-28

Enter Final Series for I.O.B.A. Title by Defeating Brantford 18-9

In an rough & tumble basketball game as they had participated in this season, the Belleville 'Y' ladies were eliminated by the Toronto Oakwoods in the Ladies Ontario Basketball Association finals game played at Oakwood Collegiate Saturday night. Previous to being beaten 42 to 28 in the finals the Belleville girls defeated the Brantford girls 18 to 9 in the provincial I.O.B.A. semi-finals Saturday afternoon, Brantford had previously eliminated Peterboro.

Coach Ed Shortt's local ladies set up a strong defence to beat Brantford in the semi-final, while up town they played consistent ball to score nine points in each half. The local scoring was well divided, Captain Dodds headed the scoring list with seven points. "Pee Wee" Logan piled up three points, Gilbert, Peg Ronsley, Marion Salisbury and Helen Garrow added two each. Gallin, Teague and White counted the losers' nine points.

By the time Belleville, Gilbert, Ronsley, Garrow, Womacott, Burkholder, Allison, Dodds, Logan, Rowbotham, Thomson, Salisbury and Rush, Brantford: Teague, Norris, Rich, Hall, Gallin, Wilson, Bowlen, Sherritt, Miller, Brooker, Hall and Cole. Referee: Lady Reeves.

"Glad" Smith, fleet-footed forward of the Oakwoods was the top scoring ace of the game with 24 points to her credit. Gilbert netted six more each for the winners. On the Belleville squad Dodds and Ellie Gilbert counted five baskets to rack up ten points, while Peg Ronsley registered four. The Oakwoods who went down battling courageously.

The game was filled with action and not without its moments as roughness dominated the game until the match all but got out of the hands of the referee. "Pee Wee" Logan, Belleville forward and Toronto pheant all suffered sufficiently serious injuries to be forced to the bench during the game's official action. Salisbury, as the game's official attendant he was unable to cope with the situation.

Accounting for 22 points for his skater, Mattie Mazza led the Hayes Heil Aces of Merritton, Ont., to a 97-31 victory over the Windsor five in the Border City Saturday night to take the first game of a best-of-seven series for the Ontario Senior Basketball Championship.

When Westwood ladies defeated Toronto Marlboros 26-21 in the Second-Nobbs series at Brantford, Saturday night, a three-way tie was created with Brantford Ladies and Westwood for the Ontario Ladies' Basketball championship. A championship. To break the deadlock, Brantford will play Hamilton April 2, the winner to meet Toronto April 7 both games to be played at Hamilton.

Byron Nelson came through with a victory yesterday in the $7,200 Open Golf Tourney at Greensboro, N.C., with a 271 total for 72 holes to beat out Sam Byrd of Detroit by eight strokes. The win put Nelson on equal terms with Sam Snead with six firsts each for the winter tournament season.

Although he is awaiting the call from the army, Max Bentley, Leaf game winner last season, signed a contract for the St. Louis Cardinals after a talk with President Sam Breadon at Cairo, Ill., training camp Saturday.

CASUAL COMMENT

by K.J.C.

Bill 'er up

Dinner was a little late, so the hostess played the piano. She finished but there was still an interval of waiting. To relieve the tedium of silence, she turned to one of the waiting guests and asked:

"Do you play, or would you like a cocktail before dinner?"

The gentleman gave a start of surprise and pleasure. "Why yes, thank you," he said. A couple on the way here, but I think I could stand another."

Disastrous Weekend

Belleville's high-hoopsters ran into a few setbacks over the week-end, although Ed Shortt's Belleville "Y" lassies did advance to the provincial I.O.B.A. finals Saturday only to be eliminated by the Toronto Oakwoods 42 to 28. The Belleville girls beat Brantford 18 to 6 in the afternoon semi-final game to move into the final bracket. Brantford had previously eliminated Peterboro. In the Brantford finals the local girls played consistent basketball to score nine points in each half, as our defence worked strongly to limit Brantford to three points each half.

In the final game however, Coach Shortt says it resembled nothing more than basketball "Pee Wee" Logan, Peg Ronsky and Ruth Oliphant suffered injuries necessitating the calling of time. When Captain Marion Salisbury protested to the Toronto referee regarding unnecessary roughness the official replied he could do nothing about it, that an old Toronto custom.)

Incidentally the Toronto Oakwoods is the same team that eliminated the Belleville Y.M.C.A. in the provincial finals of the I.O.B.A. in 1943. It seems the Toronto ladies' league has a system all its own by which to send teams out into the provinces championship playdowns. They operate a senior league all season with the top team advancing to the finals playdowns, the second place club goes out in the Intermediate "A" ranks, and the third place club into the Intermediate "B" series. Nice work, if you can get it.

In the OCHSA Interscholastic cage playdowns local teams were eliminated in the quarterfinal series. The Belleville senior boys lost to Oshawa 49 to 31 on Bob Townsend's seniors were off on their shooting. Miss Morrison's B.C.I. senior girls were pushed out by Oshawa while Cecil Stevens' Albert College boys lost to Peterboro C.I. in the junior interscholastic series. And that's that for basketball, except for the local Intermediates and Juveniles in the forthcoming O.B.A. playdowns.

No Short Here—

The strangest conversion in basketball was that of Moe Berg, who became a catcher by accident, reports Shirley Povich, sports columnist of the Washington Post.

"At the time, Berg was the regular shortstop of the Boston Red Sox," relates Povich. "The club came East with two catchers, Manager Ray Schalk and George McCurdy. In the first inning, Schalk suffered a broken finger.

"Schalk signalled McCurdy into the game and went to the bench in disgust. "We'll be in rotten shape if McCurdy gets hurt," he moaned.

"Don't worry," said Berg, "you've got a good catcher right here on the bench."

"Throw batings, Berg," you asked for it," said Schalk, 'go in there and catch.'

"Berg did, but actually he hadn't asked for it. When he cracked to Schalk that 'you've got a good catcher right here on the bench,' what I wasn't referring to himself. 'I was talking about Earl Sheely, our first baseman, who used to be a catcher in the Coast League,' said Berg, who found himself embarked on a ten-year career as a catcher.

Remember when

The Boston Bruins finished the greatest season of league hockey in modern times 16 years ago today after winning 36 games out of 44. Dit Clapper, Yelland, star centre player, set an all-time scoring record of 43 goals and 30 assists. Boston won the Stanley Cup that year, but bowed to the Montreal Les Canadiens in the semi-finals playdowns. This year Maurice Richard scored 45 goals, but one of the greatest scoring feats was that of Joe Malone in the old N.H.A. when he scored 44 goals in 22 league games.

Canadiens Best.

The City Editor, C. D. Tice, witnessed the Toronto-Montreal contest in Toronto on Saturday and he is still wondering how the Leafs managed to win two contests in succession. Tice declares that for minutes of the first period they swarmed over Canadiens but Durnan was invincible and from there in the play simply played into the setup.

Irvin's hope were dying in the second period when Bruneteau and Pavelich beat Durnan for two goals. Murphy Chamberlain was in for the Habitants and it was on everyone on the Leaf roster. Richard was held to three more power to hurdle the barrier. Incidentally Detroit's power took into the running with a win over Boston Bruins.

BUFFALO BISONS LOSE TO BARONS OVER WEEKEND

In Other Half of Series Hershey Bears Take Edge on Capitals

By The Canadian Press

Cleveland Barons, twice victorious over Buffalo Bisons during the weekend, took a 3-1 lead in their best-of-seven Hockey League semi-final series. Barons won 5-3 at Buffalo Sunday following a 5-1 triumph at Cleveland Saturday.

Hershey Bears had a 2-1 lead in the second-place semi-final series as a result of splitting their weekend series with Indianapolis Capitals. Bears, who handed Capitals their third straight defeat of the series 5-1 Saturday, went down 4-3 Sunday at Indianapolis.

Cleveland Hampton's two third-period goals provided Barons' margin for victory at Buffalo after Bisons had twice forged ahead. George Boothman, Jr., accounted for two of Barons' goals.

At Indianapolis, coach Johnny Borrell scored the tying and winning goals after a pair by Bill Gooden had sent Hershey into the lead.

At Cleveland, Lio Gasparini led off a four-goal scoring spree in the second period and doubled up on another in the final period after Ray Powell had scored Barons' only goal.

Hal Cooper sparked the Bears at Hershey, scoring two of their six goals. Veteran Bill Thomson, playing with an injured arm, provided Capitals' only score.

Buffalo plays at Cleveland tomorrow and Indianapolis at Hershey in what may be the final contests of the series.

German Code Demands Gift for Gift

(By Thelma de Kerzaverac in "Wonderland," London, Eng.)

"The German national character is hard for non-Germans to understand. Even their native ways of life are often puzzling to the foreign observer. For instance, they have a whole code governing the exchanging of gifts and the word "Revanchieren," which literally means "revenge," gives the principle under that convention becomes a law. Failure to revanchieren is almost a point of honour that if someone gives you a present it you must give him a present in return, and moreover you must mentally specify the fact that your present is, so to speak, the return engagement by uttering the word "Revanchiert."

In other words you must announce: "I have done my social duty by giving you a present, and I am therefore revenged!"

Niagara Peninsula Teams Secure Wins In Four Divisions

Toronto, March 26 (CP)—Representatives of the Niagara Peninsula Saturday swept the Central Ontario Secondary School Association Basketball competition here with victories in the four divisions.

The schools from Niagara easily overcame their Oshawa-Peterborough District rivals in the senior girls, senior boys and junior boys contests but encountered stiff resistance in the junior girls final.

A last-minute basket by Janet Meritter brought Welland High school junior girls an 18-16 victory against Bowmanville high school in a hotly-contested game. Welland led 10-9 at half time.

Stamford collegiate senior boys outclassed Oshawa collegiate 34-20 in the easiest triumph of the competition. Coach J. D. Waugh's boys trailed 40-11 at half-time and were unable to catch Stamford in the final half.

Welland senior girls, winning the second title for their school, disposed of Cobourg 37-13 without much trouble. Jean Gardiner was high scorer for Welland. Gene Goddy had eight for the losers.

LESSON NO. 66
By SAM GORDON

Many problems may be found when you bid the second round. If your second bid is passed, partner may be much distressed.

Take unto yourself this hand

♠Q 7 5 3
♥K J 6 2
♣9 8 7

You have five tricks, two sure tricks, a biddable heart suit, support for anything partner can do. Bids follow the order of choice in "A-B-N"; takeout, assist, no trump. A jump takeout shows six tricks.

If partner opens with one club or one diamond, takeout to one heart. If partner then bids one spade, jump to three spades to show tricks enough for a game in that suit.

If partner opens with one spade, takeout to two hearts. If he then bids two spades, to three in any other suit, jump to four spades to show enough for game in that suit.

If partner opens with one club or one diamond, takeout to one heart. Jump your assist with four hearts. Jump your assist in that suit.

Suppose partner opens one club or one diamond, takeout to one heart, and he then bids a jump to two spades. Jump your assist to three spades to show your support for that suit.

If partner opens with one club or one diamond, takeout to one heart, and he then bids two hearts

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 3

Foyle grinned expansively. "We haven't had a murder here in Centre Street, doc, but we thought of that one, too! A private watchman in the neighborhood saw it. 1896. Book-keeper murdered at 10th and Fifth around three-thirty a.m. But—you know Bullock sacked—he don't suppose there are in this Dunwich-Arkham-Innsmouth district the watchmen. Of course he didn't get the license number. Said he couldn't see how the driver was wearing. He only noticed the car because the lights were turned off and, he couldn't understand any one parking a car outdoors at three a.m., in such a blizzard. At first, he thought it was empty. Then he saw someone moving inside the car. He said he thought it was 'one of those wedding parties.' Not being a cop, he let it alone, and a few minutes later the car drove away."

Basil made one more effort.

In the Criminal Courts annex he found Morris Black, the district attorney of an era considerably antedating Thomas E. Dewey, indulging in a press conference. The big, shabby office was filled with young men, most of whom carried cameras and knelt on the floor to get the photographers the most effective angle. At a little distance, Basil could see lines of expensive ritual. Every few months Sobel received the press and told them nothing—that's a thing of the past. And a week or so later, the press would announce the racketeers had entered a new field.

Sobel was always a little humor after one of these press conferences. But his fate lengthened as he listened to Basil.

"My dear Willing, stick to your last, and leave detection to the detectives! I'm certainly not going to badger a very charming heiress just because I happen to look like a little waif on a slab in the mortuary!"

Basil had a small office of his own in the district attorney's suite. He sat down at his desk trying to concentrate on the analysis of Sobel's case that he had made a few days before in another case. But the face with the wide set gray eyes and black lashes came between him and the calculations he was making.

He threw down his pen and stared at the dingy brick wall beyond his window, without seeing them. A dim recollection was stirring in his mind.

He reached for the telephone and gave the number of the hospital where he was chief of the psychiatric clinic.

"Dr. Bartlett, please . . . Hello, Fred? . . . What was that case you mentioned as a possible cure for schizophrenia? Something that increased the rate of basal metabolism. You said it was sometimes used as a basis for reducing medicines . . . I see. I suppose it's rather in large doses . . . ? Thanks."

He replaced the receiver for a moment, and then called Lambert.

"Basil. I've an idea about that case we talked over yesterday. . . . I haven't time to explain now, but look up this Annales de Physiologie et Physico-Chimie Biologiques for 1925 and 1926, I've got the date, Volume 2, Page 117."

Foyle's evening a performance of Sadlo tempted Basil into the extravagance of an omnibus seat. He found it full of music of his mother's race. Only three rows in front of him sat General Archer with his wife and niece. The General looked as if he would rather have been dozing over his evening paper, Mrs. Archer looked as if she would rather have been playing contract, and Isobel Archer, thin and severe, in crimson satin that matched her hair, looked as if she would rather have been at a Harlem night club. But Mrs. Archer was "bringing out" the niece from Dublin, in New York that winter, and opera was part of the "bringing out" process.

During the first intermission, he spoke to Isobel, slipping into a temporarily vacant seat beside Isobel.

"I wish you'd take me to Harlem with you this time," he said, promptly. "Those people have the right idea. They're having Nazi-ready. I wonder who they are? Fourth box from this end. . . . Why, I do believe it's Kitty Jocelyn!"

"Where?" Basil turned with a celerity that startled her.

But the box was empty.

"Why, Basil," Isobel asked me something awfully queer," chattered Isobel as the lights were dimmed. "She wanted to know if anything out of the ordinary happened at Kitty Jocelyn's since the other evening. As if anything out of the ordinary could happen at a coming-out party!"

When Basil entered his office Saturday morning he found the district attorney inquiring for him. There was a shade of embarrassment in Morris Sobel's manner.

"Hello!" He grinned unconsciously. "You win! Remember that body found in the snow? There is some connection with Miss Jocelyn after all. I'd like you to come into my office. There's a girl in there. A friend of commissioner Archer's, Basil, I don't know just what to make of her. She has information that I'm inclined to think is important, and I want you to do your stuff."

"Right-ho!"

"We—ll, not exactly 'hoping'. But it would save me a lot of unpleasantness if a high police official were—er—suffering from a nervous breakdown. That's what you call it when they're rich, isn't it?"

Basil followed Sobel down a corridor into his private office. General Archer was already there, and Basil recognized some of the big, big window stood a girl with her back to the room. She was extravagantly thin, and dressed in black, except for sheer stockings and a ripple of chinchilla on her shoulders.

"Kai Lung! Come here!"

She spoke with a slightly foreign intonation. She did not pay no attention. As she turned from the window, Basil saw why.

It was uncanny. The hollow cheeks, the sunken eyes, the eyes gray as smoked crystal, and startlingly pale under black lashes only three days ago he had seen this face at the mortuary, relaxed in death and disfigured by a vivid, yellow stain. Now it was alive, the skin a clear, beautiful ivory, the lips painted scarlet.

"This is Dr. Willing—Miss Jocelyn," said Sobel.

The girl pouted. "Not Jocelyn! Please! Did you at least twenty times that my name is Ann Jocelyn Claude?"

"Then, can't be three of you!" Basil said.

"Three?" the girl stared. "Three what?"

"Three girls who look so much alike."

"Who said anything about a third girl?"

The dog looked at the door as though it expected some one else. But no one came. It began to whimper.

"Be quiet, Kai Lung!" But the dog continued to whimper. "There are only two girls who look alike, and my cousin, Kitty Jocelyn."

"Where's Kitty Jocelyn now?" asked Basil.

"I don't know. I've come to ask you."

Sobel switched on the inter-office telephone and instructed a stenographer in the next room to take notes of the conversation. "Now, Miss—er—Claude, please go over your whole story from the very beginning. And omit no details. However irrevelant they seem, they may have a bearing on the case."

Willing's gray eyes were dancing. Archer frowned. Inspector Foyle had a brief coughing spell.

"I think this chair is the most comfortable." Basil pushed a leather armchair close to the district attorney's desk, so she had to cross the room to reach it. She thanked him with a smile, not responsive, and sat down so as never to study her face and profile.

"Is one allowed to smoke here?" Without waiting for an answer, she took out a case, fitted with the oval cigarettes. As she bent her head to Basil's light, he watched the reaction of her pupils to the flame.

"Thanks." As she leaned back, her glance fell on the dog. "I hope you don't mind my calling Kai Lung. I just couldn't leave him with Kitty's servants. He was Kitty's dog, and now she has disappeared . . . ."

"Disappeared!" interrupted Basil. "Why wasn't the Missing Persons' Bureau notified?"

Ann lowered the long lashes and looked at them. "The circumstances were—peculiar."

"If you'd only begin at the beginning, Miss Claude!"

"But that's so hard, isn't it? Because nothing ever really has a beginning. There's always something before that and something before that. Kitty's disappearance began as a joke . . . ."

"A—joke?" Basil was thinking of that body in the snow-drift. "When did you last see your cousin?"

"The night of her coming-out party. That was Tuesday."

Sobel looked startled, at Basil. Both recalled that the body had been found in the snow early Wednesday morning.

"You spoke of Aunt Rhoda," said Basil. "Do you live with your cousin and her stepmother?"

"I've been living—only the last four months. I never even saw them before then. You see my mother died when I was born, and drew Claude, the biological chemist, for a father."

"Of course!" cried Basil. "Didn't he write an apologia for Lamarck in 1913?"

"Oh, then you've heard of him! Sir Wal Claude's book makes me so cross the way people have always made a fuss about Darwin, who never did anything but collar a lot of money, while nobody seems to have heard of daddy who was worth all the Jocelyns put together!"

"You'd never get a Darwinist to admit it!"

She laughed. "I know. Daddy's book is a red rag to them. Of course he was much too English! Kitty's father and Uncle Edgar. Daddy died when I was thirteen and Uncle Edgar settled down Menton, on the Riviera, because living was cheap there."

Ann pause and looked about for an ash tray. "Thanks." She flicked the ash into it. "Because Kai Lung took from Sobel's desk. "My mother died last April, and the same time stocks went down and the bonds went up, the bits left of my money daddy had left melted away. I didn't know what to do until I happened to see in the Saturday Globe that Mrs. Gerald Jocelyn and her daughter were at a hotel in Cannes. I hadn't even known they were in Europe—my mother was so completely cut off from her own family. But I took my courage in both hands and went straight to Aunt Rhoda and asked her if Uncle Gerald could put me a job in America. She told me he had died years ago and that she and Kitty were just back in Europe after since. I'd heard some funny things about Aunt Rhoda. My mother used to say she was an 'adventuress' who had 'snapped' poor Gerald' and all that sort of thing. But she really wasn't a bit like that. She was rather quiet, attire and young looking and beautiful, very dressed. And kind, too, because she took me on as her secretary. I don't know typing or shorthand, but she said she wanted some one to write social notes by hand when Kitty came out in New York next winter. I was only too glad to do it for board and passage to America. If she hadn't helped me I don't know what I should have done. The understanding was that I'd be free to look for a real job in New York as soon as the coming-out business was over.

"We spent two months in Cannes and sailed from Villefranche in November. The last few weeks we've been living in a house on Fifth Avenue that Grandfather Jocelyn left to Uncle Gerald. It has a ballroom, so Aunt Rhoda decided to have Kitty's party there, instead of going to a hotel. It was like getting ready for a big home wedding only a million times worse. There were people in and out of the house all the time. . . ."

At this point, Inspector Foyle interrupted.

"I know, Miss Claude, you'll be able to give us a list of all the people who came to the house the day your cousin disappeared. If possible, I'd like to know exactly what time each one came and left."

The wide, gray eyes gazed at him helplessly. "You've never had a coming-out party, have you, Inspector?"

"I—er—" Foyle reddened. "Naturally not!"

"Oh, I'm not trying to be funny! I just meant that you don't know what it's like the day of a party —especially if you're having it at home. There's the caterer and his men, and the florist and his men, and the orchestra leaders and their men. Then there's the social secretary and her secretary, and the messenger boys bringing flowers from friends and relatives, and—oh, of course, I'm sure you know all about it if they can't, and one of them is a detective. There's a constant coming and going in and out of the house, and the servants are busier than ever. Besides, I'm sure you can remember," said the district attorney, "that Inspector Foyle's time is limited. He has to be at his office by nine o'clock."

"Well, I had breakfast in bed with Aunt Rhoda, and then I went with Kitty to Bonwit's. It was Kitty's first time. I took Aunt Rhoda's car, and left her downtown while she got her own dressmaker after that, she and I drove to the bank for Aunt Rhoda's jewels—the pearls for Kitty to wear that evening. She was wearing them with Victorine, Aunt Rhoda's maid, who'd been with her for years. I'd never seen Aunt Rhoda, Kitty and I after luncheon, Victorine gave Kitty a massage, fingernails and cure and so forth. Victorine used to be premiere main at Alsatsky's in the rue Royale and she's an artist at make-up. Aunt Rhoda lured her away with higher wages when she and Uncle Gerald were going to India on their honeymoon. She lived beyond the beauty parlor line, of course, I never all dared that we were about the same features underneath all that."

Sobel looked up at a short hour!" Basil peered at the confused planes of his face. "Go on, please."

"Oh, yes—cov." She snatched at the hat. Short, dark hair clung in smooth waves to a small head. "But I wanted to see Kitty have my hair cut or my eyebrows shaped in Menton. The upkeep is too expensive and we never went to parties there or anything like that.

"Then I had to have your hair cut?"

"That night—the night of the party. I didn't really want to but Kitty asked me."

"Suppose you take the events of the day in the order they occurred."

"Let me see. Kitty and Victorine, her fingertips to her forehead. "The next thing I remember is Mrs. Jocelyn coming in with snowflakes all over her furs."

Capt. Burke Tells Vivid Story of Jap Brutality

Tales of Japanese brutality and Bohinian hospitality of American prisoners-of-war were brought to Oshawa recently, by Capt. Robert Gordon Burke of the United States Army.

Capt. Burke, husband of Mrs. Harriet Burke, of Guelph, was captured in the fall of Corregidor, May 6, 1942, and was finally released when American Rangers raided the Camp Cabanatuan, 60 miles north of Manila, January 30 of this year.

Capt. Burke, who was born in Chicago, was employed with a mining company in Manila and spent almost three years in the Philippines before the outbreak of war, December 7, 1941. He enlisted with the American Army five days later, in the motor transport division of the Quartermaster Stores.

He had his wife, the former Harriet Ann, in Nouvania, Que., when he left for the Philippines, but by the position in Manila, Mrs. Burke said that in 1941 all dependents of Federal employees were ordered out of the island during the bombing of Pearl Harbor.

"The Japs did not practice any rules of the Geneva Convention," Capt. Burke declared. "It was a common sight to see camp to see men beaten to death or bayoneted because of a misinterpretation of an order. They worked on you with clubs, bayonets or gun butts. I remember one time that I didn't move fast enough. I found myself on the ground being struck with the butt of a gun."

Capt. Burke's Story.

Here is Captain Burke's full story:

"I was one of 9,000 Americans and 4,000 to 5,000 Filipinos on Corregidor. After the fall of Bataan we were bombed day after day. We had some ammunition and food when we surrendered May 6, 1942, but the latter was in very short supply.

"I was without shoes for a year. There were plenty of supplies but the Japs wouldn't give us any. Of all the letters my wife wrote, and she wrote every week, I received five. I could only get one per month and that was after the first Christmas.

"The Japs didn't care if we lived or died. Members of the Philippines Red Cross brought supplies to us but they were turned back at the gate.

"In the camp we farmed every day. We broke the ground and harvested the crops, all by hand. We had to work whether it rained or not. We had to be out in the morning we had to do the little clothes we had, still wet, from the night before, to keep from losing our blankets.

"We were placed in groups of ten. Every morning we had to line up for inspection. If a man died during the night, we had to take him out in our group the following morning. This was necessary, because if one man was missing from the group and couldn't be found, the other nine would be shot. Every day 'tenko' was given to escape. There also were 'tenko' at night.

"We were considered captives up until August 1, 1943, and after that Jap were going to wipe us out. We didn't know the American Rangers had arrived. After "9" for victory sign. For this some of the boys got badly beaten.

"We were shipped to Camp Cabanatuan in box cars. The box cars were the size of and a half of the last war, and normally held 40 or 40 persons. The Japs put 100 of us in each car.

"The camp was built originally by the Philippine Government as part of an army expansion program. Japanese engineers constructed of bamboo poles tied together.

"The only warning apparent that I received during the time I was a prisoner was two pairs of socks and a Red Cross parcel. We also received a shipment of Canadian Red Cross parcels that originally had been destined for Hong Kong before the fall of it would like to say this about you, Red Cross. They put out a wonderful box.

"Fifteen hundred men were packed into each car. I stood on my feet down to 118 pounds. My weight now is 170.

"We were served rice three times a day, generally stewed. Once there were a few chickens for 500 men. It made good soup, although it was pretty thin. Once they gave us fish. It was so rotten that we had to grind it into powder and sprinkle it on our rice.

"Every month or two a group of men would be taken out of camp and never heard from again. Some of them were executed for escaping, others were taken to Japan. I remember one time that I didn't move fast enough. I found myself on the ground being struck with the butt of a gun."

Arrogance as Feature of Junkers

Who are the Junkers? They have often been mentioned in the war news. Originally the word was the word "Junker" is an old German term for the son of "Junker Herr" or young master.

They were the sons of German nobility, and of rich merchants. A. D. Maclise writes in The Vancouver Province. From the ranks of these Junkers originated the Knights of St. Mary, an order formed with the papal blessing to act as soldiers and nurses at the time of the Crusades in 1189. Here Richard Coeur de Lion and Frederick Barbarossa conquered they killed many and the King of France were fighting for the Modern Saracens. Later they became the famous Teutonic Knights.

Founded Teuras.

In the early 18th. Century an embassy from part of Prussia waited on the grand masters of this order to request aid against the pagan Prussians, Poles and Lithuanians. The grandmaster sent several large areas of the Baltic States. As the order conquered they killed many and brought in German peasants and burghers to take their places. Among these names, Kahn, Kalkenbeloy, Ebling, and others prominent in Prussia were also founded or under this order. Their commanders have supplied schools of warfare for active and ambitious youth from all over Northern Europe.

Henry of Lancaster, later Henry IV of England, and John of Bohemia, later King of Bohemia, who opposed the Black Prince at the Battle of Crecy, aided in those campaigns alongside the Teutonic knights. As long as soldiers were in this order they were bound by celibacy.

Period of Power.

Their period of greatest power and prosperity was between 1351 and 1382. During this time they were decisively defeated at Tannenburg (1410) they began to decline. Following this defeat most Junkers had chosen their own state wars, one to Brandenburg and Pomerania, where so much fighting has taken place in the past week. About the time this order of Teutonic knights was finally dissolved, early in the 16th. century, Count Albert of Brandenburg, one of the last grand masters (ancestors by the way of the late Kaiser of Germany) became first Prussia as his Duchy.

For some years these Hohenzollerns (rulers of Prussia from then to 1918) had much trouble with these imperial Junker families, but they finally compromised and grad-

So, when Foch and the Allies downed monarchy and the privileged power of the Junker class after 1918 and offered an opportunity for the democracy" in Germany, it did not succeed. It could not succeed because authority always and loyalty below, was so ingrained in the German folk by generations of directed education, that they could not understand, much less utilize, such a form of government.

MAY BLOW WHISTLES AGAIN

Ottawa, March 24. —(CP)— Many blow whistles and ring hand-bells during the Noble reputation even in the cannons' mouth. They were offered great opportunities for military glory in many wars in modern times. Such were Frederick the Great's three campaigns against the Empress of Austria and the wars of 1864, 1866, 1870-71, all of which were Prussian victories.

Germany was united as one empire, following the Franco-Prussian War of 1870-71, the Junker class in the Imperial Parliament or Reichstag was the conservative Party. True to tradition in the Battles, as elsewhere, they stood for militarism, discipline and authority at any cost, and a great display of military power and Prussianism.

Before World War.

In the generation preceding the war of 1914-18, the Social Democratic Party made a gallant effort to develop democracy and educate the common people politically, but like the brigoole, they never gained a modicum of what the revolution meant after being won in America in 1776, in France in 1789, or

ALLIED TANKS SMASH AHEAD

Canadian 3rd Division in Action and Capture Bienen

Canucks Advance At Several Points, Defence Weakens

District Batteries of 14th Field Regt. in Sharp Action

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in the Rhine Bridgehead, March 27 — (CP dated)—German resistance northwest of the Rhine bank town of Rees on the bridgehead perimeter softened up a great deal today and the Canadians jumped ahead at several points.

The Canadian are pushing northeast along the right bank of the Rhine, in the direction of the town of Emmerich, 22 miles northwest of Wesel near where the initial crossings were made last Friday night.

The Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, of Cornwall, Ont. made the best progress north and northwest of Bienen, three miles north of Rees. They advanced several thousand yards during the night and the opposition was not heavy. The Emmerich — Wesel railway line was crossed north of Bienen, and progress was made along the Bienen-Emmerich highway which runs south of the railway.

The North Shore Nova Scotia Highlanders captured still another objective in the Millingen area one mile northeast of Bienen in a night attack completed last night. British troops also worked through this area. Millingen has been captured.

The importance of Bienen is clearly apparent. When this key point on the Rees-Emmerich highway was captured by the North Nova Scotias and the Highland Light Infantry, of Galt, the lynchpin of the German defences in this sector was knocked out.

Contact Lost

Along the Canadian sector contact has been lost with the enemy at some points and the German may be falling back into Emmerich. No considerable enemy movement was seen in that town while yesterday in fact and secondly.

Maj. Larry Dampier of Toronto, on a headquarters staff, said the situation is fluid after this morning on our front and our advance now should be more rapid.

The build-up into the bridgehead is going well and some of the Canadian units east of the Rhine is the Canadian Scottish from Victoria.

The weather has turned bad. The roads are extremely soft and extremely low ceiling has cut down air support. Artillery is active however.

Earlier the Canadians had encountered bitter resistance as they smashed ahead in their sector at the northernmost end of the Anglo-American bridgehead.

Capture Bienen

The Germans had been seeking to prevent the Canadians from erupting along the highway from Rees to Emmerich. But the Canadians yesterday took Bienen.

In this drive the Canadians had support from a strong artillery force, Typhoon rocket-firing planes, some tanks, "Wasp" and flame-throwers mounted on Bren gun carriers.

Indicative of the artillery support, the 14th Field Regiment of the Royal Canadian Artillery fired until gun barrels were steaming hot.

Aiding the infantry, too, were Canadian engineers. The Field Company of the R.C.E. (from Toronto) had a busy day yesterday removing mines along the Emmerich road and that to Millingen, 1 1/2 miles east of Bienen.

AIR-SEA BLOWS HIT 300 MILES OF JAP TERRITORY

45,000-Ton American Battleships Shell Okinawa in The Ryukyus Chain

Guam, March 27 — (AP)—Heavy aerial and naval blows, paralyzing enemy base for 700 miles from northeastern Japan to Formosa, were sustained through the 10th day by more than 300 Superfortresses and fighters from southern Japan today after 45,000-ton American battleships had shelled Okinawa in the Ryukyus.

The Blue from the Marianas attacked airfields and a big aircraft plant on Kyushu for the first time. Carrier planes hold cool down naval-air offensive there March 18.

The 21st Bomber Command announced the Superfortress raid shortly after the navy disclosed that battleships, under their cover, had bombardment of the Ryukyus in four days, yesterday turned their 16-inch guns on Okinawa where Tokyo says American forces are hitting up for an all invasion. Another planes of last force 56 also plastered Okinawa, main naval and air base of the Ryukyus. The enemy estimated the carrier strength in excess of 1,000 and said the attacks continued today.

Formosa, is being neutralized daily by Philippines-based planes. Today the enemy radio, without confirmation, extended the ring, hitting up the and air sweep of the Allies 300 miles southwest of Formosa. Fighters and bombers shelled the tiny island of Patras, midway between the Philippines and Hong Kong.

Kobe, departing from their normal pattern of attacking the Japanese industrial sectors of Tokyo, Osaka, Nagoya and Kobe and Yokohama, made another high-altitude attack shortly before noon today on Kyushu, which is the southernmost of Japan's four main islands.

Goebbels Admits 'Week of Decision'

London, March 27. (CP)— The German people were told today by an aide of Propaganda Minister Goebbels that this was a week of highest decision in which they would be "able to forge the fate of a new scale from the outside".

"Mind you", said commentator Dr. Otto Kriegk on the German home radio, "this decision has to be fought out".

He held hoped to fight the battle of decision far beyond the borders of the German Lebensraum.

Chief of Staff Marshal Teddor called the beginning of the final round.

Collapse of Germany Possible Within Week Ottawa Circles Believe

By JACK BEATLEY

Ottawa, March 27 —(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King's statement in the Commons that Allied successes in Germany gave reason to hope that final disintegration of the German army may not be long delayed lent emphasis last night to reports current in official circles during the weekend that the collapse was a possibility within a week.

Sources, usually well-informed, also said that information reaching here tell of plans already having been made for Hitler and his chief henchmen to blow themselves up in a last default gesture to avoid personal capitulation.

While pointing to reports that the German collapse may come in a week, these same circles cited the fact that a hard core of organized Nazi resistance, centred at Berchtesgaden, will hold out for months after the military defeat.

Reports have been received here to that even now representatives of the German General Staff, abandoning hope after the crossing of the Rhine in force, have started to find ways to seek peace.

General Staff's attitude—reached before the Nazi party officials lost by virtue of the early Rhine bridgehead — nonetheless served party purposes.

The rugged mountainous country surrounding Berchtesgaden is understood to be stocked with provisions, bristling with arms and ready for a last stitch stand.

The whole structure of this defensive system, was designed to hold out for months. And if in this time the Allies have not yet penetrated the barrier or brittling steel, then information reaching here has it, Hitler and company will blow themselves up in Wagnerian finale designed to establish them as German martyrs whose example some day may be followed by new generations of Germans.

Meanwhile, behind will be left only the ruins of Nazi now gradiating from military schools which the last years enriched from offensive military subjects to underground sabotage and assassination.

LLOYD GEORGE DIES QUIETLY IN HIS SLEEP

Prime Minister of Britain in First Great War and National Figure

CEBU INVASION BY AMERICANS CLAIMED BY JAPS

Enemy Says Troops Commenced Landings at Talisay on Monday

Manila, March 27 — (AP) — Invasion of Cebu by American forces under cover of bombarding warships was claimed by Tokyo radio today, but Gen. MacArthur announced the heaviest air raid yet on that central Philippines island, offered no confirmation.

Cebu is one of the two major Philippine islands still in Japanese hands.

The enemy radio said American troops "commenced landings" yesterday morning at Talisay, midway along the east coast.

Cebu city and six cruisers and destroyers shelled the area beforehand, Tokyo radio reported.

Cebu is about 130 miles long and 30 miles wide and has its widest part. Guerillas have been active there.

Heavy bombers gave Cebu a 250-ton bombing yesterday.

This was the heaviest single aerial blow officially reported today.

Bombs Dropped

More than 100 9th Air Force bombers struck at Cebu airdrome, the port area of Legazpi, on southeastern Luzon, with 250 tons of bombs Saturday. Smoke from explosions and fires rose 6,000 feet.

Liberators bombing and strafing strikes were carried out against Mindanao.

MacArthur reported an additional 14,842 Japanese dead had been counted and 171 prisoners taken in the Philippines since Mar. 18, when he had estimated enemy casualties at 382,000.

Progress was reported on Luzon's scattered ground fronts. South of Manila, Filipino and American 43rd Cavalry Divisions were pressing toward a junction around Tanauan, 35 miles south-south-east of Manila between Laguna De Bay and Lake Taal.

In the north, the 25th and 32nd Divisions were encountering stiff resistance in defensive positions as they converged on the important Baguio area. In the Cagayan valley of Canada's alleged failure to share the burden of the fighting in Europe, and send more of it overseas to the Pacific theatre, Ralston said:

"I do not think the Canadian people will be misled by such statements. They conversed on the important Manila Base. In the Cagayan valley fans. One force had to build 26 miles of road to outflank enemy strongpoints.

The children, Arlene, seven; Carol five, and Arthur, three, were taken to hospital where authorities said they suffered no ill effects.

U.S. Armor Drives Into Lohr 225 Miles From Hun Capital; Resistance Breaking in Ruhr

German 'Mountain Redoubt' Menaced by South Push

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, March 27 —(AP)— United States 1st Army tanks burst into Wellburg, 244 miles southeast of Berlin, in a mighty breakout east of the Rhine today and the German said the rampaging 3rd Army had crashed to Lohr, 225 miles from the enemy capital.

Lohr is 40 miles southeast of Frankfurt on the Main, where Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton's 3rd Army troops were fighting, and 21 miles northwest of the Bavarian city of Wuerzburg. The dash appeared to have cut the Wuerzburg-Hannover highway, which a British broadcast termed "the most vital communication back of the front."

Railway Across Germany

Lohr is more than halfway across Germany from Luxemboug to Oschoslovakia. A drive across southern Germany to Russian lines some 250 miles east, would throw a decisive wedge across the reported German 'mountain redoubt' in southern Bavaria, northern Italy and Austria and bar access to the fastness for hundreds of thousands of Germans fighting on the violently erupting western and eastern fronts.

Gen. Patton's break-through lines were announced by a security blackout.

The 1st Army, using the ground and tank force ever loosed on the western front, drove 40 miles in 24 hours to within 40 miles of the Rhine and had emerged from high hills near the Ruhr industrial area, sparsely wooded flatlands of central Germany—ideal for armored maneuver.

Lohr is deep in Bavaria, 75 miles northwest of the Nazi shrine city of Nuernberg (431,000) and 87 miles southeast of Stuttgart (460,000). It is more than 50 miles beyond the Rhine and 150 deep in Hitler's Germany. It is 19 miles east of Aschaffenburg, where Patton's troops were pouring across an intact bridge.

Advancing in Fulda

The German said they had evacuated Offenbach, manufacturing centre of 80,000 on the Main five miles east of Frankfurt.

In North Hesse, Lt.-Gen. Hodges' 1st army columns were advancing toward Fulda, 100 miles southeast of Berlin, and Wuerzburg, 223 miles southwest of the capital, and were threatening to "crack the western front into two parts". The main Hanover-Stuttgart highway was reported menaced and the Germans called the most vital communications line back of the front." The situation in Fulda was described.

And to the north, British, Canadian and American armies advanced against collapsing German resistance in the Ruhr and in Westphalia promised an imminent breakthrough or perhaps even more decisive character.

Gen. Eisenhower's massed armies, in strength unequalled since fighting beyond the Rhine, were in sight of ultimate victory. The U.S. 7th army was the latest to cross the Rhine.

Wellburg, a Lahn river town, is 11 miles northeast of Limburg which was reached yesterday and captured today.

Lt.-Gen. Hodges, employing a minimum of five armored divisions east of the original Rhine bridgehead, sent motorized infantry close behind the tanks and self-propelled guns.

Altenkirchen, a secondary traffic centre 18 miles north of Coblenz was captured overnight. The 1st army caged 4,782 Germans and was estimated to have killed 3,000 to 10,000 more streaming to the north without guards along roads from Field Marshal Kesselring's collapsing armies.

Two Chances of Resistance.

How near the Allies in the west and the massed Russians on the east were from final victory no one could say.

But the extent to which the reich's armies remained would be able to scratch together reserves should herself into existence within a few days.

Gen. Eisenhower himself said he did not expect his armies to be stopped short of Berlin. Berlin is known to be only 40 miles up from the hollow heart, Germany had two chances of any prolonged resistance.

1. She might shift troops from the Russian front and invite disaster there.

2. She might rely on armed civilians to fight town by town to block the Allied advance, which policy has saw hastily flung out over roadside lines through which American armor was driving, and over roadjamming columns of refugees fleeing east did not seem to presage a citizen army stand.

Everywhere on the U.S. 1st army front except the left flank along the Sieg River, German resistance split at the seams.

The word from that reached Wellburg on the 1st army's right flank had smashed in the night and by early day. This was the deepest 1st army penetration and it placed the 1st army within 200 miles of Russian lines southeast of Wetzlar. The 3rd army was but 225 miles from the Russians at last reports, nearly a day ago.

Scores of villages were taken, penetrated or by-passed by the thrusting 1st army. Columns of prisoners trudged wearily back to the rear with white handkerchiefs on their arms and with their hands clasped overhead.

Steak-Hungry Americans Seek Information on Our Meat Supply

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, March 27. (CP)— Congressmen today sought further information on Canada's reported abundance of meat is not being shared by steak-hungry Americans, as the result of decision on food shortages bogged down in a slipping battle with the price office of Price Administration.

The lengthy inquiry into shortages generally—and the meat shortage in particular—began yesterday by the Senate sub-committee on agriculture and continued today with a full day of sittings it was declared that a prime necessity was to find out why the ingenuity of Canada's alleged failure to share the burden of the fighting in Europe, and send more of it overseas to the Pacific theatre. Ralston said:

"I do not think the Canadian people will be misled by such statements. They conversed on the important Manila Base. In the Cagayan valley fans. One force had to build 26 miles of road to outflank enemy strongpoints.

Main Defence Line Broken —Eisenhower

Paris, March 27 —(AP)—Gen. Eisenhower declared today that the main German defence line in the west has been broken and that the enemy has suffered a defeat which he cannot afford.

The Supreme Commander said he believes there would be no regarded unconditional surrender or in Germany, but rather an imposed unconditional surrender when the Allies in the west link up with the Russian armies.

Germany has no strength to make a future stand such as had been made, he added, pointing out that Germans are expecting a straight Allied run to Berlin.

Sun's Eclipse Visible In Canada July 9

Ottawa, March 27 —(CP)— Canadians will be scanning the sky, through tinted glasses, come July 9.

On that day, provided they are early risers, they will witness an eclipse of the sun, the first since Aug. 31, 1932, and the last until June 30, 1954.

Watchers living in Saskatchewan and Manitoba will have an advantage over residents of any province in that the eclipse in its total phase will be visible within a strip 40 to 50 miles wide. Other parts of Canada will see the eclipse, but only partially.

The path of the total phase will originate in Russia west of Bute, Montana, at 6:15 a.m., E.D.T.

For the first man to see it—probably an observer near Butte—the eclipse will last 30 seconds. The period of visibility will reach 47 seconds in Regina and 75 seconds, the maximum, east of Greenland.

The path of totality will pass north of Regina, Superior, through Western Ontario, Scandinavia and Russia.

OFFICERS WHO LOST CLOTHING IN FIRE REPLENISH WARDROBES

A commercial reflection from the disastrous fire which swept Belleville officers' quarters yesterday morning at the Moose's Association, 16 months ago, is to be seen in Belleville clothing stores this afternoon as officers from the station sought to replenish their wardrobes lost in the blaze.

Another story reported to have met 50 officers in the building when the fire broke out this morning was that when to jump from second storey windows, many of them threw down their clothes. It was asserted only certain pairs of trousers were saved from the burning.

At any rate local haberdashery shops did a good business during the afternoon as officers sought to replace clothes lost in the blaze.

When a bicycle and a motor car were in collision at the intersection of Station and Albion Streets at noon today, 15-year-old Mary Stapley, 26 Johnson Street the cyclist, was cut on the right cheek, side of her face and back shaken up. Cecil H. Davis, 143 Bingham Street, the driver of the motor car involved, drove the little girl home, where he was assured she was not seriously injured, he later reported to police.

Mr. Davis told police he was making a right-hand turn off Station Street into Albion Street when the Stapley girl, who was approaching in the same direction, rode into his side, collided with the front of the car. She was knocked to the pavement as the result of the impact. The bicycle was badly bent in the collision.

Baseball Meeting Called Tonight

Efforts to organize a city baseball league will be put forward at the City Hall this evening when a public meeting will be held for those interested. Much in a project the earliness of the meeting now is no doubt prompted by the early baseball weather that has been enjoyed of late.

Several business firms have been suggested as interested in the sponsoring of baseball teams in the city of Belleville, but tonight's meeting is being called primarily to ascertain interest in the project with a view to the formation of a city baseball league in Belleville. The Quinte league title has already been guaranteed with the Belleville entry in baseball that could be entered available.

In years past city baseball leagues have flourished in Belleville with outstanding success, notably the days when Jimmy Ellis operated the last war. Other similar leagues have been equal success since and with baseball having been dormant in the city for several years past tonight's effort to revive the game should result in a goodly attendance. It is an open meeting for all interested in baseball and will convene in the City Hall auditorium at eight.

Sixteen war brides and their children arrived in the city yesterday by members of the Red Cross Emergency Service, a public group of women workers who are sacrificing their time, sleep and efforts to welcome the British brides to Canada.

Fresh tea and toast were served to the women while the babies were given bottles of milk. Arrangements for outside points were made while assistance was given those whose destinations were in the city vicinity.

The Rev. J. G. Hornsby, liaison officer, was also present.

The Red Cross Emergency Reserve is doing splendid work along these lines. Girls are badly in need of assistance. Women's organizations are requested to contact Reserve officials at the Y.M.C.A. and suggest that city service clubs can also render a fine service in this respect.

LLOYD GEORGE

The former Prime Minister, who for many had exercised his right to sit in the House of Lords, returned to the privilege of his Welsh constituency. He was taken ill with influenza in January and never had fully recovered.

Despite his title, villagers still spoke of him as "Mr. Lloyd George," proudly recalling the clever, independent-minded boy who moved confidently from Llanystumdwy's one street to his fame in the Empire capital.

News of War Kept From Him.

Lloyd George died without knowing that the Allied armies had crossed the Rhine, that victory for Britain and her allies was at last in sight. Members of his household withheld from him the news of the last days.

At his bedside when he died was his second wife, the former Miss Frances Stevenson, his secretary for many years, whom he married in October, 1943. His first wife, Dame Margaret Lloyd George, whom he married in 1888 when he was an unknown solicitor, died in 1941.

Also keeping the vigil were his daughters, Lady Megan and Lady Olwen Carey Evans, and his two sons—Maj. Gwilym Lloyd George, Member of Plaid and Gower.

Buried in Wales.

It is expected that the former Prime Minister will be buried in the village graveyard at nearby Criccieth.

Hitler's Mad Gamble on Chaos In Europe Doomed to Failure

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(AP War Analyst)

As elements of seven Allied armies continue to surge out of the bridgeheads towards the heart of Germany, Hitler is reported to have summoned the Gauleiters (Nazi party leaders) to Berchtesgaden to consider the situation in the light of the speech which he made to them by signalling the Germans.

The decisions of this meeting may be momentous. It seems obvious that both surrender and continued resistance will be considered. Thus far there has been no sign that the Allied drive has encountered the determination of a fanatic.

Hitler's scheme for saving his own skin and for perpetuating Nazism — his fundamental aim — is to divide Britain, America and Russia. His program, as it comes to us via the devise press, is based on the theory that Allied unity can be broken now and admits is certain) will be followed by disintegration. This will be caused by "unrestrained appetites for power," "social unrest and cruel civil wars." He also figures on a split among the Allied powers.

The Nazi chief is said to have completed preparations to hole-up in the fortified mid-zone and other defences of the Berchtesgaden area. There, with picked Nazi Elite troops and Allied prisoners with him, he will make a stand against the Allies until the political chaos provides oil in which Nazism can again float. Meanwhile, Goebbels and Himler will come into their own again.

Allied Safeguards

Well, of course, we must recognize at once that there will be grave difficulties ahead. Europe is a matter of fact there's chaos now, for the fighting has destroyed virtually the whole continent. Already there has been civil strife in Greece and there may be more.

However, the Allies have safeguards to keep the situation from getting out of hand. Moreover, we have laid their plans not only for maintaining law and order but for reorganization of stricken countries. Hitler should remember (and probably does) that the Allies fully in the past. The Allies will have in Europe millions of fighting men, the majority of whom are ample armed strength to deal with any uprising of Nazis. There can be no general upheaval.

Hitler's idea of a split among the Allies is not new. It was the theme of the Nazi propaganda machine during Britain, Russia and the United States were fighting side by side. Hitler minds it is that so long as they stand together there will be peace, and if they quarrel there will be another great war. They may have elements of opinion — but they won't fight.

Food Scarcity Seen as Danger

One of Europe's gravest dangers lies in the scarcity of food throughout much of the continent, for hunger is one of the greatest breeders of unrest. Hitler will recognize that for he is said to have issued orders that food supplies are to be left in the country as they retreat in the hope they will bring the Allies further. He has adopted the scorched earth scheme to try to cause revolt against the Allies by punishing the civil population.

Even this brutal scheme has been anticipated by the Big Three, for plans have been made to feed the civil population of Germany—sadly as she is—won't be allowed to starve though it may be that lack of food now will cause deterioration of civilian morale and thus hasten her collapse. How far Hitler will succeed in his scorched-earth program is not clear. Certainly the speed with which the Allies are advancing may upset this evil plan.

Routine Business Occupies Attention of City Council

Matters Brought Before the Members Disposed of in Regulation Time of Meeting

Defeating a motion to extend the time one hour for the completion of business, the City Council adjourned at eleven o'clock, Ald. Thompson being on the floor speaking to a motion introduced by Ald. Clapp. When the hour struck the mayor left their seats and there being no quorum the meeting had to adjourn. All of the business excepting the motion before the chair had been transacted and this motion will likely appear at a subsequent meeting. The members welcomed back Ald. Allin, who spent the winter in the southland and comes back much improved in health.

The business of the meeting was quite routine and there was little discussion on the recommendations and motions introduced. Lots were sold to Norman Blackburn, Donald Masterson and Luther Alres, and lots on Ridley Ave., and Station Street were ordered repossessed for breach of contract. Luther Pulling was granted an extension of three months on his covenant. The City Solicitor was ordered to prepare a by-law governing the election of the Chamber of Commerce and Board of Health regarding regulations relative to restaurants operating in the city. The request urged greater uniformity and better sanitary conditions, each to obtain a city licence to operate and that employees be medically examined and have blood tests for communicable diseases.

Committee appointed.

Alderman Trideau, Clapp and Wilbur were appointed to a committee to investigate and report on "No Parking" signs on Coleman Street south of West Bridge Street. The Parkside-Moira Co. was empowered to make the necessary repairs to the trestle work this season and 2,250 gallons of oil for patching was purchased at a cost of $387 plus freight charges. This amount is considerably less than the estimate and as the Engineer reported the roads have come through the winter in almost excellent condition possibly due to the heavy snowfall, that protected the surface of the roads. An amount of $500 was voted to the Belleville Tubercular Association and Ald. Clarke under enquiries asked from what department the money was to come as the estimates had been made and adopted. The members voted to having the money taken from the administration department. An application for a resident to build a building on the corner of Dundas Street East and Bleecker Avenue was referred back to the committee for further consideration. Dr. Alderman moved that the letter be filed but the majority voted to consider the request. Under the present conditions there will be no grant to the April 1st Band although the Adjutant of the Regiment stated in a letter to the council that the band was a regimental organization. It was shown in committee that if the band was a regimental organization a grant could be made only with the approval of the Department of Municipal Affairs in Toronto and the band will be inspected by the City Clerk, Ald. Wilbur explained that the Pipe Band did not receive a grant from the government.

Letter Received.

A letter was received from the residents of Bleecker Avenue praying below Franklin Street asking for a new sidewalk they complaining that mud and rain made the street almost impassable. The letter was referred to the clerk with instruction to notify the petitioners that the matter will be considered when it would be a charge against their property.

Ald. Woodley wanted to know from the Chairman of Public Works if anything was being done to fill the ditch along West Bridge Street hill that was dug by the Bell Telephone Company as he thought the work on the ditch has sunk considerably making it a hazard for pedestrians. Ald. Trideau will take action on the matter. Ald Allin enquired regarding the grant to the school asking if the grant was not to be increased. He was told it was reduced two and one-half mills. Mayor Pollard stated he was glad the matter had been brought up and explained to the Alderman that the mills higher than last year and that was the reason for the drop. He will take care of the carry over amounting to $20,000 and the estimated expenditures and he thought that the council had done an excellent job in framing the budget. Ald. Allin stated he had no criticism of the mayor's budget speech but wanted the explanation given by the Mayor. The Worship also told Ald. Allin, that he had made a statement when the rate was struck and was sorry that he had covered the matter thoroughly and explained in detail but he could not get the full benefit of the $ 1-3 mill reduction given to the Board of Education through a grant.

Reason Explained.

Ald. Allin also enquired as to why the Industrial Commission of Ontario in the year 1911. It would appear that it is outdated, particularly that section of the By-Law dealing with basement walls for the construction of a house. It is the contention that the section be amended to authorize the use of concrete blocks instead of to the basement floor level.

It would be appreciated if you would present this letter to council at their next session. It is my understanding that they meet on the Thursday evening of this week.

I am very anxious to have this matter given consideration as I contracted for the building to be started the first of May.

Thanking you in advance for your services, I remain,

Yours truly,
Isaac Stephenson, Jr.

March 22nd, 1946.

Re: Building Permit Isaac Stephenson Jr.

Gentlemen:

The attached letter from Mr. Isaac Stephenson, Jr. has reference to the use of concrete blocks 8" x 16" x 8" in the construction of the foundation of his new residence on Pine Street. Mr. Stephenson did not mention that the concrete blocks he wished to use were hollow blocks.

It has been our definite policy to refuse building permits covering the use of hollow concrete, cinder or tile blocks in the construction of a foundation below ground level. These blocks may be used above ground, but I cannot approve of their use otherwise.

A foundation for a one or one and one-half storey building must also be at least 24" thick and these blocks are only 8", as stated.

Yours respectfully,
Charles A. Mott,
City Engineer and Building Inspector.

24 Stitches Required To Close Scalp Laceration

Tweed, March 27 (Special) — Twenty-four stitches were required to close lacerations on the scalp and body of Mr. John McDiarmid of Boulter when he was taken to Belleville General Hospital following a head-on collision between two autos on the road between Northbrook and Cloyne early Monday evening.

GOOD TOURIST SEASON EXPECTED, MANY INQUIRIES

Several Tourist Resort Owners Are Constructing Additions to Buildings

With reports coming in to the Belleville Chamber of Commerce that several tourist resort owners of the county are constructing additions to buildings in contemplation of a heavy influx of summer vacationists, and the fact that a heavier than heretofore list of enquiries are arriving daily through the mails, prospects for a good tourist season in the county are looming bright.

The number of enquiries, which, according to Chamber of Commerce Manager J. O. Hertly, is much heavier than that of last year, is attributed partly to the fact that a large number of "eleventh-hour" holiday makers, or in other words, those who leave their vacation plans and reservations to the last moment, were disappointed upon application.

Tourist resorts in 1944 in this county and district were filled to capacity almost at the time the season opened, and reservations were scarcer than the proverbial hen's teeth.

Publicity committees of the city and county are taking measures to persuade resort owners to increase accommodations and this, as before mentioned, has been done in a number of places.

Publicity folders of a year ago will again be used this year as there was a surplus and the joint committee of city and county felt added expenditure was unnecessary along these lines. However, a supplement which includes both old and new resorts is being readied and will be included with the regular folder before distribution.

In answer to a query from Mayor Pollard that publicity folders of neighboring counties were more attractive than those used by the Hastings County Committee, and that apparently all resorts here had not been included, Mr. Hertly after a check-up informed the committee that Hastings County listed 64 resorts and places of accommodation. Prince Edward County between twenty and thirty and Frontenac between forty and fifty.

POLICE COURT

Deputy Chief Helps Man Pay His Court Fine

"Who will extend this man 14 cents, to make up his fine?" queried Town Attorney R. C. Donald with a smile when John S. White, Belleville, tendered a dirty $10 note, counting up $19.86 in payment of a $30.00 fine that had been levied by Magistrate T. G. Wills last week. White had previously pleaded guilty to a charge of purchasing a pair of bottle dress trousers and was assessed the minimum fine.

"I'll give him the additional money," asserted Deputy Chief Marmah, who is also the court clerk. After paying his fine White was escorted to the local Selective Service office, where he hoped to procure employment on a farm. Selective Service present in the court and complained the accused youth was running the streets at night and loitering around to such late hours he would not work". Magistrate Wills was in accord with the suggestion that White should interview the local Selective Service authorities and put to work.

Motorists, who continue to disregard the parking by-laws of the city, had their names called in court today after paying two dollars for being in violation of the by-law restraining parking.

Henry Coleman plead to a careless driving count, that included ignoring a stop-street sign, and paid $12.50, including costs.

U.S. 3rd Army Near Nuremberg

New York, March 27 — A Blue Network Correspondent, Herbert Clark, said in a Paris broadcast today that Allied fighter pilots reported tanks of the United States 3rd army were approaching Nuremberg, nearly 100 miles beyond the point where an official news blackout masked the 3rd army's movements.

There was no confirmation from other sources.

Lt.-Gen. George S. Patton's spearheads also were threatening a cluster of jet-propelled fighter bases at Kitzingen, 10 miles beyond Wuerzburg, he said.

Nuremberg is one of the most important cities in Nazi party history.

These pilots report that the American spearhead has knifed past Aschaffenburg to within eight miles of Wuerzburg," he added, "and on the basis of such reports, the 3rd army is figured to be at least 100 miles beyond the point where the news blackout enveloped them."

After Nine Years

March 1936 was a month of great anxiety for the nations except Germany, it was in that month that Hitler sent his troops into the demilitarized Rhineland in defiance of the Treaty of Versailles. In nine years time, then Hitler, thickened his plots for three years and a half, then threw off what mask there was in his plans, went to work to try and bludgeon and kill the world's freedom. Other nations fought their way far to the east, reached the Bay of Biscay on the west, took in Greece, and some islands of the east Mediterranean, engulfed Italy as an ally, but did not encompass Britain which has become the great jumping off grounds from which Germany is being battered to collapse.

The turn came 30 months ago with enemy shrinkage in North Africa and the treat in Russia last year further territory was taken from Hitler's bag of loot and now a full nine years after he flouted the laws of nations and boasted of Germany's invincibility, his power is dwindled, large parts of Germany are under Allied infantry and artillery and the blows of the Allied air fleets. And many of the subjugated lands are freed. The end is near and end.

Hitler has found to his intense chagrin that he who acts foully may thrive for a time until he is found out and that the end of his way is death in the long run. The world would be a sad place indeed thus far in progress, culture and civilization had this not been so for such progress as has been achieved has been attained by the sacrifices of the progressive races for the causes of democracy and liberty.

From the moment Hitler conceived the thought of his monstrous evil he was doomed. Fate has a way of mocking at evildoers and has been more mocked of late than Hitler. He seemed to himself to have the world in his grasp and lo, it was not there. The soul of free nations and their sons and daughters of the law and order and these have brought the Fuehrer and his Huns down the broad road to destruction. Once again mankind can see that those whose feet are swift to do evil and shed blood receive their punishment at last however long it may seem delayed.

The British Army

Introducing the Army estimates in the House of Commons on Tuesday, March 6, Major General Ralph Leslie Grigg, began by pointing out the long way the British Army has travelled "from the Nile Valley by way of Tripoli, Tunis, Sicily, Rome and Florence to the Valley of the Po. It has travelled from Rangoon back to the hills of Assam and forward again into the heart of Burma and to Mandalay. Above all, it has travelled from the training grounds in Britain overseas via the Normandy beaches through France and Belgium into Holland and finally into Germany."

There he emphasized what is well known but often overlooked; namely the world-wide nature of the British Army's operations. Possibly one reason why this is easy to forget is that in some theatres of war British troops are outnumbered by those of other Allied armies or, in theatres where they are in a majority, they may be under the command of a general of another nation. Similarly, in some bodies of troops may be serving under a Dominion General. Thus, as has now been widely announced General Crerar's Canadian First Army was heavily reinforced by U.K. units during the recent Maas offensive.

Discussing the early days of the Normandy invasion he pointed out that the British Commonwealth and Empire and the U. S. forces were at first roughly equal in that theatre, although the U. S. forces are now probably more than twice the number of the British Empire.

Of the Burma front he said: James Grigg said: "It should be understood that the Burma campaign has brought about the biggest single deployment of Japanese land forces so far."

On this front the Indian Divisions make up the largest part of the Allied force, but even of these, one-third of the combat personnel are all the tanks and artillery are U. K. troops. In the case of the Third Indian Division (the famous Chindits) more than one-half are from the U. K. To these must be added, of course, the British and Indian 36th Division.

The Burma theatre is the most demanding British theatre for the soldiers, due not only to the gruelling conditions of climate and terrain but also to the rarity of leave.

Many soldiers have been there ever since 1941, a point which the Secretary of War touched upon when describing the manpower difficulties faced by the British Army. He said: "Even with all our combing and conversion, even with all that the Ministry of Labor was able to do in the way of new intakes, despite even the fact that a number of men were transferred to the Army from the Navy and Air Force . . . despite all this we did not see how we could keep the group (Canadian and British 21st Army Group) going as well as provide for our needs in the Mediterranean and the Far East. Certainly there was no possibility of finding reinforcements enough to enable us to replace appreciably the Army Group of overseas service which . . . is so much longer than that of the other services . . . In the Mediterranean our armies managed fairly well by copying the processes of combing and converting which we had been carrying out at home. In India and Burma I am afraid that for a time British units had to be kept short of their full establishments. One has to be sold for favor, however. 'Overlord' (the signal for the Normandy invasion operations) casualties in the actual assault period were less than we feared, and we were able to find the men for our early replacements to the Mediterranean and the Indian Ocean and so reduce the overseas tour substantially in the latter and slightly in the former area."

Very Early Spring Work

Canadians do not often have the opportunity to talk of the green grass growing all around in March. But that is what is taking place today. At times the twenty-seventh day of March is a suitable compromise for a winter's day but March as a whole this year has been more like April without rain than it has been like an ordinary March weather.

It is yet a few days to the end of March and what sort of weather will intervene and what will the weather be on April 1st. Easter, is interesting to look forward to.

Canadians do not have an ideal month, unlike so many of other years, with trees already showing the light yellowish green and brown of the opening buds everywhere and the maple sap already being hatched out of the trees on the streets and avenues or through the parks or across the city from upper stories or over the roof tops as far as the eye can see.

Many a church has set himself and others an example in early spring clearance of the accumulation of old grass, dried leaves, paper and stones which have choked the lawns. In the main with the rake has been busy as fires on Saturday and Monday evenings indicated. It was the urge to get on the land, it did not need an order or a hint to get these industrious men to get to work to improve the sight of their property.

This spurt of home gardening is three weeks or a month ahead of the usual time. It is a sight worth seeing to get out on a foot on their lawns until as far on as early in May. So present indications are for a long lawn season and as the housewife cleans his lawn of the winter's refuse he has got rid of considerable of the first work of spring. However the lawn mower has not yet emerged from the tool shed or the basement. When it does it will surely be heard if the weather continues fairly moderate.

Field Marshal Kesselring is reported by the Italian Fascist radio to be inspecting his divisions on the middle reaches of the Rhine that "I am V-3." Whatever he is, he cannot perform all that Hitler will want him to do, because that is impossible. Hitler and Hitlerism are doomed whatever the new commander of the German west front says or does.

The private and personal blessings we enjoy, the blessings of immunity, safeguard, liberty and integrity, deserve the thanksgiving of a whole life.—Jeremy Taylor.

JUST FOLKS

(Copyright, 1944, Edgar A. Guest)

JUST A THOUGHT

Just a second's thought like this:
"'Tis more luck than merit I,
What the poor man suffers, miss,
Though the self-same death we die!"
And there'd be, beyond a doubt,
Less of bitterness about.

Just the wondering: "Were I
At the bench, from day to day,
Or must sell what others buy,
Would I be as they are they?"
And the sharp and cruel word
Not so often would be heard.

Just the recollection swift
All a gracious act will do;
How a cheering word can lift,
And the strength of man renew
And, beyond a doubt, we should Closer come to brotherhood.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

March 27th, 1925.

Mr. J. W. Lill, President of the Belleville Radio Club, presided at a meeting of the club members at the Chamber of Commerce, which was addressed by Mr. Norman W. Wickett of Toronto on the subject of batteries.

Alderman Treverton, Ruttan and Manley were appointed a committee by the city council to investigate and report on auditorium and weather stripping the windows of the offices in the city hall. . .

The city council has decided to construct a sanitary sewer on Green Street.

It has been decided by the city council to purchase the old Dundas Street burying ground from Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, acting for Bridge Street Church, and to convert the site into a burial camp, where was plenty of maple syrup on the market. It was sold at 30 cents to 35 cents per quart or $2. per gallon. .

30 YEARS AGO

March 25th, 1915.

The Minister of Public Works at Ottawa advised Mr. E. Guss Porter, K. C., M. P., yesterday, today as follows: "Specifications for reinforced concrete warehouse for Belleville are not yet ready and tenders will be called for and work proceeded with as soon as possible." It is expected that the building operations will be ready and in use during this season of navigation.

At the annual session of the Hastings County Council, Warden Ketcheson presided all the members of the county council and the county officials to be in attendance on a trip to Toronto to attend annual convention of Good Roads Association. The convention was held this week and the following meetings and officials accepted the invitation: Messrs. Wm. Ketcheson, M. P. Fielding, Warden, C. Thompson, W. E. Tummon, T. Montgomery, T. Naylor, W. H. Wessels, R. J. Collier, E. A. Rose, O. Sills, C. Rollins, S. Fox, G. R. Hambleton, T. Ward, Chapman, B. Mallory, H. Wright, A. Reed, H. Ketcheson and L. E. Allen. Before returning home the guests entertained Mr. Ketcheson with a gold headed cane. The presentation was made by Mr. Montgomery, Reeve of Rawdon, on behalf of the guests.

40 YEARS AGO

March 27th, 1905.

For the fourth time the water main across the river has been broken by the ice. Early this morning a large body of ice came down the river, but the only damage done of any consequence was the breaking of the main. As soon as it was known that the main was broken the water was turned into the temporary pipes which are laid across the two bridges, so no delay was caused in maintaining the supply of water. The ice in the bay is apparently about five feet. There does not appear to be any trouble in the channel. A large quantity of ice should come down from up the river. In West Belleville on Saturday and Sunday there was much water on the flats and in the vicinity of the river, but it passed off without damage. Any trouble with the long-up wooden sidewalks and flooded cellars, however, there may be trouble yet.

50 YEARS AGO

— March 31th, 1896.

Mr. Jack Harry went to Toronto today on business.

The Rev. S. J. Shorey of Lindsay, well known here, was a visitor to the city today.

Mr. Stephen Houghton of Toronto was a visitor to Belleville, was in town today.

Mr. J. Earl Halliwell, barrister, Stirling, was in town today.

Messrs. O. Mills and A. A. Robertson, barristers, have dissolved partnership by mutual consent.

The Bay of Quinte Bridge Company has accepted the tender of Mr. Richard Arnott of this city for the bridge tolls. His tender was $4,510.00 over the amount received last year. This is a record for the carrying capacity of the bridge.

Von Rundstedt Under Arrest?

London, March 27 — (CP)—The Paris Radio said today that "according to a radio message from Berlin" Field Marshal Von Rundstedt has been relieved of his German forces on the western front, has been taken from his "advanced headquarters" and "replaced by Himmler." The station said Von Rundstedt "is now resting" and that Col.-Gen. Gruppenfuehrer Moechtenin, called "Hitler's Napoleon of Central," who had previously taken under his "protection" Nazi Generals Fritsch, Blomberg and Beck, "has also been seen died in mysterious circumstances."

Field Marshal Kesselring, former commander of German forces in Italy, is reported to have succeeded Von Rundstedt as western front commander.

Gas Vapor Detector Invented by Young U.S. Officer

Chicago, March 27 — (AP)—The Navy's youngest commissioned officer bashfully confided today he invented a device for use on the invention of an explosive gas vapor detector. He is Lieut. (jg) Mary the Army Air Forces and commercial fields, research chemist, Imogen E. The Day In Parliament

By The Canadian Press

Today:

The Commons continues the World security debate.

The Senate will sit.

Yesterday:

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said German resistance west of the Rhine had practically collapsed; he had reason to hope final disintegration of the German army may soon be near.

Resources Minister Crerar saw a roadmap in the Dumbarton Oaks proposal for world security, but he would support them.

UNSON'S APPEAL DISMISSED

Ottawa, March 27 —(CP)— The National War Labor Board dismissed today an appeal by the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill workers against an Ontario Regional Board decision refusing the union's application for extension of a vacation-with-pay plan to workers of the Thorold Pulp Co., Ltd., at Thorold, Ont.

The union asked that the plan, which calls for one week's vacation with pay after one week, be extended by one day for each year of service beginning with the second year so employees with 10 years' continuous employment would get two weeks' vacation. The company opposed the application on grounds of "economic hardship."

HITLER SUMMONS MEETING

London, March 27 — (CP) — The Daily Sketch quoted a dispatch from its Stockholm correspondent today as saying Adolf Hitler has summoned a special meeting of his Nazi Reichstag for tomorrow.

As a preliminary to the meeting, the Sketch said, Hitler conferred with his chief lieutenants at his headquarters at a secret session at which no press correspondents were present.

The Sketch correspondent linked with the meeting reports that statements an assertion that "sensational events" were expected in Germany.

TIME EXTENDED

Toronto, March 27 — (CP)—Use of 1944 automobile licences and operating certificates has been extended to March 31, it was learned yesterday from the motor vehicle branch of the provincial department of highways. Current gasoline coupons become invalid March 31, it was stated, and ration books for the next period now are being issued.

LIKELY TO EXTEND TIME

Ottawa, March 27 — (CP)—Official quarters said yesterday there is a reasonable prospect that the deadline for payment of personal income tax for 1944 will be extended beyond April 30. Last year the deadline was extended from April 30 to facilitate the purchase of Victory Bonds in the spring campaign.

Pyle Appreciates Honor of Having Big Cake Presented to Him

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Western Pacific—The second day I was aboard our carrier, the chief steward came up to my cabin and hesitantly announced that he had a cake for me, but it was so big he didn't know how to hand it to me.

For a while I couldn't get what he was driving at, but finally he made it clear.

It seemed the night bakers had baked a huge cake for me, and it was to be served at dinner that evening. The steward was worried because the cake was so big they didn't have a board big enough to put it on, and therefore couldn't pull it in the table where everybody could see it.

But that evening when we went down to dinner, there was the cake in front of my chair, right in the middle of the table, without filling it up. They had solved the problem by getting the carpenters to make a board.

Written in pink icing on top of the white cake were the words "Welcome aboard, Mr. Pyle," and as somebody suggested, it was so taken aback at being called 'Mr. Pyle' that I didn't recognize it at first.

I was very pleased and embarrassed by this final official cake of my lifetime, and of course I had to take a lot of bows before my friends. They said they'd been playing on that same ship for a year and nobody had ever baked a special cake for them.

Then one of the ship's photographers came and took pictures of me carefully cutting the cake when I wasn't cutting it at all. And then we ate it.

After supper I groped my way through the dark passageways down the thoughtful person who had baked the cake.

He was Ray Conner, Baker Second Class, a young fellow from LeGrande is in eastern Oregon not far from Walla Walla and I was moaning that he hadn't seen the famous Pendleton Roundup in his home town.

I asked him how he happened to bake the cake. He said he knew well he had got through his regular baking a little early the night before, and hadn't anything else to do, and just thought it was a good idea.

Ray's father is a school teacher, and Ray was studying to be one, but now after all this business, he's kind of doubts he'll want to teach school.

If I were to be in the Navy, I think I'd shoot as soon be a baker as anything else. The bakeshop is always clean as a whistle, and it always smells good. And you rarely get shot at in bakeries.

Ray is quite satisfied with his lot in the Navy, mainly because it's so monotonously clean. "I can't stand to work in filth," he said.

I was feeling pretty stuck-up about my cake, and then next evening when we had ice cream there was a big cake on the adjoining table. Did I see red! I made a few disparaging remarks to see who had the gall to have a cake in front of him on the very day my triumph. And I learned it was for the pilot who, the day before, had made the 5000th landing on our carrier. It seems that's a tradition, for every thousandth landing.

So after the meal I went around and introduced myself to this cake. His name, Edward VanDraken, of Stockton, Calif.

I said "I'm sheepish sure, thought I was the only one around here who rated a cake."

And he said, "Well I'm jealous. You had photographers taking pictures of your cake. But could I get a photographer? No."

So I said "well, that's better. Let's shoot!" And then he said "As a matter of fact, it was a pretty good landing. I guess I've ever in California after the war. I'm going to settle down and have something better than cake."

Lieut. VanDraken is the navigation officer on carrier. He was flying from one when we interviewed him, and he had been there 15 months.

He had made around 130 carrier landings before he came on this ship, and now has made 200 on this second one. A guy who makes that many landings on a carrier and is still around to tell about it learns to in correspondence school.

Eight thousand landings is small stuff for the big carriers. For some of the older ones, and others they have three times as many places to land every day.

Ray says that on the older carriers is something up around 20,000 landings. But on our ship. And anyhow we haven't got enough flour for 20 cakes.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

WHERE THE HAIR FALLS OUT

Following a severe illness the hair of child or adult may fall out because vitality has been sapped or exhausted by the illness, and not because it is lost over a necessity to clip the hair with the idea of conserving the patient's strength. By day as health is built up, hair may be concerned, there is only one reason for clipping hair short—to facilitate dressing when the hair is heavily infested with head-lice and nits. Ordinarily it is not necessary to cut hair even for this purpose if the infestation is recent and not extreme.

For that matter excessive falling of hair is generally a result or sign of poor health, nutritional deficiency or advancing age.

Nutritional deficiency here does not mean that the individual doesn't get enough to eat. On the contrary in most instances persons with nutritional deficiency eat too much food, particularly too much refined carbohydrate foods in proportion to other carbohydrates they get principally calories and not enough of the essential vitamins and vitamins.

The excessive falling of hair and early baldness of old age, like hardening of the arteries, may begin to appear at thirty in some persons, at fifty or sixty in others. But don't take this too seriously for it is not always a general observation. My arteries are still nice and flexible, probably so, although I was sporting a promising bald spot at thirty.

Massage of the Scalp

Daily massage of the scalp by grasping it with the hand and squeezing folds in your hand as you would squeeze water from a sponge, going over the entire scalp in this way for a minute or two morning and morning, is worth while for excessive falling of hair and to prevent premature baldness. I doubt that any mechanical massage is as good as massage by hand or hand brush or barber or hair-dresser. Only this kneading massage is advisable, not rubbing or friction.

Hair Restorers

A number of medicaments are beneficial when applied to the scalp for treatment of disease of the scalp, but as a rule are entirely useless for the relief or cure of skin disease when applied to the skin. It is absurd to imagine any such agent can either "nourish" or "feed" the hair or "restore" the growth of the hair.

Hair Oil

Every hair has its individual oiling system. The duct of the oil gland opens into the follicle of the cup-shaped depression in which the hair shaft is embedded. Normally this is the best oil, pomade or dressing and it is secreted in the quantity required to keep the hair in perfect condition. The glands that secrete the oil are associated with the sebaceous glands that secrete skin oil upon the entire skin surface except palms, soles and surfaces of terminal phalanges of fingers and toes.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Anyway Don't Cut the Girl's Hair

Come, come, you can't have it both ways. Either you keep many of hair keeps an invalid cool or keeps a hair dresser busy, you make up your mind!!! (J. E.)

Answer—I still believe a perfectly healthy human man endures without high body temperature better than any woman. If we had a choice, however, there is no justification for clipping a girl's hair short unless requested. Send ten cents and stamped self addressed envelopes for booklet "The Hair and Scalp."

Sunshine

How many days a week or hours a day should I expose myself to sunshine? Can a person get too much sunshine? (S.M.J.)

Answer—As many days or hours as possible. One cannot get too much sunshine, short of sunburn.

So They Still Have Creep

My young son Butch has what I think is croup off and on. Any suggestions as to what to do? I'm anxious to learn why.

(MRS. O. L. E.)

Answer—Send stamped self addressed envelope for pamphlet on "Croup." Give full information about what difference in environment? If Butch has catarrhal or "spasmodic" croup and no mistake, it would be interesting to know if it is true that the other children do not. But then, I had inferred from your letter that Butch was rarely receive linguistic about it to-day. Croup is one of the subjects most frequently asked about in the early years of life service,

YOU'D BE SURPRISED

By GEORGE W. STIMPSON

MUGWUMPERY

The original political "mugwump" was the Independent Republicans who bolted their party in the presidential campaign of 1884, when state boundaries were drawn, the Republican nominee, and favored Grover Cleveland, the Democratic nominee.

The regular Republicans said the bolters regarded themselves superior to their party in character and intelligence. Senator Vance Graham Dubbed them "mugwumps."

Horace Porter, in the course of a speech, defined a mugwump as being "a person educated beyond his intelligence."

The term had previously been used in parts of the United States to designate a person who makes great pretending but whose deeds fall short and shilling he is not equal to them. Hence it at first expressed the idea of a pharisee, one who sets himself up above his fellows.

As early as 1872, the Indianapolis Sentinel used "mugwump" in a political sense, and on Feb. 16, 1877, an editorial in the New York Tribune described John A. Logan as the "mugwump of the final plot."

Some authorities suppose "mugwump" to be a corruption of a similar word used by the early Virginia settlers in the Indian-Powhatan language a title given by the Indians to their chief.

But the term appears to be a corruption of "mukquomp" a combination of "muk" meaning great and "onqu" man. When John Eliot translated the Bible into the Indian language he employed "mukquomp" and "sagamore" as such English terms as "lord," chief," "captain" and "leader."

Speaker Thomas B. Reed characterized mugwumps as "long-legged birds of uncertain flight." Willis Dodds, president of Princeton University, described as a fellow who has mug on one side of the political fence and his wump on the other."

The Republican insurgents of 1884 were not the first mugwumps and it soon lost most of its sting. In the 1892 presidential vote came to be called a mugwump. Since independent voting has become quite general the term has lost most of its original significance and is now seldom heard.

Canadian Chutists Seize All Objectives Within Two Hours After Being Dropped

By DOUGLAS AMARON
(C. P. Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Germany, March 27—(CP Cable)— The 1st Canadian Parachute Battalion dropped into battle east of the Rhine Saturday, seized all its objectives within two hours and captured a considerable number of Germans with comparatively light casualties.

These Canadians, mostly veterans of the Normandy invasion last June when they made the only other operational drop, went at rest Sunday in a holding position around the area captured Saturday morning, in and around the woods northeast of Wesel.

In a sandie-lit cellar of a house at a busy crossroads behind the Scottish troops at British 2nd army had Advanced, Maj. Fraser Radie of Winnipeg, Dick Bilborn of Preston, Ont., and Capt. Jack Bennett of Toronto, combined to tell a story of the landing. They spoke proudly for Canada's only parachute battalion again had made a name for itself.

Dropped in Right Place.

The Canadians dropped at 9:32 a.m. Saturday from American-manned troop-carriers, which put them in exactly the right place. They were a few minutes ahead of schedule, and the third wave of the British 6th Airborne Division to leave their aircraft.

"We met no opposition till we were right over the dropping zone," Radie said. "The air-cover was wonderful and as far as I know only two of our planes were shot down from the ground."

The parachutists landed in the field and were in action almost immediately. Germans were defending surrounding woods and were encountered in the centre of the field and there was close fighting for two hours.

"It really was flat-out fighting until about noon," Bilborn said, and Radie described it as "two hours of real killing."

Most of the Canadians' casualties were suffered in fighting around the dropping zone. Some were killed as they were coming down, some shot as they hung suspended from trees by their parachutes, and others killed fighting their way to the rendezvous point across the open field.

Capture 200.

From mid-day until 3:15 p.m. when the first ground troops of a Scottish battalion linked up with them the Canadians mopped up scores of confused Germans who walked right into their positions.

The Canadians in addition captured at least 200.

"It was a wonderful show," said Bilborn who commands a company in the Canadian battalion. "It was individual fighting in the first stage until it got organized and then the boys did a terrific job."

Simpson, the battalion's adjutant, told of Cpl. J. A. Chambers of Sackville, N. B., who went out under fire to rescue two wounded British airborne soldiers who lay beneath a glider.

Evacuate Wounded.

Chambers and another Canadian ran 200 yards across open ground but only Chambers got there as the other Canadian was also wounded. The corporal couldn't get the men out so he tossed out a smoke grenade and then raced through the haze for help, returning with other men to evacuate the wounded, the including the Canadian who had gone with him originally.

Sgt. Aurelie Bray of Cornwall, Ont., took one objective single-handed and captured 16 Germans. Then he joined by two other Canadians, captured 45 more.

Pte. Adrian Rossignol of Carlier, Ont., and H. W. Nichols of Montreal had the amazing experience of being released by Germans from the tree in which they became entangled when they dropped.

Changed Their Minds.

The Germans were going to shoot them when a civilian arrived and spoke to the enemy soldiers. They changed their minds, cut the Canadian loose, gave them back their weapons and let them go into battle.

SCHOOL CENTRE OF FAST

Luddesdown, Kent, England — (CP)— This remote village, an educational centre in the days when schools were few, soon will be without a school because only 15 pupils attend classes in the 18th century the "gentry of the Country" almost all sent their sons to Luddesdown.

A British fighter pilot who made a forced landing in this area found his aircraft surrounded by 13 armed Germans but when he stepped out all 13 surrendered.

Maj. Sam McGowan of Winnipeg and some men in his company told how Germans were "running all over the place" once resistance in the drop-zone was broken.

Sgt. Bruce Paige of Kelowna, B. C., and five men who went out to see what was happening came back with more than 90 prisoners.

Lieut. Vic Fleming of Saint John, N. B., and his platoon spotted 12 Germans walking along a road and killed six. Later Fleming's men and troops of another company saw 50 or 60 Germans running along the road. The paratroops thought they were prisoners at first for they were bunched together.

"They did not seem to know we were here," Gowan said. "A sergeant went out to see if they wanted to fight. They did, so we Brens gunned them from 75 yards and those who still were alive soon surrendered."

Canadian Kills Nine.

Pte. J. O. Quigley of Petticodiac, N. B., killed eight or nine Germans with his Bren in the phase of the confused mop-up.

"All in all, it was quite a day," McGowan said. "It was like shooting ducks—couldn't miss. We moved so fast once we got out of the drop-zone that we hadn't time to search one building and the company following took 35 Germans from its cellars. The enemy was pretty confused."

McGowan was sitting under a clump of trees with some of his men when I visited him. Included were Cpl. J. F. Stephanko, Chapleau, Ont. and Pte. Joe Pascoe, Niagara Falls, Ont., Bill Charman, Long Branch, Ont.

The Canadians said some Germans came up to them and said: "You're from the 6th airborne division, aren't you?" when they landed; and others told them: "If you keep coming like you did today the war will be over in a fortnight."

Scottish troops, for whom the Canadians have the highest respect, said the Germans fought fanatically until the parachutists landed and then their will to resist waned.

Red Cross Drive Goes Over Top

Toronto, March 27—(CP)— The Canadian Red Cross National appeal for $18,000,000 went over the top at the end of the eighteenth canvassing day with $18,168,130, 102 per cent of the objective, collected, it was announced late yesterday.

Collections represented an increase of $146,077 over the same day last year.

Eight provinces passed their objectives and funds still were being collected in areas where the Lanvean was not quite completed.

Ontario reported 66 per cent of its objective with $4,920,000, but the Provincial Campaign Committee expressed confidence that the province would reach its objective during the next few days.

The Toronto Branch of the Society at Windsor, Ont., reported collections of $363,000 on an objective of $310,000 and the Brantford, Ont., Branch, which had an original objective of $85,000 now has passed its second objective of $100,000. The Brantford Branch has collected to date $100,542.

EXPENSIVE BIRTHDAY

Southend, England —(CP)— Because he celebrated his 86th birthday recently, Georges Betson expects to pay out about $200 ($800). Each card now is worth $4 6s.

Program Outlined To Broaden Fight Against Cancer

Toronto, March 27 — (CP) — A broadening fight against cancer was outlined Saturday at a joint meeting of members of the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation and its medical advisory board at which Dr. G. E. Richards, director of the institute of radiotherapy of the Toronto General Hospital, was appointed managing director.

One of Canada's most distinguished cancer specialists and widely known throughout North America, Dr. Richards will serve without remuneration in an organization that has already taken steps to provide the seven cancer clinics in Ontario with facilities to raise their standards and expand their services.

The foundation, in a statement revealed that additional radium and X-ray therapy units will be provided the clinics—at Toronto, Hamilton, London, Windsor, Hamilton and Ottawa—and said it is also aiming, through its medical advisory board, the question of establishing cancer diagnostic and prevention clinics, the first of which will probably be set up in Northern Ontario.

Several promising research projects to be supported at the universities of Toronto, Queen's and Western Ontario have already been recommenced by a committee on scientific research consisting of Prof. F. E. Burton, Prof. C. H. Best, Prof. William Boyd, Dr. R. Pearse and Prof. Ireton, all of Toronto, Dean Hall of Western and Prof. Mercier of Queen's. They have been giving careful study of the question of research to be backed by the foundation.

Most of these projects are already in progress and substantial sums were voted to support and encourage work of that sort. To maintain research on a really permanent basis an appeal for aid from private individuals and business firms will be made by the foundation later.

Projects Named.

Projects selected for support are: Prof. Arthur W. Ham, Department of Anatomy, U. of T., to study the effect of hormone on growth, to study the liver factor and work on carcinogenic hydrocarbons.

Profs. Robertson and Miller of Queen's to study the early diagnosis of malignancy.

Prof. Burton, Department of Physics, U. of T., to study the application of modern sensitive methods used in physics.

Profs. Mendel and Best, U. of T., to study the effect of various physiological and pharmacological substance on enzymic processes, etc.

Profs. Jones and Sinclair of Queen's, to study the application of infra-red spectrophotometry to lipid problems.

Profs. Fowler and Smith, Western University, to study X-ray dosages, etc.

Prof. Skinner, Western, to study biological extracts in the control of white cell malignancy.

Prof. Dearle, Western, to study ultra-high frequency radiation.

The Hendry Connell Research Foundation at Kingston, Ont., is also being assisted.

The foundation was set up by Dr. R. P. Hanan, Ontario's Minister of Health, last year. Members are Arthur Ford, London, Ont., chairman, Robert H. Brown, Toronto, Malcolm Gordon, Port Arthur, Kenneth Deacon, Unionville, Dr. R. K. Stratford, Sarnia, Dr. G. S. Young, Toronto, Dr. G. S. Richards, Toronto, Dr. J. G. Cunninghan, Toronto, and W. R. Campbell, Windsor.

U.S. Senate Query On Food Brings Up Canada's Meat

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Washington, March 27 —(CP)— Members of the Senate sub-committee on agriculture today launched an inquiry into food shortages with their thoughts fixed on Canada's reputed abundance of meats and the reasons why Americans cannot get some of it.

Immediately the inquiry opened Senator Burton K. Wheeler (dem., Mont.) asked that one of the matters to be investigated be the obstacles in the way of Canadian meat entering the United States.

He also wanted to know why Canadian meat could not be used to supply the United Nation Relief and Rehabilitation Administration requirements and the needs of those countries now supplied through United States lend lease.

Lt.-Col. R. W. Olmsted, director of supply for the Commodity Credit Corporation, answered that "we have made efforts to get large quantities" but the Canadian government would not permit exports. What Senator Wheeler had probably heard, Col. Olmsted continued, was of instances where Americans had crossed the border and bought meat for household use.

Senator Henrik Shipstead (Rep.-Minn.) said his information was that butter was unrationed in Canada.

"Why can't they sent it to Great Britain?" asked Senator Allen Ellender (Dem.-La.).

"The British have to pay for it if they get it from Canada," Senator Shipstead replied.

(United States Government agencies announced recently that lend-lease meat shipments to Britain are being drastically cut for this quarter.)

MUSTARD BATHS

HELP BRING RELIEF FROM RHEUMATISM

"My mother used to suffer agony from rheumatic pains," says Mrs. R. J. Crawford, of Kingston, Ontario. "But she got relief by using mustard baths, very hot. We used to mix 3 tablespoonfuls of mustard with cold water into a paste, then add this to a hot bath. The mustard helped to relieve the pain and to induce a good sleep."

Mustard Handy Remedy for Chest Congestion, too

"I have used mustard poultices in my home often for mother and for my husband when they get colds or chest ailments, too," Mrs. Crawford continues. "As soon as the first sign of a cold or winter infection appears, I put on a mustard poultice. I make these chest poultices with 2 tablespoonfuls of mustard to 4 tablespoonfuls of flour. I never leave a poultice on longer than 20 minutes. When the cold is severe, I apply three poultices a day."

Thousands Know the Power of Mustard Baths to Help Relieve Pain

Like Mrs. Crawford, wise Canadians from coast to coast rely on mustard baths or mustard poultices to help give immediate relief from threatening or serious colds, chest complaints, pains of rheumatism, neuralgia, arthritis pains or neuritis. Mustard treatment helps ease the pain and discomfort and provides first aid. When symptoms are serious, however, it is wise to consult your doctor.

THE CANADIAN WAY OF LIFE...

Down to Earth...

GARDENING for the fun of it—week-end trips in the old family jalopy—lazy days fishing by the river—these things still stand for a pleasant way of life—a way of life our men overseas are fighting for today! They won't be able to come back to these simple things, unless we get "down to earth" in our thinking, and make sure when they do come back, their dollar will be worth a dollar!

To protect that dollar, we must realize now, the dangers of careless, unnecessary buying! We must buy only what we need—never buy two where one will do! We must not trade rationing or price control, or deal in black markets. If we break these rules, our country—the country our soldiers are fighting for—will start on that spiral of prices known as inflation.

And inflation affects everyone . . . wage-earner, pensioner, small-business owner, re-turned soldier! That's why it's important to take a stand against it now. If inflation starts in this country, this is what will happen.

Prices will rise. Wages will try to follow along—and will never quite catch up! Soon your dollar—your soldier's dollar—may buy only 25% of the things it used to! That is what has happened in many of the countries of the world today, and that is why normal living for anyone is impossible in those countries!

So let's make sure our soldier's dollar, when he gets back, will be worth a full dollar. We cannot give back to him his lost years or lost youth. But if we keep up the fight against inflation, the man overseas can look forward to pleasant, satisfying living . . . to the Canadian way of life!

Make this Pledge Today!

I pledge myself to do my part in fighting inflation:

By observing rationing and avoiding black markets in any shape or form.

By respecting price controls and other anti-inflation measures, and refraining from careless and unnecessary buying. I will not buy two where one will do, nor will I buy a "new" where an "old" will do.

By buying Victory Bonds and War Savings Stamps, supporting taxation, and abiding by all such measures which will serve the cost of living and help keep prices at a normal level.

WEDDINGS

GOODMAN—JEFFRIES'

Trinity United Church, Peterborough, was set with ferns and Spring flowers for a pretty Spring wedding of wide interest Saturday afternoon, March 24, when Eileen Doris Jeffries became the bride of Cpl. Alfred Edward Goodman, R.C.A.F., Trenton. The bride is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Jeffries, Port Hope, and the groom is the son of Mrs. Mary Ann Goodman and the late John E. Goodman, of London, Ontario.

Capt. Rev. R. John Hodgson officiated at the ceremony. Miss Mabel Cherry was at the organ, and accompanied Miss Alta Brown when she sang "Through the Years" before the bride entered the church and "Because" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in a floor-length gown of blush satin. The lace yoke of the fitted bodice was appliqued with satin three leaves, and the bodice was finished at the back with a row of self-covered buttons, and was made with long fitted sleeves coming to points over her wrists. At the waist, the bodice was fashioned with a pleated frill, and the sleeves also were edged with a pleated frill. Her long veil of bridal net was caught to a matching coronet with bridal blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of Butterciffe roses.

Mrs. D. Hamilton, sister of the bride, was her matron of honor, in a floor-length bouffant rose crepe dress with sweetheart neckline, shirred waist, and three-quarter length sleeves. Miss Helen Goodman, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid, was frocked in Perry Winkle blue with taffeta bodice, sweetheart neckline, and a matching net over taffeta full skirt. Little Diana Fletcher was a dainty flower girl in lime green crepe, with sweetheart neckline, shirred waist, and short sleeves. All wore a single strand of pearls, and matching Normandy hats. The duration of honor and bridesmaid carried fan-shaped bouquets, of white and pink carnations, and the flower girl carried a nosegay of pink and mauve sweetpeas.

Sgt. Herb Hutchinson was best man, and the ushers were Sgt. Charles Swaziggs, Cpl. George Hutchinson, Cpl. Thompson, and LAC. Frank Thompson.

At the reception, held at the Kawartha Golf and Country Club, the bride's mother received the guests in a heather blue crepe ensemble, with navy blue hat, trimmed with a fringe matching her dress, and a shoulder corsage of Butterciffe roses. The groom's mother, also receiving, wore grey figured crepe, with navy straw hat, and corsage of Talisman roses.

For a wedding trip to Toronto and Niagara, the bride chose a two-piece rose dress with powder blue top coat, navy straw hat with blue and rose trimming, navy blue accessories, and an orchid corsage. On their return, the groom will resume his duties at Trenton, and the bride will continue living at her home.

Among the out-of-town guests were Bernie Leclaire, R.C.A.F., and Mrs. Leclaire, Sgt. Charles Beveridge and Mrs. Swaziggs; Sgt. Herb. Hutchinson and Mrs. Hutchinson; Cpl. Roy Thompson and LAC. Frank Thompson, all of Trenton.

A Beneficial Treatment For Removing Dandruff

By HELEN FOLLETT

MORE MEN than women suffer from dandruff, possibly because they do not wash their hair properly. The moisture of the male sebaceous glands is a favorite breeding place for the germ that causes dandruff to form. The hair must be kept clean, the scalp as well and an antiseptic solution used. Many dermatologists have various offerings that check the formation of flakes and crusts.

Everything should be done to put the scalp in a healthy condition. Massage is important for the reason that it stimulates the blood streams and helps the sebaceous glands to pour forth more oil to combat germs.

Applying Mineral Oil

Heat assists. Before you part the hair at various places, apply the oil along the partings. You can use a large medicine dropper for this purpose, or pledgets of cotton. Heating the oil is necessary as cause then it is more penetrating and softens the scales of the scalp. Spread out the parts and thoroughly give the flesh a vigorous mauling. Work the fingers well. The oil will be effective, should remain on over night.

In the morning, spray the head with water as hot as can be comfortably endured. Use it twice as much oil as possible. Apply melted soap, fluffing up to a lather as hot as you can bear it.

Shampoo Routine

Follow along with a rousing spraying; use a current of water that is warm. This will relax the flesh. Repeat the soapings and rinsing two more times.

Hair must not be brushed daily. Brushing tugs at the hair roots, exercises the tiny muscles in which the shafts live and have their being. Grooming of this kind does not stimulate growth.

Keep the hair clean, but give human hair a neat, clean look, puts it in order. Use a soft brush, brush their hair, and that is a slipup in the good looks program.

Attractive Easter Menu May Vary From Tradition

Easter menus, like the occasion, should be festive and symbolic, like touches predominating. This year is no exception. Although Lamb, the traditional Easter meat, may not be available. Large quantities of pork are being shipped overseas to fill contracts with Great Britain, so patriotic Canadians may have to use other meats instead. Here with veal, chicken and beef on the market, there is plenty of choice for every one.

Suggested Menu

The following menu, suggested by the Home Economists of the Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture, is particularly attractive:

Consomme
Roast Beef
Spinach
Shredded Carrots and Onions
Pan-Browned Potatoes
Butterscotch Rhubarb Pie
Finger Rolls Coffee

In roasting beef cook uncovered. Do not add water. Whether meat is seasoned before or after roasting is optional. Use a moderate oven (325-350 degrees Fahrenheit, for easier cooking period, allowing 20 to 30 minutes per pound. Depending to whether the family likes it rare, medium or very well done. Let the cooked roast stand in a warm place for a short time. This makes for more economical and easier carving. Make plenty of gravy.

Shredded Carrots and Onions

Twelve medium carrots, 2 medium onions, 1-2 cup water, 4 tablespoons milid-flavored fat, 1 teaspoon salt.

Wash carrots, and scrape if necessary. Peel onions, then shred both vegetables, using a coarse grater or shredder. Cook with remaining ingredients in a tightly-covered saucepan for 10 minutes. Stir occasionally.

Butterscotch Rhubarb Pie

Pastry for one pie, rhubarb, 1-2 cup white sugar, 1-4 cup flour, 2 tablespoons butter, 2 tablespoons milid-flavored fat, 1-2 cup brown sugar, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1-3 cup flour 1-8 teaspoon salt, 1-2 cup flour, pastry for crust.

Pour boiling water over rhubarb. Let stand for five minutes, then drain. Line a deep 9-inch pie plate with pastry. Combine white sugar and the 1-4 cup flour, mix with rhubarb and arrange in pie shell. Cream together the butter, fat, brown sugar, salt and the 1-3 cup flour. Sprinkle this mixture over top of rhubarb. Bake in a hot oven, 450 degrees Fahrenheit, for 10 minutes, then reduce temperature to 350 degrees Fahrenheit, and bake 30 minutes longer.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

SHOULD THE GIRL DECIDE?

Should a girl who is desperately in love insist on marrying a soldier about to start for the front, even though he himself warns her that in six months or a year he may come back to her seriously wounded? Or should the two contemplate themselves with an engagement, deferring marriage until the war is over and a safe prospect lies ahead?

Betty G., whose story this is, writes me: "You see, Miss Fairfax, I am 20 years old, so that I should be able to decide things for myself. I have never been really in love before and I am willing to take any risk. I can support myself and also I have if I had one. Though I am not actually plain-looking, I am not the type of girl men fall in love with readily.

"Now, John does love me, but unselfishly that he doesn't want us to marry now. He is slightly mercenary and thinks a hunch that he'll come back minus a leg or worse than that. But I am cheerful enough for two and if he is injured, I want to be the one to take care of him. And don't you agree with me that it is I who should decide this matter? You have helped so many people. Do send me your answer promptly. Betty G."

The answer to such a question as this, which of course comes up often, depends, I think, on the character of the girl. A flighty 18-year-old is fortunate, I think, if her fiance insists on postponing marriage and she usually has the wise enough to understand the risk she would be taking. The heart's enough knowledge of herself to know whether she is capable of facing life with an invalid husband—in case things turned out that way. But I'll admit that with Betty G the case is different. I believe her calm, mature and sensible enough to decide the matter for herself, and since she is sure that hers is the love of a lifetime, I could not bring myself to oppose her marriage.

So I hope that she and her melancholy John will have abundant happiness and that they may never have to face the disaster that Betty has prepared herself to cope with.

GOOD MANNERS

Procedure at a Church Wedding.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. At what point in a Protestant church marriage ceremony is it proper for the congregation to rise? Formerly, in our church, at direction of the minister, we rose after the ceremony, when the bride and groom came down the aisle together. So often a few people rise as soon as the bride enters with her father, and then everyone follows suit. Has there been a change in the custom?

2. Is it proper to give a personal or other kind of shower for a girl being married a second time?

Reader.

1. At the sound of the first triumphant chord of the Wedding March—"Here Comes the Bride!" the entire congregation should rise, and usually in a Protestant church the congregation stands during the entire ceremony. Always they stand as the final blessing is asked, and during the recessional. Then those who are not members of the immediate families sit and remain seated until all the relatives have been escorted down the aisle by the ushers. I know of no change in this custom in the Protestant churches.

2. Yes, although it is not a general custom, it is proper to give a shower for a girl about to make her second trip to the altar.

Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am assembling my lists of names and addresses of those to receive the announcements of our marriage. Will you please answer several questions that have arisen about these?

1. In the case of mother and daughter, and in the case of mother and two daughters (in both instances the daughters are my friends, and are not minors). In these circumstances it would be correct to address an envelope to "Mrs. and Mrs. John Brown (or Mrs. John Brown's) and Family." Instead would it be individual names:

Mrs. John Brown,
Miss Mary Brown,
Miss Helen Brown.

(Writing the individual names is more personal than writing "The Misses Brown.") Also in the case of two sisters write the individual

2. If possible, send individual announcements to the two friends.

2. This is not necessary.

THE WAY OF KINDNESS

By Mrs. Beeckman

Man, woman or child, you'll show your heart is in the right place if, in a bus, street car, or train, you give up your seat to anyone who obviously needs it more than you do ... a woman carrying a child, an elderly person, an infirm or crippled person.

Tweed And Brighton Officers Have Part in Fighting Across Rhine

Johnny Dure and Shan Lafontaine Are Company Commanders With Glengarries

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP, War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in the Lower Rhine bridgehead, March 27—(CP Cable) — The North Nova Scotia Highlanders have captured Bienen, four miles northwest of Rees, and advanced a quarter of a mile beyond the town.

The regiment is astride the Rees-Emmerich highway beyond Bienen and also on a road leading northwest of Bienen to Millingen, 1 1-2 miles away.

The Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, provided machine-gunners to support the North Novas in the attack on Bienen, which became the second town to fall to the Canadians in the present operation.

(The Cameronst — not to be confused with the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders, a Winnipeg unit—are the fifth Canadian unit disclosed in action east of the Rhine, as of February they were a 3rd Division Regiment.)

The Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders of Cornwall Ont., are meeting stiffening resistance between Bienen and the Rhine bend.

The British-Canadian bridgehead is being gradually expanded, however, particularly along the perimeter north of Rees and Bienen, where airborne units were dropped Saturday.

The opposition facing the Canadians, back in their accustomed fighting role in Allied advances — on the left flank — is as stiff as any along the bridgehead perimeter. The going is inevitably slow over the dead, flat country. But hard plugging is nothing new to the Dominion troops who encountered that in the early days of the Allied left flank through France, Belgium and Holland.

Gall Regt. First to Cross

The Highland Light Infantry of Canada from Galt, Ont., was the first Canadian regiment across the Rhine daytime and it was the first from the Dominion to take an east-bank town — Spellbrink, two miles northwest of Rees. Located on the Rees - Emmerich highway, it was taken after some street fighting early Sunday morning.

These Canadians crossed the Rhine at Rees after dawn Saturday in amphibious armored vehicles to a bridgehead won by Scottish troops of the British 2nd Army. Later came the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders, the North Shore (New Brunswick) Regiment, Newcastle, N.B., and the North Nova Scotia Highlanders of Truro and Antigonish.

(As of February, all are regiments of the 3rd Division)

Opposing the Canadians are infantry of the German 15th Panzer Grenadier Division along the Rees-Emmerich road and the 9th Parachute Division which fought in February's bitter actions along the Hochwald line west of the Rhine.

Never since D-Day last June 6th has there been anything like the British Rhine crossing. For the concentrated fury of attack, the operation eclipses the Normandy landings.

The H.L.I. followed troops of the 51st Highland Division of the British 2nd Army who won the foothold. The Galt troops took across the 800-foot-wide river after dawn yesterday in amphibious armored vehicles.

From an observation point west of the river Wednesday, the crumbling through the haze, smoke and dust curtaining the river. There was the enemy shelling at their particular crossing point.

Before the British crossing Friday night, red and white tracer bullets and shells painted the Rhine valley. British officers called it their "pepper pot."

Shove Off in Buffalos

At 9 p.m. under a three-quarters moon the 51st division shoved off in Buffalos amphibious armored vehicles.

I saw the Black Watch sing down the flat road in a dive where they cut into the Buffalos. In the background somewhere the inevitable skirl of pipes was heard amid the gunfire.

The Highland Infantry dug in at along the hedges running through the gun lines and later they made their crossing.

At 9:06 p.m. the Black Watch flashed a message back that they were ashore without much opposition.

A British general directing the battle from an observation post and turned with a smile of deep satisfaction: "It's British across the Rhine."

Meanwhile as the Canadians jumped ashore shortly after dawn on the flat, marshy dikeland, British and Canadian artillery pounded the German-held areas on the east bank of and around the bridgehead perimeter in a terrific barrage.

The H.L.I. is commanded by a youthful lieutenant-colonel from Saskatoon and Galt, Ont., and the second in command is Maj. D. Hodgins of Preston, Ont. Company commanders are Majors E. F. Kliesmet, Kitchener, Ont., Joe King, London, Ont., Bill Rothen, Galt, Ont. and A. L. McTaggart, Kitchener and Capt. Jack Ferguson, Galt, whose adjutant is Capt. Russ Echlin, Galt. Lieut. Len Zimes of Galt also is on the battalion headquarters staff.

Company commanders of the Glengarries are: Majors Wally Braden, Bowmanville, Ont., Jack Pegeron and Gordon Clarke, Peterborough; Captains Johnny Dure, Brighton, Ont., D. A. Scott and Harry Willis, Peterborough. The second in command is Maj. John Sothart, Ottawa and the battalion adjutant is Capt. (Shan) Lafontaine, Tweed, Ont. Lieut. Lorne Shaffer, Montreal, is on battalion headquarters staff.

Here is the 300th Lancaster bomber leaving the assembly line of the Victory Aircraft plant at Malton, Ont. This Crown company-is producing one of these planes a day. Loaded, the plane weighs 30 tons. It has a speed of over 300 miles an hour, a range of 3,000 miles, and an eight ton bomb load. Its armament includes nine machines guns mounted in revolving turrets. Its record as a bomber has not been equalled by any other aircraft.

DUCK LAKE FIGHT STARTED REVOLT SIXTY YEARS AGO

Northwest Rebellion Broke Out March 26, 1885, Ending Three Months Later With Battle of Batoche

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sixty years ago the mutterings of grave unfairness in the northwest territories burst into the fury of revolt and, with the battle of Duck Lake on March 26, 1885, the Northwest Rebellion started.

In three months of isolated skirmishing which followed, 39 volunteers, Northwest Mounted Police and members of Eastern Canadian regiments died. Losses among their opponents, the Indians and halfbreeds, probably were about the same, although the estimated count appears to have been kept by rebel leaders.

The campaign had fantastic contrasts. Gatling, brick Middleton, a precise, slow-moving British officer, led an impetuous force of Eastern Canadian militia who were associated with hard-riding Mounted Police and northwest volunteers. His enemy was the quick-thinking, unpredictable Louis Riel.

Middleton's men had old-fashioned single-shot rifles, while the halfbreeds and Indians, better shots and skilled in guerilla warfare, had repeaters. Ships equipped for war followed the meandering prairie rivers, chunks of steel laid along their decks to protect their riflemen. The rebels strung a wire across one river and snared the smokestack of the plunging riverboat Northcote, which carried on as if nothing had happened.

A Strange Campaign

Dashing cavalrymen made journeys of fearsome length carrying messages and shooting it out with Indians. At Frog Lake, Cree Indians ran amok, slaughtering whites as they left a church. At Cutknife, the sagust Poundmaker prevented his young braves cutting retreating troops to pieces after they had been defeated. When the Battle of Batoche was at its height, Middleton and Riel exchanged formal notes and the general made sure his guns were not directed at the place where the halfbreed women and children were hidden.

In the pioneer settlement of Regina, a newspaper editor complained that too much fuss was being made about the rising, and also most of his space to a murder trial at Moose Jaw, even on days when even Middleton let it be known his situation was "ticklish". Bugles blew in Toronto, Halifax, Quebec and every other eastern city; recruiting officers could not find places for half the men who volunteered for service.

Following Batoche, Riel surrendered and on Nov. 16 he was hanged, forgiving his enemies, after the Macdonald government at Ottawa had pondered innumerable petitions from Quebec and the United States asking that he be reprieved, and a few from residents of the Northwest who asked he be hanged forthwith.

MANY AUSSIE AIRMEN IN SOUTHEAST ASIA

Canberra, March 27 — (CP) — More than 1,000 Australian fliers are serving with the R. A. F. in the Indies-Burma theatre. They are flying Liberators, Catalinas, Beaufighters, Spitfires, Thunderbolts and Mosquitos.

Other Australians here are manning C-47's and these men had the job last year of flying in food and supplies to the British 14th Army when it was trapped in Arakan. The same crews flew Wingate's second expedition into Burma.

IRISH PRISONERS SCRAP

Tralee, Eire —(CP)— A miniature sea battle was fought between two Irish fishing fleets near Valentia Island off County Kerry. The combatants used oars, iron bars, knives and flats and there were injuries on both sides though no hospital cases. The battle broke over supposed damage by one group to the smaller boats.

Canadian Scots Take Nazi Post in Daring Rush

By DOUGLAS AMARON
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Army in Germany, March 27 — (CP) — A company commander is in a tough spot when he is faced with the choice of withdrawing from ground he has gained or attacking, probably at considerable cost, a dominating held position which is holding up his further advance.

Maj. John Taylor of Montreal who commands a company in Canada's Highland battalion had such a decision to make in the fighting for the high ground to the south and overlooking Calcar. He took the hard choice and charged.

The results were beyond expectations. Four machine-gun posts and two 88 millimeter guns/etc were overrun and the objective was seized. Maj. Taylor killed one German with his pistol, his sergeant clubbed another with his rifle butt.

Canadian casualties were eight men wounded and seven of them were able to walk back for treatment.

In this same fighting Capt. Eel Bellor of Brantford, Ont., a forward observation officer, went forward in a tank to direct artillery fire. Three tanks with him were knocked out but he stayed on the spot, reporting back one target after another and keeping a constant flow on the Germans until the infantrymen had consolidated. Those infantrymen took part later in the Hochwald fighting, clearing a western portion of the woods. The Hochwald battle lasted considerably be concentrated and continuous mortar and artillery fire but a counter-attack led by Capt. Bob Davey, Montreal, killed 23 Germans and captured 30.

Two privates from a French speaking Canadian battalion could not be Germans in digging a six trench besides their Bren gun position in the Hochwald. They burrowed so far into the earth only their heads showed when they stood up and except for an entrance nearest the side of a man's body, there were three feet of earth piled on top of the shelter.

"It was a tough bit but we had to do it," explained Ptes. George Chandler, Paspebiac, Que., and Delphis Beaulieu, Alfatill, Que. "They were shelling the daylights out of us."

"The Canadians haven't encountered many truculent civilians in Germany, but they're not taking any chances. Several signs scrawled cross and another has a drawing of a flying bomb.

"The Germans went in for signing of a different kind. Several German homes are marked on the outside with slogans such as "A weakling is a cult," and in a German schoolroom there's a placard which freely translated means "We are dreamsmiths; the Germans state is not."

Anglers Told Trout Season Will Open on April 28th; Many Streams To Be Restocked

Prizes for Largest Fish of Various Species Caught in Year Will be Given

Those addicts of the fly rod, whose delight is to traverse the secluded streams in search of the elusive trout, particularly those speckled beauties, learned Monday night their fondest dreams would become realities on April 28th, 1945. On that date the local trout season will open, President J. E. Short announced at a capacity meeting of the Belleville Game and Fishery Protective Association held at the Y.M.C.A. Monday night, when over 200 members were on hand.

It was while making his report from the annual meeting of the Ontario Federation of Anglers, that President Short announced the opening of the trout season for this area. The speckled season will open early in May, while as usual the bass and pan fish season will open on their respective opening days the last of June, Mr. Short added. Following the address the speaker made it known that netting had been prohibited in Moira Lake in the future, thus protecting the game fish in those waters.

Many Streams Restocked

Perhaps the most interesting report of the evening was given by Dr. Van Blaicher, chairman of restocking the local Anglers' Club. "It might be of interest to know that when we made application for the restocking of local district waters back in 1935 we applied for restocking in 15 different waters. In 1943, however, we made 123 applications and last year we were fortunate in having 156 applications for the restocking of waters in our area filled by the Department of Game and Fisheries," stated Dr. Blaicher as he thanked all who had co-operated so splendidly in the assisting in the replenishment.

Dr. Blaikie added that additional applications for Atlantic salmon had been forwarded to the Department again this year while 'lungs and bass fingerlings had been deposited the entire length of the Bay of Quinte last year. The latter proceeded to outline the entire 155 places in which restocking of all varieties of game fish had been made through the local Association's efforts last year. The association President Short reveals that completion had been received by the Department relative to fishing through the ice in lakes stocked with trout. The mater is being further investigated, he assured the meeting.

Keep Fingerlings Year Longer

Fred Cook, chairman of the Association's various contests also made a report from the Federation annual convolave by stating that a recommendation was passed to have the minimum size of Muskie, Pike in hatcheries an additional year in order that the restocking would bring out young 'lunge from six to seven inches in length and thereby assure more coming to maturity. . .

In the matter of angling contests to be staged by the Belleville Game and Fishery Protective Association in 1945 Chairman Croft announced there would be the usual contest for the largest trout caught on opening day, April 28th, as well as the custoary contests for the largest varieties of trout, Tuna, bass, pickerel and pike throughout the season. There will also be a special prize for the largest trout caught in local waters, that is south of No. 7 Highway.

Value of Reforestation

Mr. W. J. Holden, of Deseronto and formerly connected with the Provincial Forestry Branch, spoke on "The Value of Reforestation". Mr. Holden, who is an authority on reforestation, assured the meeting their angling and hunting facilities would be benefit to a degree far beyond their expectations if they would encourage reforestation as a source of the various rivers in the district.

Mr. Harold Legate gave a talk on fly casting and a practical demonstration as to the most successful method of casting a fly lure.

Toronto, March 27 (CP)—The doubting Thomases who said that Quebec Aces would not get the chance to defend the Allan Cup they won last year because Montreal Royals would eliminate them in the Quebec senior playoffs, are beginning to wonder if the Aces' prospects of trip across Canada may not turn into a pseudo-playdown for the Dominion title after all. When CAHA jurepsy Frank Sargent announced cancellation of the Allin Cup this year, Aces suggested that the cup revert to its original challenge basis.

Gerry Martineau, president of the Aces, has said that the trip west is almost a certainty. And if the Aces cop the next game of the Quebec series, they will certainly fall under the "qualified" classification. Sargent's only objection to the challenge series was that there may be clubs in the series that would be "unqualified" to play in "open" districts."

Skeptics were beginning to say that Aces would be one of those clubs after they were outplayed by Royals through the season and started the final series with the Montreal club on game down. But the weekend's 11-2 pasting given the Aces has set a powerful gas theory that Aces are as powerful as they were last spring when they swept to the Dominion title without losing a game.

"There might still be a bit of a fly in the ointment as far as the Aces' western trip goes. It seems that the Quebec Hockey Association has ordained the winner of the Quebec series to meet the winner of the Interprovincial League title.

Aces as well as Leafs are on their jaunt April 19 which doesn't leave much time for a series in their home province. But what will come of Aces western trip and the chance that the C.A.H.A. may finally sanction a challenge series, remains to be seen.

First Quebec bar to win the fourth game necessary to make it hockey even a three-to-one game lead is not a sure thing.

This Trail:

Newcomers to senior basketball ranks, Georgetown of Montreal won another round in the Dominion playdowns of this past weekend. They topped the ever-powerful Ottawa Civics by a four-point margin and now meet Halifax Y.M.C.A. in the Eastern Canada semi-final. The St. George Williams Octlege basketeers added another feather to their cap last week.

Playing in a Dodds Trophy game for the first time, they topped their college rivals, Loyola of University. The Dodds Trophy is an annual affair played between McGill and the city of Montreal senior champions.

HAMILTON MAJORS AND ST. MICHAELS ON VICTORY ROAD

Both Teams Now Have Distinct Edge on Their Northern Rivals

(By The Canadian Press)

Hamilton Majors assumed a 3-2 lead in games played in the all-Ontario Senior Hockey playoffs last night at Oshawa by whitewashing Sudbury Frood 2-0 in a closely-fought tilt of the best-of-seven series. The winning element of the provincial round will be played at Hamilton tomorrow night, giving Majors an edge for the honors.

The north-south rivals went through the opening period without a score but Dillon Brady converted Clarence Shillington's pass at 5.40 of the middle frame to put Majors out in front. Shillington took matters into his own hands when he left the Majors' centre with the second and last goal. Despite the tightness of the tests, the game saw only four penalties.

In the junior playoffs, St. Michael's scored their second consecutive victory over Porcupine Combines by winning out 8-6 in a tussle that was a prelude to the senior fracas. The Saints led 3-2 after third game of their best-of-five series at Toronto tomorrow night.

The northerners surprised the talent by getting and holding a 1-0 lead for the initial frame but Don Colpitts came to the Saints' rescue college crew when the individual count was knotted at 2-2. The Saints' showing was matched by Turik for the north country stalwarts. Other Saints to score were Ted Lindsay, Cormack, Sloan, Gravelle and Cosentino.

Porcupines who figured in the scoring were Turik, Leach and Hannigan, who gave the Miners their first-period lead. Yorke, Smith and Bruce Gamble notched his second goal for the two games shut-out and Gamble to be doled out his share as reinforcement from Toronto Generals. There were seven penalties.

BRUINS STILL SEEKING HOME WIN OVER WINGS

Boston Can Almost Clinch Series With Detroit by a Victory

Boston, March 27. (CP)—Boston Bruins—who haven't beaten Detroit Red Wings in Boston since Dec. 26, 1943—will take the ice tonight to try to extend their 3-1 lead in games in the current Stanley Cup semi-final series.

If they can break the jinx in the seventh game of series "B", they will gain an almost unbreakable grip on one of the final berths. But to do that they must play the brand of hockey they displayed in Detroit last week, one which does not permit a single mistake or mental lapse.

Red Wings, who appeared jittery before their own home crowd, regained their regular season form as soon as they arrived here Monday night, looked as though they had few errors to grab a 3-2 victory.

During yesterday's lull, a few players on each team took workouts and Norman Locking, Bruins' spare goalie, kept his hand in with a turn at the nets.

Ted Lindsay, Rookie Detroit forward who suffered a neck injury which threatened to end his first regular post and, according to Manager Jack Adams, the veteran Syd Howe, out with a shoulder injury, both on word from Detroit that he could play tonight if needed. Adams said he'd give Lindsay a chance and rest up for Thursday's game in Detroit.

With no other injuries on either side, both teams are likely to stick with the same lineups they used here Sunday.

TRIBE OUTFIELD WILL BE BETTER WITH HOAG IN

However, Lou Boudreau, Cleveland Manager, Has Troubles With Infield

By JERRY LISKA

Lafayette, Ind., March 27, (AP)—While youthful Manager Lou Boudreau of Cleveland Indians, has a large headache over his infield—the lack of it—the tribe outfield will be able to take care of itself with a few small thanks to the revitalized Myril Hoag.

The 36-year-old Hoag, who long ago made his name in New York Yankees of the '30s, appears set for full-time action for the first time since his return from the Army Air Forces United States Army Air Forces a year ago.

A totalitocracy this winter, Hoag reports, has made him a changed man physically. "That was what I needed last summer, but I didn't know it then and I tried to play when I had the miseries", he reminisced.

Now he's a spark-plug in the tribe's fighting spirit—and here and has clinched centre field, flanked by youthful Bob Seery in right and Paul O'Dea in right.

The thought of the fly-chaser with the tiny feet to baseball last season was a laughable one—and admittedly unimpressive. He rejoined Chicago White Sox, who had purchased him from Mr. Earl Brown in 1941, but Manager Jimmy Dykes kept him on only 17 games and late in the Summer presented him to Cleveland.

Hoag played in 67 games for the Indians, batting .256 and fielding .967 despite an ailing back.

A lot of people think that a veteran might be inclined to loaf under a manager as young as Boudreau, Hoag declared. "Not for me. I'll hustle plenty".

Toronto, March 27—(CP)—Precedent in this year's Stanley Cup play-offs calls for a Montreal victory against Toronto tonight when Canadiens and Maple Leafs meet in the fourth game of an eight point semi-final series.

Home teams have fared badly in the series to date. Leafs lead this one 2-1 on victories at Montreal in the first two games and a loss here Saturday night. Boston Bruins lead Detroit Red Wings by the same margin in the other half, also on victories two to one defeat at home. But this year's better getting to the point where exhibition games are being played. At Present Lick, Ind., the Chicago Cubs were dampened by a river flood last week and the Cubs moved to Muncie. What's all this bring about? Merely that Ralph "High-Pockets" McCabe, elongated Bellerville hurler, has again signed with the Albany Senators in the Eastern League. Ralph recently received his release from the National Selective Service and permission to sign with Albany. The "Senators" will train at home this season with spring training scheduled to open the New York State capital next week. Since the first part of the May 24 holiday and his family have been residing at Sudbury.

While speaking of the Senators we note three of last year's members are still in the Pittsburgh Pirates' spring training camp, all teammates of McCabe's in 1944.

Organize Baseball.

A meeting to discuss the possibilities of organizing a city baseball league will be held in the City Hall this evening at eight. It seems there are several interested citizens who are desirous of seeing the revival of baseball in Belleville and therein lies the answer to this evening's gathering. Last fall attempts to form baseball games were played each Sunday afternoon, at the Alemite Field with considerable interest being shown by both the participants and spectators alike. According to reports hopes run high towards the organization of a strong city baseball league, which brings to mind the fact there was a city junior baseball league flourishing in Belleville during the last war which covered the Intermediate, Junior and Senior championship teams. The teams competing in that junior city league were Eddie Thomas' Pontes, Jack Ryan's Canadian Locomotive and another nine from the college hill sector. Tonight's meeting is open to all and sundry.

This and That.

Joe DiMaggio is bound to see a lot of his New York Yankee buddies if he can get away from his army duties. Joe reported to the Induction Hall redistribution centre in Atlantic City where the Yanks are training. White-haired Aloysius (Al) Egan tagged the Detroit Tiers, rookie pitcher Bill Pierce, with the nickname of "Nipper"... Yes, according to Egan, Pierce, who weighs but 142 pounds, had the best-timed delivery of any rookie pitcher he has seen in years . . . Like all little pitchers—Bridges, Hubbell or any of the rest you can name—who have reached the heights despite their lack of size, "The Nipper" seems to have the right delivery and the right thinking that gives his pitches the needed zip, zip, zip. Incidentally, the Tigers are none too sure that even if he makes the grade, Pierce will be available for the 1945 season . . . The Nipper will be 18 on April 2 and he'll join Rosario Rosatelli, formerly of Quebec Aca, in Gauthier's place.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press)

Even with the loss of their two sluggers to the U.S. Navy, Detroit Tigers are not badly hit, Manager Steve Owen said last night at the Bengals' Training Camp, Evansville, Ind. Hank Wharlefield, 3rd baseman, and third-baseman Mike Higgins were the starters last year but O'Neill pointed to some of his acquisitions, shortstop Jimmy Webb from Chicago White Sox; Bob Maier, who hit .288 with Buffalo Bisons last season; Pitcher Al Benton, returned from the Navy, and Pitcher Walter Wilson, Buffalo's 19-game winner of 1944. O'Neill plans to install Maier in left field with Wharlefield at first-field and to move Joe Hoover from short to third. Detroit appears in the pitching brigade, headed by Paul Trout and Virgil Trucks. Hal Newhouser who collected 26 wins between them last year.

Danny Webb, Montreal Negro in the Canadian line of courses, last night decisioned Petty Officer Ben Darby of the United Navy in eight rounds at Stoke Newington. Both boxers have non-title victories over Jackie Paterson of Glasgow, world flyweight champion.

After being tied in the series with one victory apiece, Hurricane ladies last night eliminated Hamilton Golden Girls 33-13 in the third and deciding fixture at Brantford to win the championship of the inter-city ladies' basketball league.

A former hockey and lacrosse player, Harry D. Atkinson, 52, who died over the weekend, had one of the largest funerals ever held at Chesterfield, Ont., recently.

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.I.C.

Before spring arrived officially, the cherry trees around the tidal basin in Washington, D.C., already were in blooming glory. A young man of the navy, whose thoughts have turned, not-too-lightly we hope, to thoughts of love, walks hand-in-hand with his girl friend beneath the blossoms. The Washington monument rises from a clump of the flowering trees in background.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 641
By SAM GORDON
The Edditor

A cumbersome player uses numerous bids to describe a moderate, unfavorable, passive valuation, and judgment. A Horse Sense player bids under the same hand merely a few short rules.

When according to a one bid, pass with less than three tricks. When you bid, follow 7-4-3; take out, assist, no trump. A takeout to a new suit is forcing to game and shows tricks enough for a game. Raise says two tricks if you have one-jump on the first round, assume the opener has five tricks and one trick more for each raise. Apply that to this responding hand:

♠ J 10 8 5 4 2
♥ A 4
♦ K J 7 5

If partner opens with one club, say that response is a jump takeout to one spade. What you do next will depend on partner's second bid.

If his second bid is one no trump, he shows seven points. Your second bid is two spades. Bid a rabbit-double six-card trump before showing a bobtailed four-carder. Until the trump suit is decided, a jump would assist using 11 tricks.

If his second bid was two clubs or two diamonds or two hearts, he raises shows a sixth trick. Your second bid is three, one-jump to three spades with your five tricks.

If his second bid was two spades, he shows a sixth trick by his raise; denies seven tricks by not jumping; denies seven tricks by not jumping because ten tricks are enough for a game in spades. You should one-jump to four spades.

If his second bid is a one-jump assist to three spades, he has seven tricks. Thats may be a slam. Take-out to your diamond.

If his second bid was a one-jump to no trump or three in clubs or diamonds he has a six game. Bid three spades.

Now you have to remember the way you bid.

Training Camp Notes

Bear Mountain, N.Y., March 27.—(AP)—Mickey Owen, who recently sold his farm implements and stock with the announced intention of entering the service, telephoned Manager Leo Durocher yesterday that he was preparing to rejoin the Brooklyn Dodgers.

He gave no indication how long he expected to remain with the club but his presence, even though temporary, would bolster the catching department, where rookie Stan Allen drew most of the duty.

Morris Aderholt, infielder, received orders from Washington that he had been placed in R-P again.

St. Louis—On dry ground for the first time since opening training a week ago, St. Louis Cardinals worked out three hours yesterday under the watchful eye of Manager Billy Southworth who was getting his final glimpse of the 1945 edition.

Muncie, Ind.—Pittsburgh Pirates learned their ailing manager, Frankie Frisch, is improving and expected to arrive at the training camp here about April 1.

Capa Girardeau, Mo.—Jack Kramer who last year pitched the only one-hit game in the Southern League, routed the St. Louis Browns' home holdout.

Farmers and Income Tax

(The Port Elgin Times)
Few farmers pay income tax. It is a well-known fact that thousands of them should, but don't. In the majority of cases it is not that the farmer is dishonest, but he doesn't know what he earns or owes. Income tax returns are planned to deal largely with businessmen who keep books and keep complete accounts. Obsolescence, depreciation, and all the rest of the are a foreign language to the farmer. He is not able to keep a complete set of books showing income, disbursements and all the other things which are necessary to make a tax return. The Department of National Revenue tries to catch up with the farmer by stepping in when he dies or retires. Income tax men very busy in some sectors checking up on sales, and the total sale price of property is taxed as income in the current year. This is unfair to the farmer or. The best solution appears to be that a reasonable percentage be added assessed each year on gross revenue.

Indian Turnip

(N. Y. Times)
Jack-in-the-pulpit is a—sturdy, up-right citizen of the moist areas of the woodland. Showy pioneer days he has been called Indian Turnip. When famine stalked the Red Man he dug up the tuberous brown-skinned bulb, sheared off the white core and boiled it into corn for food. From Nova Scotia to Minnesota and southward to the Carolinas Arisaema triphylla will seem be lifting themselves from beneath their winter cloak of dead leaves. The poet called them "Robin Hood's Pulpits" because of their hooded heads and shields of green.

Take a one of these flowers. He's a ing of woodland flowers. He's a near-relative of the lovely calla, but he has some features all his that set him apart. This pulpit is an arresting sight in spring as he gets in, it may become a trap. Only the male plants are likely to be half-filled with water, and since the pulpit walls are perpendicular, escape is difficult. Deep in the recesses of the spadix, or pulpit, falls away the globular berries stand evenly in a cluster of green and when in August the leaves disappear, the berries turn to scarlet. Jack-in-the-pulpit's pulpit is a common flower of the woodland. Others can see the first sturdy, light-green stalk pushing up through the mould of leaves he knows that spring has come.

SPORT PERFECT FIELD TO PROMOTE NATIONAL UNITY

Manager of Quebec Aces Believes Team Ambassador of Good Will

By PETE LEMOYNE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, March 27 — (CP)—Sport is the perfect field" for promoting national unity in Canada because "all sportsmen speak the same language," says Gerry Martineau of Quebec, who has been working to promote unity for 10 years and thinks he has found a way to do it by means of the Quebec Aces.

To Martineau, his Allen Cup-winning Aces are more than a hockey team, they are "ambassadors between the two main racial groups in Canada."

The way he figures it, a hockey team can be made into an instrument of good-will that could do more to promote good relations between all parts of the country than could the speeches of politicians, lectures and teachers of national unity.

Aces now are becoming quite famous for the reception they give visiting teams — and visiting newspapermen.

When Port Arthur Shipbuilders came for the Allan Cup finals last season, they were figuratively given the keys of the city. Mayor Lucien Borne, an argent fan, provided them with the traditional welcome from "celeches" for a sightseeing tour, and city and provincial officials were on hand at the goodwill banquet.

"I am sure those boys went back with a better understanding of Quebec," said Mr. Martineau, "and they will never allow too harsh criticism toward us. If such an understanding is reached in sports, why should it not be the same in everything and everywhere?"

Montreal Junior Royals Win Easily From Ottawa Pats

Montreal, March 27 — (CP) — Montreal Junior Royals last night rode to an easy 6-3 victory over Ottawa St. Pats in the opening round of their best-of-three elimination series for the Memorial Trophy, emblematic of the championship of junior hockey championship.

The college boys fell prey to a 5-goal Royal splurge in the initial frame, and seemed too disorganized thereafter to get Royals' lead. They came back with more determination in the mid-stanza, tallying one goal as Royals' sole counter. St. Pats added their other counter in the last frame while the Montrealers bagged two to complete the score at 8-2.

AT THE BELLE

"Wing And A Prayer"
The screen's first great drama of our carrier force in action. 20th Century-Fox's epic, "Wing And A Prayer." The Story of Carrier X," is scheduled to open today at the Belle Theatre.

Filmed in the roaring saga of the Navy aircraft carrier and its crew who took on the wings of victory and the prayers of the nation, Don Ameche, Dana Andrews and William Eythe with an outstanding supporting cast.

The film tells the story of an unidentified aircraft carrier which, in the early days of World and conscription Fleet Port Harbor, was sent sailing into the Jap-infested Pacific and marked as something of a handicap under orders to avoid combat. But it's away and not find first back — the bewildered and frustrated crew of Navy flyers are forced to take everything that is sent throw at them without retaliation. With the straight-laced Navy, the Brass and the orders not to engage in combat restricted the day of revenge for "Carrier X" comes. How the revenge is won at the Battle of Midway and one of the most thrilling climaxes ever to blaze across the screen.

A new "first" in Hollywood's long list of technical achievements was set with the building of an exact replica of a giant American aircraft carrier for the picture. Scenes of battle never before shown in a Hollywood film are revealed in the realistic picture. Director Henry Hathaway and the entire cast spent seven weeks aboard the carrier, and 50,000 feet of film were exposed to get the picture's action.

Also included in the cast of the film produced by William A. Bacher and Hathaway are Charles Bickford, Sir Cedric Hardwicke, Kent Taylor, Richard Crenna, Henry Morgan, Richard Crane, Robert Bailey, George MacDonald and B. S. Pully.

A special extra attraction on the same program is Paramount's gay and happy Technicolor comedy "Star Night" with a cast of famous stage screen and stage stars. The Canadian Belle Newsreel completes the program.

We could hear Cousin Oscar still snoring up in the guest room, and Pop was making his usual early drinking his coffee, saying, Here's a suggestion signed Lucy Werkheiser. We think we can get rid of Oscar by going off on a visit and not leaving any food in the house, so he'll simply have to clear out of starve. Well, it might be a good chance to give your sister Fanny an unpleasant surprise by all piling in on her a day early.

But suppose we returned to find that Oscar had taken in a houseful of relatives, perish the thought! ma said, and pop said, 't's perished, thank just a same, Miss Perkheiser, Bureeks, here's the prize answer, this from A. W. Hayner of 1181 Queen Ann Place, Los Angeles, he writes:

What does he suggest, tell me quick? ma said, and pop said, Like all sorts of genius, it's beautifully simple. We're to pack up all Oscar's things during his absence, and take his baggage to the railroad station and check it, and then present Oscar with the baggage check, either unclaimed or collected, else perhaps with a few well chosen parting words, he said.

Fine, William, Oscar couldn't get home on an unaided baggage check, ma said, and pop said, Okay, we'll add the baggage check with a railroad ticket for a specified train on a specified date. It'll come high but it'll be worth it, he said.

Well now it appears rather absurd on our part? ma said, and pop said, Not the massivest way I've got it worked out. I've got a perfect face-saving alibi. I'll tell you exactly what to tell him, he said.

Ma not having time to hear the rest of the plot on account of being almost late, for rotary dental always impresses her, dismes with the $5.10 prize, five dollars of it being from pop, one dollar from me, and the 10 cents from me.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 4

"Mrs. Jowett!"

Mrs. Jowett is the social secretary. She's terribly, terribly good, but you've just got to have her. She's the social secretary just as Franklin is the band in the dance band. I spent some time with her once, spent some time apologizing and regretting and answering telephone calls for her, and I said, Mrs. Jowett, who wanted to take Kitty's picture, and reporters who wanted information about the party. You see a social secretary is a sort of combined manager and press agent rolled into one.

"Where was I? Oh, yes, I'd been after six o'clock cocktails were served in the Marble room. It's really just a living-room, but it's called the Marble room because it's one of the most ghastly marshmallow Medicinas there by Murillo, Grandfather Jocelyn furnished the house so you can imagine. Pinks all over, not even one Cezanne, and of course no modern.

"I went downstairs with Mrs. Jowett. There were several people in the Marble room. Lola Pascale, the South American artist, was shouldering one of the boiled shirts that Madonna. Lola never paints anything but nudes, bottles, guitars and copies of Le Journal. He was always hanging around Aunt Rhoda in Cannes last winter, I followed her over here.

"Then there was another of the old Cannes lot—Nicholas Dandine. He's fascinating, but—it's something horrible—poison gas or liquid fire. He lives in London, and he has a chauffeur-cum-beautician, a person say he's Rumanian and some people say he's Lithuanian, and eyt he looks and talks just like an Englishman.

"After a while Kitty came in, and then Aunt Rhoda with a gray-haired man she called Edgar. I knew it must be Uncle Edgar Jocelyn though I had never seen him, Aunt Rhoda went to his office downtown when we first reached London, but he hadn't come to the house before. I thought of asking him for a job. But I simply didn't dare go near him. He looked so senior. His dinner-coat and his collar and tie didn't recognize me and no one introduced us.

"I must explain that none of these people ever noticed me particularly. There's no cap of invisibility like being shabby and poor, and I was both. I'm sure Aunt Rhoda and Kitty and Mrs. Jowett were the only ones in the room who were really conscious of my existence.

"We were all lined and the cocktails were very welcome when Gregg —the butler—brought them in. Only Mrs. Jowett and Dandine chose sherry. Kitty was restless. I remember her standing about the room, glass in hand, looking at cards on the flowers people had sent.

"We were in the middle of our cocktails when Aunt Rhoda commented upon her cigarette, when Gregg announced Philip Leach. He was on the boat coming over and I suppose he really came to pick up some extra stuff about the Manse for his column. He writes a gossip column for one of the New York newspapers under the name Lowell Cabot. Aunt Rhoda makes up to him because she's scared to death for fear he'll print something nasty about her and Pasquale.

"Some time after that Victorine, who's rather a privileged character, slipped into the room to tell Kitty that dress she was going to wear that evening had come back from the dressmaker who had been altering it. And then the party broke up. Nobody wanted to need me, and I went upstairs to my own room and lay down and read my mother's old copy of the Saturday Papers. . . . Oh, dear, it does take a long time to tell all this, doesn't it?"

"Have another cigarette," suggested Basil, soothingly.

"Thanks. Well, Gregg had told me that there was dining up my dinner on a tray about eight o'clock and I planned to go to sleep right afterward."

"Weren't you going to the dance?"

"Oh, no. Kitty did suggest it, but how could I? I didn't have a decent dress or a permanent wave or anything. You see, Kitty had been promising for it this ever since she was born. Looking out for my complexion and her figure and learning just enough French and dancing just enough to make me civilized without the taint of intelligence. Enough education to complicate desire, as Wyndham Lewis says—Percy, no. It."

Inspector Flint tried hard to look as if he were used to hearing girls talk like Kitty and succeed very well.

"About ten minutes after I got upstairs, Victorine tapped on my bedroom door and said Kitty wanted to see me. She was in her bedroom trying on her dress and she had just, I discovered the skirt didn't hang properly. She'd got it in a hurry to have it ready for the first time she'd worn it, and it wasn't altered over here and still it wasn't quite right. It was a sort of a circular thing that's meant to be irregular to have a handkerchief hem line. But this one was white velvet with a marvelous circular skirt, and it was supposed to fall around and it was supposed to fall in long, modest folds, absolutely even.

"We pinned the hem and then took off the dress. Victorine basted one side while I did the other. You can do that with a circular skirt, it's not like Kitty put a bodyprint over her slip and lit a cigarette. Then she said, 'Mademoiselle,' but I'm not sure that she bedgrown and opened all the windows. Victorine protested, as I'd known she would close them. She began tossing Victorine about the French not liking fresh air. Suddenly I noticed the temperature was rising right off her forehead in drops. That was odd, because it was still snowing outside and the room was chilly with the windows open. She leaned her head on her hand and said, 'Oh dear, I've given me a headache'.

"We'd finished the skirt by then and we tried the dress on Kitty. It hung perfectly. But just then Kitty tottered as if she were giddy and clung to the dressing table for support. She said her head hurt and she felt as if there were an iron band about her breast. She said, 'I can't breathe fast enough. It's so hot. Please turn off the radiator.'

"That frightened me for the room was quite cool by then. Victorine cried, 'You have fever!' and rushed out to get a thermometer. I made Kitty lie down just as she was, wearing the white velvet dress and put a quilt over her. But she threw it back and said that it only help her take off the dress. The lining was damp and stained with perspiration. Victorine was hot under my fingers and she moaned, 'I'm so thirsty!'

"I got her a glass of water. Victorine came back with the thermometer and we took her temperature. It was 103 Fahrenheit.

"I went downstairs to get Aunt Rhoda who was in the hall talking to Mrs. Jowett and a man from the caterer with a supper menu in his hand. She seemed to think something was wrong the minute she saw me. I suppose it was in my face. She left them and came forward. 'What is it, Helen?'

"She was utterly astonished. She kept saying, 'But that's impossible! Kitty can't be ill at a time like this. Everything depends on her.'

"We hurried upstairs. Kitty lay panting with her eyes closed. Her hair was damp, her lips, bluish, and her tongue was very coated. Victorine was fanning her with a newspaper.

"It's malaria', said Aunt Rhoda. 'She had it in Rome when she was eleven and she's never got the germs out of her system.'

"I said, 'Are you sure? She had a high fever'. Aunt Rhoda answered, 'Malaria always causes fever and perspiration. I wonder what brought it on tonight—of all nights!'

"I said, 'We must get a doctor.'

"But Aunt Rhoda shook her head and answered, 'I never has a doctor for these attacks. She just goes to bed with quinine and fever burns itself out in three or four days.'

"She sat down on Kitty's bed and spoke in her most persuasive voice: 'Kitty, dear, can't you make an effort to get up for the dance? You needn't go to Uncle Edgar's dinner —you'll just stay up an hour or so to receive the guests and get back to bed as soon as they've all here'.

Kitty seemed to have lost interest in the party. "I can't get up', she said rather irritably. 'I know you've been to a lot of trouble, but I can't help it. I feel rotten'.

"Then she began to laugh, 'I believe you care more about my party than you do about me! Why don't you have it without me? A debutante is really the least important person at a debut—like a bridegroom at a wedding'.

"Aunt Rhoda was silent for a long moment. Then she rose with an air of decision and said to me, 'Ann, get the medicine kit out of the bathroom cupboard. Victorine, put mademoiselle into a dry nightdress'.

"When I came back with the quinine, Kitty was half asleep. There was a reading lamp beside her head and she turned it until it shone full in my face. I closed my eyes in the glare of the forty-watt bulb. Then I heard her say to Victorine, "Well? Can you do it?"

"Her hands trembled as she took out another cigarette. Again Basil had a match for her. She leaned back and exhaled.

"I'm sorry to be such a spoil-sport. I'll try. Perhaps I'll be all right if I don't believe at first." She looked at Basil. "But it is just what really happened. . . . "

"Victorine answered Kitty: 'But yes, oui, mademoiselle! Even if there were not such a strong family resemblance, I could do it. The upper part of the face is the only part that matters—eyes and eyebrows, nose and upper lip. Change that and you change everything. Kitty's mouth is small and quite similar at a masked ball without covering the upper part of the face. In order to disguise any one you need only alter the part of the face that is covered by a half mask, for that is the part of the face recognition depends. And today, magnifique—what you call it?—eyes as dark as hers can change the expression of the eyes or the apparent shape of the nose and upper lip almost beyond belief! A little affair of camouflage—an optical delusion'.

"I opened my eyes then and Kitty cried out, 'Ann, do you understand? I've got the most absolutely perfect idea! There's never been anything like it before! It beats everything I've ever heard! You are going to take my place at the dance and every one will think you are I! Victorine say you'll be me. Victorine say you'll be me. Victorine say you'll be me.

DUMBARTON OAKS' PROPOSALS MEET HOUSE APPROVAL

Speakers in Commons Hope San Francisco Conference Will Add To World Security

By FRANK FLARESETT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 27.—(CP)—Realiness to accept the Dumbarton Oaks draft proposals as a minimum basis for a world security organization, but hope that the San Francisco Conference would improve upon them, prevailed the House of Commons yesterday for a series of speeches in the Commons.

With a number of additional speakers yet to be heard and Prime Minister Mackenzie King due to reply to the different views advanced, it is probable the debate will continue tomorrow before a vote is reached.

Save Theirable Weakness

Resources Minister Crerar, whose experience in cabinet goes back to the First Great War, was the first to add a Member of the Union Government, said he saw a "definite weakness" in the Dumbarton Oaks plan.

It is the "provision that while a great power can veto the admission of any dispute involving itself, it can refuse to permit punitive action against itself.

"In other words, as someone has said, the league may draw up an indictment but it cannot enforce that indictment unless there is at all events a unanimous vote," said Mr. Crerar.

"That, it seems to me, is a definite weakness in the whole structure, but, as important in this conference, that, if it can not be bridged, I would be for supporting it as it stands."

"So would I," interrupted Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC — York-Sunbury).

Recall Resignation

Mr. Crerar said he could understand the views of Conservatives that he (Mr. Crerar) had resigned from the Union government because Canada sent troops to Vladivostok in 1918.

Sending troops was wrong, he said, and was unwarranted interference in Russian affairs. It still remained in the minds of "our Russian friends." Until a few years ago there was a good deal of suspicion in Russia of the other countries. He hoped it would be possible to change the voting arrangement on the security council to remove this weakness.

Mr. Crerar said the United Nations organization had to be empowered to deal "quickly and effectively with a threat to peace."

"If a fire broke out on one of the streets of Ottawa it would be poor business if the city council had to be called together to decide whether or not the fire apparatus should be sent out," he said.

Other speakers, all of whom endorsed the proposal to create a "United Nations" organization to maintain peace and the sending of a delegation to San Francisco, were Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre); Alfred Benco (PC — Saskatoon); J. A. Macinnis (C — Compton); John R. MacNicol (PC — Toronto Davenport); J. J. Kinley (L—Cumberland); Dr. Anthony Hlynka (SC—Vegreville); Dr. M. E. McIntyre (PC—Assiniboia); Kinley A. Mc Nicholson (CCF—Mackenzie); P. S. Macdonald (Leader, Reform); Raymond Sudeé (L — Hochelaga); and W. F. Rickard (L—Durham).

WIMPEYS REPLACED BY LIBERATORS

Rome, March 27 — (Reuters)— R.A.F. Wellington night bombers of the Strategic Air Force, effectively named "Wimpy," have been replaced by Liberators. They raided their last night bombing attack on Southern Europe when they bombed Treviso, north Italy, a few nights ago. Their first job was the bombing of Bergheim on April 1, 1942. Now they have passed to the retired list.

Looks Like End Of Organized Nazi Resistance in West

By CHARLES LYNCH

With the British 2nd Army, March 27 (Reuters)—This looks like the end of organized German resistance in the west. The whole of the German defence beyond Wesel is collapsing and folding open for the rapid thrust to the heart of Germany.

Only on one small sector of the front—beyond the newly captured bridgehead at Rees, on Field Marshal Montgomery's left flank—Germans are maintaining a coordinated defence.

(Troops of the 3rd Canadian Division dug in on this sector on March 24.)

It is learned at 2nd Army Headquarters that the German troops have no co-ordinated front south of the Rees area.

The picture with which we motor ahead is limited only by our ability to get motorized formations forward to the front.

The Germans simply cannot stop us now.

What is the news that has been almost six years in coming.

The Rhine has ceased to be an obstacle. Allied material is pouring over it as it would over any other river in Europe.

There is no limit to what the Allies can put ahead to hold its store. The Germans have little to stem our eastward advance.

Personnel Counsellor Speaks to Veterans

The opportunities and advantages offered discharged personnel of the present war by the Canadian Government as outlined in the rehabilitation plans formulated by the Government were given to become re-established once again in civilian life was one of the topics discussed by members of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Legion at its regular meeting in the Flight Lieutenant C. G. Whiteoak, personnel counsellor of the Trenton RCAF station.

The program, the speaker pointed out, extended to none in the Dominion. He gave some standards of how his plan had been taken advantage of by some discharged men, and in graphic detail explained the large scope which the plan covers.

Members present were told that a special Vimy Day commemorative is being planned and will be held in the Canadian club rooms here. Col. K. R. Alley, C.B.E. former commanding officer of the Trenton RCAF station, Canada's top flight ace, will be the guest speaker.

The dinner is open to all ex-service men of the past and present wars, and the Ladies' Auxiliary will be the dinner and the Comradeship committee in charge of the arrangements will be published in the near future.

Following the meeting refreshments were served by members of the Ladies' Auxiliary.

BRITISH HUMOR FAILS TO CLICK WITH CANADIANS

Brought up in North American Radio Tradition Fighting Men Show Lack of Interest in BBC Comedy Programs

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 27 (CP) — There comes a day aboard every Britain-bound transport when for the first time the ship's radio brings in BBC programs—and when English comedians go into their acts the reaction of Canadians abroad, is either one of pained surprise or exasperated profanity. Trained in the North American radio tradition, they just don't like it.

It can be truthfully said, too, that no matter how long they stay here they never do learn to like it. As far as they are concerned they can take their Handleys and Thalers or leave them alone—and they generally leave them alone, giving their full time for rebroadcasts of the Hopes and Bennys and Allens.

This lack of interest in BBC humor, programs, however, don't go unexplained by Canadians that old and unfunny as the British have no sense of humor." The reasons are more varied than that.

"The most obvious one is that the government-supported BBC hasn't the money to spend that sponsored programs in North America have. That means that Canadians in the United States radio can attract top-flight talent away from the theatre and movies, have a good radio star lily-lavishly grabbed by the stage and screen.

"The naturally tends to keep the BBC programs in the hands of our top-drawer artists. And their efforts, no matter how good, are hampered by programs which during the war years have been admittedly inferior. As Pat Millard, director of some 90 hunour programs broadcast over the best wireless set in the service, have been for nearly six years."

Then there is the much-talked-of BBC "ban." Every day some comedian complains in print about his stuff being blue-pencilled by a censor because it might be offensive, and although Millard insists that no "ban" exists among good taste, it is generally admitted that skits by British must pass a stiffer medical than they do in North America.

Gag Writers Wary.

"The BBC is looked upon as an official government voice, and therefore gag writers have to be careful that their jokes don't prick the skins of their American Allies, or tread on the always-aching corns of the European governments which flocked here when their countries in Canadians are only lukewarm about.

The reason might be that, like most things English, it is built on tradition. To Canadians there is nothing funny about the title "Tommy Handley's "Ilma" show. It is a fast and furious farce, a sort of "Hellzapoppin" of the air, which the English love, but which the Canadians are only lukewarm about.

RCAF Pathfinder Pilot Tells Rotary Of His Experiences in Special Work

The rigorous training and the stirring life the "Pathfinders", those intrepid fliers who flare-blaze the bright trail for the bombers of the Allied Air Forces, was described to the Rotary Club here on Monday by Flight Lieutenant W. G. Rhowbey, DFC, of the Royal Canadian Air Force.

A veteran of 50 operational flights, both as a "bomber" as well as a pathfinder, Flt. Lt. Knowles, wears the coveted insignia of the Pathfinder Force on his left breast. Asked how he won the DFC, he smiled and said, "That, it was nothing, I got it for flying."

He was overseas in January, 1940, he said, and being young and full of the old Irish vigor, fully expected to be over Germany the next night. It was a year and forty-three days later when he made his first take-off for the continent.

In operational training units, he said, trains people to each other. There is no selection of crews, the members mill around and pick out the chaps they like to fly with and that is that.

"Then when these things are known, lowering propaganda fails to click with a North American audience. And here Millard, who with his unit has been over the U.S. and here should know, explained: "In America you throw out a joke; if the audience doesn't get it it's too bad. Here we turn it down your throat.

"For instance," he illustrated, "In New York a comic stooge would say 'who was that lady I saw you with last night?' Comic—Why, you mean you saw me with a lady last night? Stooge—Yeah, now what I said, who was that lady you were with? Comic—What a lady? Stooge—That's right, who was that lady?

Comic—That was no lady, that was my wife."

Sent to a squadron, Knowles with his crew flew various types of aircraft in training and the Middle East. Mentioning that when the crew was given 84 own ship, it proved to be a Wellington, Canadian built Lancaster bomber.

His first trip found him quite shaky, he said. The fact don't remember much of anything from the time he took off until we levelled off for landing." Twenty-seven trips later, found the Canadians riding the sky trails with as much confidence as the three and four year veterans.

Voluntary Work

With but nine trips to go to complete his first tour of operations, Flt. Lt. Knowles was told he was called to headquarters and asked if he would go "Pathfinder". There is a purely voluntary job, and we guessed the answer. However, we passed up the opportunity of sitting around an OTU, "shooting the breeze" as the saying went, and decided to try the Pathfinders.

And here proved another surprise for the Canuck crew. Going to the Pathfinders meant several months more rigorous training and it was only that time before they were "over target". At first they were not allowed target indicators to their first flight. The merry few support for more experienced aircraft. However, came the big day and they were off on their own: They did a fine job and were duly proud.

Flt. Lieut. Knowles described the duties of Pathfinder flying: How the big ships flew in ahead of the bombers and laid down flares "right directly on target. Unerring accuracy was their keynote. It had to be that.

"The Pathfinder method of locating targets has proved a success," he said. Formerly the big aircraft had to find their own targets and then the resulted in flying over target for two hours or more. Now the Pathfinder system has not only reduced this time to 15 minutes but has made bombing more accurate.

"The big boys", he said, "can now hit anything in the world from a height of 20,000 feet without the aid of the target, flying by instrument. German flak has been known to reach a height of 40,000 feet, but is not very effective at that height.

The speaker was introduced by Rotarian Percy McGuire, Rotarian Bert Boyce was presented "hooked" for a dollar for becoming a grandfather last week. John Deacon acted as president in the absence of Percy Fisk Pinkston.

Canadians All Set For Big Drive Through Germany

Units Extended In East Outskirts Of Emmerich

Scottish Batt. Moves 3 Miles Along Highway at Wesel

By ROSS MUNRO
(C.P. War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in the Rhine Bridgehead, March 28 (C.P. Cable) — Western Canada Scottish units burst out from the northwestern tip of the Allied bridgehead east of the Rhine and the Royal Winnipeg Rifles last reported in the eastern outskirts of the Rhine bank town of Emmerich.

Overlooking some of the Canadian Scottish, a Victoria battalion, advanced more than three miles along the highway and railway running from Wesel, 22 miles south east of Emmerich, to the ferry port of Emmerich.

This morning the Winnipeg Rifles leap-frogged through them to gain another mile.

New Bridgehead.

The Winnipegers established a bridgehead over a small river east of Emmerich and pushed on among the buildings on the fringes of the town.

The Regina Rifles was the battalion which occupied Dornick, Rhine ferry village, three miles southeast of Emmerich, yesterday.

First reports from the Canadians' spearhead on the edge of Emmerich indicated that the opposition was light and that it appeared that the Germans have withdrawn north and east of the town to the defence feature which covers the Rhine crossing at Emmerich.

The highway to Emmerich was heavily cratered and mined but the westerners struggled along with the engineers working alongside the infantry, filling in craters and lifting mines.

Among other Canadian regiments which have joined the forces east of the Rhine are the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, the Toronto unit, and Le Regiment de la Chaudiere, of Lake Megantic, Que.

Sherbrooke First Over in Tanks

The Three Rivers tanks over the Rhine were the Sherbrooke Fusiliers, a crack regiment which fought from the Normandy beaches across France and the Low Countries into Germany.

British troops to the south and east of the Canadians are rolling ahead with armor and infantry columns striking deeper and comparatively light resistance.

The Canadians are convinced that their day to travel fast in a smash through Germany's heart is coming.

Tremendous quantities of engineering stores are flooding over Rhine bridges and the most triumphant phase of the war is nearing its end.

The Canadians will have a full share in the final triumph as the assault plan involves.

Optimism in the ranks of combat troops found an echo yesterday in higher quarters. The lieutenant-general commanding the Highland Light Infantry of Canada from Cleveland: "Frankly I think now the Germans have had it."

Opposition Light.

This officer who knows his opponents and never has underestimated, made his comment as he reviewed the units Sunday in which the H. L. I. helped capture Bienen, hinge of the German defence at Emmerich and defences.

In marked contrast to the early stages of the Rhine-Ruhr fighting, opposition everywhere in front of the Canadians yesterday was comparatively light. One column advanced two miles to enter Dornick. Cree miles from Emmerich and six miles northwest of Reese the Canadians first clashed seriously Saturday. This was the deepest Canadian penetration.

Dornick was found unoccupied and there were indications that the Germans had pulled back into Emmerich and to Hochelten to the south, three miles beyond the town. Along the Rees-Emmerich highway, the Normandy, Italy and Glengarry Highlanders from Cornwall, continued to gain in the direction of Emmerich while the

Mr. King To Conclude Debate on World Security Plans—Support by Parties

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 28 — (CP)—Canadian participation in the United Nations Security Conference on the San Dumbarton Oaks proposals for a new world organization, framed by representatives of Britain, United States, Russia and China, today appeared assured of unanimous approval in the Commons.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King today will conclude debate on world security plans which opened last Tuesday with an address introducing a resolution calling for Parliament's support to the delegation Canada will send to the San Francisco Conference opening April 25.

Two Leader Parties Approve

As debate drew near a close last night two of the smaller parties in the House announced approval of the government's resolution.

They were the Social Credit Party which had been hesitating due to dislike of the international financial agreements on monetary stabilization drawn up at the Bretton Woods Conference in July, and the Labor Populaire party whose members previously had refrained from speaking.

Maxime Raymond, leader of the Bloc Populaire group, adopted a different line from that pursued in the Commons by his colleague Independents, such as Frederic Dorion of Chambly-Rouville, who so far were the only opponents of Canadian participation in the conference but who made similar views to the Bloc Populaire Party on Canadian participation in the war.

GERMAN CAPITAL TO BE EVACUATED SAYS BROADCAST

Armament Plants in Berlin and Hannover Targets for 1,300 Planes

London, March 28 — (CP) — A fleet of approximately 950 heavy bombers with 350 fighters in escort attacked Berlin and Hannover today as an enemy broadcast said the German capital would be evacuated of all unneeded persons.

The German agency D.N.B. made the announcement. What steps would be taken to remove all unessential persons from Berlin, which underwent its 36th consecutive R. A. F. Mosquito raid last night, was not disclosed.

Similar plans have been reported by the Japanese for Tokyo and thus the broadcast was fueling further emergency measures in the last two remaining major Axis capitals.

Armament plants in Berlin and Hannover were the targets for today's raiders.

Today's raid was the fifth major daylight assault of the year on Berlin and was carried out by two formations of Flying Fortresses which thundered over almost an hour apart.

The last previous U.S. 8th Air Force attack on Berlin was a record 1,000-ton assault by 1,200 bombers March 18, and last Saturday 800 U.S. 15th Air Force Fortresses smashed at the capital from bases in Italy.

ASSAULT TROOPS NEAR OUTSKIRTS OF CEBU CITY

Second City of Philippines Aflame and Exploding From Japanese Demolition

Manila, March 28 — (AP)—American assault troops, swarming ashore on Cebu Island Monday against elaborate beach defences, swept almost to the outskirts of Cebu City, headquarters reported today, but that busy second city of the Philippines already was aflame and exploding from Japanese demolition.

Shortly after the American division hit the beaches the first big fire appeared in the heart of the city. Then came thunderous explosions and sheets of flame as the Japanese demolition crews went to work as they did in Manila.

The landing, under cover of air and naval bombardment, was made midway along the east coast of the island which lies between Japanese-captured Leyte in the centre of the archipelago.

On Luzon, mainline of the U. S. 6th Division captured the small village of New Bacobono in the enemy's crumbling defence area east of Manila on the Marikina valley watershed.

200 Ball on Homeland

Battleships and centres of carrier planes, which opened up on the Ryukyu Islands last Friday, blasted Kikai, southern stepping stones to Japan again Tuesday, the United States Navy announced, and Tokyo reported the second 200 raid in 12 hours on the homeland.

Fast Admiral Mitscher still left a gap in his communiques to account for Sunday — the day an Imperial Japanese communique said American landings were made on Ie Shima, island near Okinawa, 325 miles southwest of Japan.

Tokyo, quoting an Imperial communique, said between 60 and 70 Marianas-based superforts attacked the north part of Kyushu Island, including the arsenal city of Kokura, Sunday night.

Headquarters of the 21st Bomber Command at Guam previously had announced a raid by more than 200 B29s around noon Tuesday on Kyushu, southernmost island of Japan.

RUSSIANS NEAR AUSTRIAN BORDER IN VIENNA PUSH

Other Red Army Units Clear Out Danzig And Battle for Port Of Gdynia

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

London, March 28 — (AP) —Four Russian armies hammered in a huge pincers on the eastern and Vienna today and Berlin said one thrust through western Hungary within 26 miles of Vienna had rolled up to the central Raba River, guarding Austria.

The German broadcast declared the Soviet High Command forced a new crossing of the Oder River northwest of Kostrzin, 36 miles from Berlin. A Moscow dispatch reported the Russian supply system was working all-out to prepare a spring offensive" on this front closest to the enemy capital.

Other Russian units were clearing out Danzig, where the capitulation of the city of war were fired, and fighting into nearby Gdynia, the German high command reported fierce street combat in both cities.

Rites Thru Beambo Defences

The 3rd Ukrainian Army slammed through surging defences south of Lake Balaton to within 20 miles of Austria and 56 of Vienna yesterday, the Red Army's midnight communique said Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin's men now had thrust in the central Raba River, south of their closest approach to Vienna.

The new advance might have been in the area of Sarvar, 13 miles from the Hungarian stronghold of Szombathely, eight miles from the Austrian border on the road to Vienna.

To the north the 1st and 4th Ukrainian armies, hanging thru German and Polish Silesia toward Czecho-Slovakia from Berlin's Austrian capital's first natural defence line.

This line, 40 miles from Vienna within 80 miles of Graz, vital industrial city in the Austrian Alps, and only 26½ miles southeast of Szombathely, was pierced in Vienna sector.

The battle for Danzig and Gdynia was grim. Lt.-Gen. Vassili Chuikov's 8th Guards Army smashed into the two cities from the east, and Gen. Gregori Zhukov's 2nd. White Russian Army smashed into the two cities from the south, cutting off the Baltic, just a week after they had begun operations.

The Red Army captured 14 suburbs before they drove into the centre of the one-time free city, while units which burst into the Gdynia suburbs fought down to the largest Kahnal, seven miles southwest of the Polish port.

The clean-up of these cities, by passed in the great Russian sweep forward to the west along the Baltic, will free what the Germans have estimated as 100,000 Russians for a frontal drive on Berlin.

The two Russian armies were linked up in massive drive on an 80-mile front against the German positions in the Sudeten mountains.

Along this front, units of Marshal Ivan I. Petrov's 4th, Ukrainian army and Marshal Ivan S. Konev's 1st. Ukrainian pushed to within 14 miles of Moravska-Ostrava, Czecho-Slovakia's third city and guardian of the northern approaches to Prague and imperilled Vienna.

The fine is said to be a record high for Edmonton police court. The alternative for non-payment is one year in jail.

British Tanks at Minden 110 Miles Northeast of Wesel Says German Radio Report

Four Allied Armies Surge Through Defence Breaks

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, March 28 —(AP)— The German High Command said today that United States 3rd Army tanks had crashed into Gemuenden and the Berlin radio said the armor had pierced five miles farther to the northeast towards Grasefendorf, 213 miles southwest of Berlin.

The enemy assertion came while four Allied armies were surging through wide breek-throughs in disintegrating German lines.

The United States 1st Army reached the Giessen area, 236 miles from the capital.

(In London Reuters News Agency said the German radio broke into a broadcast to report that British tank spearheads were held in the area of Minden, 110 miles northeast of Wesel and 195 west of Berlin.)

Armies Jets Pages

The United States 7th Army drove 32 miles east of the Rhine, reached the river Main and formed a pocket with the 3rd and 1st armies a solid front on the rolling tank country of Inner Germany.

The British 2nd Army slashed 26 miles deep in Westphalia, menacing Munester, its capital. Canadian troops fighting with the British Army burst into the eastern outskirts of Emmerich on the Rhine.

The United States 9th Army was cleaning up the western part of the Ruhr completely outflanked by the 1st Army on the south and half encircled by the British Second Army on the north.

The Germans said Gemuenden and Hammelburg yesterday in a mighty surge of Lt.-Gen. Patton's forces of 32 miles of entering Frankfurt and 110 miles from Czecho-Slovakia. The enemy's communique declared that the town "was recaptured" and 12 tanks were destroyed.

Allies Use Parachute Radio

The enemy said 3rd Army troops had captured and were using the radio inside Frankfurt on the Main. Germany's minds began to reel as the 3rd Army was conquering block by block.

The western end of Frankfurt and its southern suburbs were in American hands, the Associated Press said, most important industrial centre in the area and a city of 80,000, was captured. Frankfurt, largely in ruins, was a city of 600,000 before the war and one of Europe's greatest rail centres.

The full extent of victories in the west still was obscured by partial censorship restrictions.

A dispatch from 3rd Army headquarters, filed by Frederick Winet, Associated Press war correspondent, four hours earlier than the German broadcast, said the eastward advance of Gen. Patton's troops still was accelerating. It was 32 miles southeast of Frankfurt and 26 southwest of Gemuenden.

Little Resistance.

The enemy broadcast came as two U. S. Army tank and infantry forces rolled within 235 miles of Berlin in a continued advance into the Giessen area 60-odd miles beyond the shattered Rhine line.

British 2nd and U.S. 1st, 3rd and 9th armies all had achieved breakthroughs and were advancing virtually at will inside inner Germany.

All three American forces joined together in a solid line east of the river when the 7th army slashed 35 miles from the Rhine to the main river.

The British force was 26 miles beyond the lower Rhine at the edges of such Westphalian centres as Borken, Rastfeld, Rochott and Bocholt and on the approaches to the capital of Muenster.

Canadian troops on the left flank captured Vrasselt on the Rhine, 1-2 miles from Emmerich, while other 21st army group men stormed into Isselburg and entered Dorsten, 14 miles from Essen.

Lt.-Gen Hodges' armies, greatest unit force ever unleashed in the west—drove another eight miles beyond Weitzlar during the night with motorized infantry closing up swiftly behind armor, mopping up by-passed pockets on the way.

With Large Airport.

U.S. 1st army column was closing on Frankfurt-on-the-Main from Lt.-Gen. Patton's U.S. 3rd army was fighting after winning the Frankfurt area second largest in Germany. The 1st army was within five miles of Wetzlar, threatening with the 3rd army a trap 45 miles long close to the Rhine.

Lt.-Gen. Bradley's 1st and 3rd armies operated under security blackouts which hid the fault extent of their triumphs, but the Germans said that the great cities of Nuremberg, Wuerzburg and Aschaffenburg were menaced by rampaging 3rd army columns, a hundred miles from Czechoslovakia.

Defences Falling Apart.

Everywhere the German defences were falling apart Dispatches spoke of route to Nuremberg as one that was "thoroughly shaken". Gen. Eisenhower's 12th army group headquarters shrugged in the west.

Security regulations barring more specific details of the U.S. 1st and 3rd and British 2nd armies rolling into inner Germany were in them-

Just Told To Direct Traffic But Not To Engage in Fighting

By HAL BOYLE

Bonn, Germany, March 28 (AP) —The Russians opened a second western front here and shied away from it like a frightened filly when they appeared over the horizon in great force.

The engagement began when one of the four Russians, looking for an American "displaced persons center," saw three German policemen at an intersection and recognized one of them as a former overseer in a factory where the Russians had been compelled to work for the Nazis.

The Russian made a brief reconnaissance and then dispatched a frontal attack with a right to the German's head.

The German staggered back and the Russian followed up with a left to the body.

Dazed by the surprise attack, the German called for help—and the two comrade cops pitched in.

The battle grew more committed as the Russian was surrounded.

Then the other three Americans, who had been side by a doubles pincers envelopment. The Russians interceded and took their Stallgrad. Pista flew and the Russians saw red—a thing the German red.

Two American military observers stood by, guiding convoys down a road to the Remagen bridgehead. They kept the convoys from running over the battlefield, but made no attempt to break up the fight.

"We were just told to direct traffic here, Mac," they explained to a bystander.

Quintuplet Girls Die at Birth

Washington, March 28 — (AP)— Quintuplet girls were born to a 36-year-old Negro woman last night but by 6 a.m. today all had died.

The mother is Mrs. Ada M. Turner, whose husband, Harold, is a receiving clerk at the United States Bureau of Standards. Mrs. Turner is the mother of eight other children.

Two and a half months premature, all but one of the quintuplets were born alive. The attending physician said that except for the stillborn baby, all were fully developed and weighed from one to 1 1/2 lbs. The five were delivered within 17 minutes beginning at 10:40 p.m.

At Freedmen's Hospital, where the babies were born, Dr. A. P. Alexander said pre-natal examination of Mrs. Turner had indicated the likelihood of multiple birth, but that only twins had been expected.

Mrs. Turner walked to the hospital last night. Her husband went to bed and was awakened at 3 a.m. by a newspaper reporter who gave him his first news of the quintuplets.

Later Turner said: "I was shocked."

The Turner children include one pair of twins.

Australian Press Attache Recalls Pleasant Summer Spent in District

Thirty-eight years ago a young Australian traveller, visiting in the Belleville district was befriended by the Robert Mitchell family on the second concession of Thurlow and spent a pleasant holiday there in a summer, made fast friends, and went on his way unmindful of anything but the trails that led to the bay of Quinte area.

That young Australian man, Thomas Dunbabin, is back in Canada as Press Attache in the Office of the High Commissioner for Australia in Ottawa and remembering the summer he spent in the Belleville district expresses his appreciation in the form of a weighty letter to the Ontario Intelligencer. With the intention of renewing that friendship, Mr. Dunbabin wishes to visit the Belleville district the summer and enquires of the Mitchell family.

Mr. Robert Mitchell, a former warden of Hastings, who befriended the young Dunbabin 38 years ago died five years ago, but his two sons, Arnold and Fred Mitchell of Thurlow, recall the Australian. Mr. Dunbabin's letter to the Ontario Intelligencer follows:

OFFICE OF THE HIGH COMMISSIONER FOR THE COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA

That Dutch Apple-Cake Australian Recalls Belleville

Ottawa, March 26th, 1947.

To the Editors:-

May I, through you, express my long-standing sense of gratitude to the Belleville Society, its inhabitants and their neighbors and other Belleville people of long ago? I refer to the days in July, 1909 when I arrived in Belleville as a stranger in a strange land—it was a long way from Australia, to Belleville in the days before the first World War. I never felt anything but at home and welcome in the Mitchell family and about Belleville. There were my kind friends in the Bay that I had been moved amongst in the Australian Parliament shortly at the other ends of the world.

They would be to take a job for the winter down on the farm, stay in Canada and grow up with the country. I did not do that but I promised to come back to Canada. Apart from passing through the country I never had a chance to do that till this other day. But when I did have a chance I took it with both hands. And I am glad I did.

My job here is to do what I can to make Australia better known to Canada and to promote, when occasion offers, friendliness between our two countries. My own early experience makes me all in favor of such friendliness. Life would have been much poorer if I had not had that experience down by Belleville, had not eaten that Dutch Apple-Cake of Dudley, picked huckleberries in the bush and bought a bicycle soon to Tamasula (but they did not pedal there) — and worked on the Threshing Machine, and more, that I have ever eaten since.

The reception I got in Canada to the offer of welcome to Canada, Australians who can go to the University of Sydney, Australia, suggests that after the war many young Canadians will be on the trails for a year or two. I only hope that I can be of great service as well as the Canadians treated me in my Belleville days. They cannot do better.

I intend to visit Belleville soon. I want to meet the folks I did remember it, with the glory of summer on the countryside.

Yours,
Thomas Dunbabin,
Press Attache in the Office of the High Commissioner for Australia, Ottawa.

Major A. Mowat Visits in City

Dapper as a his vent, and looking the picture of health, Major Angus Mowat was visiting in this city through his associations with the library here, was a welcome visitor in town today.

Thousands of copies have been sold in the Dominion and the latest author in the literary cap of the Major is the fact that Swedish has ordered a translation of the volume for literary consumption of that country.

Further literary ideas are milling around in the Mowat mind, and today, the genial Major says that in the near future another book will appear on the market.

Jim Donahue Dies in Vancouver

Believed to have been drowned accidentally, the body of William James Donahue, son of the late Mr. Alderman William Donahue, 36 Grove Street, was found in Burrard Inlet, Vancouver Bay, B.C. according to a telegram sent by the Vancouver police to Belleville police officials here. He was 45 years of age.

"Jim" as he was known to all his friends, was born in this city and received his education at St. Michael's Academy. He was a member of the Catholic faith and one of the big six. His wife, Mrs. Esther Donahue; one son, James Ed. of this city; two sisters, Mrs. J. A. Dooley, Toledo, Ohio, and Miss Veronica Donahue, at home, and one brother, Francis, also at home.

The body will leave Vancouver on Friday, at noon, and is expected to arrive in Belleville on Sunday or Monday of this week, following an inquest in the far western city.

Prior to the outbreak of the First Great War, Jim joined the Royal Canadian Artillery and at that time was one of the youngest Canadian soldiers in uniform. He was serving with the artillery in Scotland and France and following the cessation of European hostilities, returned to Canada. But the army life had attracted him and in 1939 he volunteered for service with a Canadian battery going to Siberia. He saw further service in the Russian campaign, and a high ranking officer pinned the Military Medal for conspicuous gallantry on the breast of "Jim" Donahue of the famous "Polar Bears" a veteran organization comprised of Russian campaigners.

Possessed of a fertile creative mind, Jim turned to the newspaper field for a career. He was associated with the staff of the Detroit Times where he served his "cub-ship" emerging with reportorial glory.

Later he joined the editorial staff of the Ontario Intelligencer with which he served for a period of seven years, and where his brilliant mind and clever pen marked him as an outstanding reporter.

Always restless for new adventure, Jim did not hesitate. With Eddie, now Sergeant Eddie Jarvis of this city, Jim put the cover on his typewriter and went to Florida where he joined the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment as a private. A few weeks later he was promoted to sergeant of intelligence.

But he met with disappointment later. When the battalion embarked for overseas Jim was left behind. A medical category proved the stumbling block to his overseas ambitions. After several months treatment in a military hospital, he was discharged, and returning to Canada turned to his old love, the editorial desk and the typewriter.

He became associated with the staff of the Kingston Whig Standard. After working in the main office for some time he was made residential correspondent at Canadian Arsenal. His health, however, began to fail, and he returned to the more warmer climate of British Columbia. He lived there for some time until he was well esteemed.

Surviving are his wife, the former Miss Edna Rae Shar; three sons, Joseph of Smiths Falls; Stanley of Toronto; Gabriel Jr., Trenton, and one sister, Mrs. C. O. Habib, Rudson, Quebec.

'Teachers of Religion' By Rev. Dr. A. J. Myers Used as Textbook

Preparation for Christian leadership upon returning home is a basic concern to men serving in the armed forces. This was reflected recently in an interesting request for Leadership Education courses from Lieutenant-Colonel Chaplain J.A. Mateljohn serving in Italy. He is conducting a study course on "The Life of Jesus Christ" by Mr. J. Halsted Harris and "Teachers of Religion" by Dr. A. J. W. Myers of this city. These two courses, one in Scripture and the other in methodology, will help materially to prepare members taking the classes and give Christian leadership to youth upon their return to Canada.

Made No Contact.

Meanwhile the Canadian Scottish from Victoria, B.C., crossed over to a two-miles-long island in the Rhine south of Emmerich and made no contact with the enemy in advancing the length of the island.

But these advances are incidental to the main task the Reserve being for as, they view the sensation-making crossings over to the south. However, before they fulfill Field Marshal Montgomery's plan, it must be that his forces will "crack about in the plains of northern Germany," they are going to bump the enemy again.

It will be a depleted enemy, though, for Field Marshal Kesselring has little to make another stand with, reports say.

Canadians probably will play a big part in dealing with German forces which have fallen back northwest of the bridgehead and are ready for the task.

The War Today—
Allied Problem of Supply Mounts as Advance Continues

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Air Weapon Analyst)

While the Allied offensive out of the Bridgehead is operating under partial news blackout for security reasons, sports gambling is going on a picture of a fast-moving front, the fluidity of which bespeaks the element of the disaster which the Allies are piling onto the Germans.

Obviously we are getting closer to the end of the conflict. However, let's take a lesson from yesterday's peace-stampeding which swept the United States and not have another premature celebration such as we had in the last war.

As Gen. Eisenhower said yesterday, the German force on the western front "is a whipped army" — but there's "darn tough fighting ahead." That's our cue to take it easy, though we can be happy in the knowledge that things are going well. We will that Germany's complete collapse isn't far off.

What we must recognize is that you can't throw seven Allied armies across one of the world's greatest stop sprint to Berlin or the Russian front like a runner doing a 100-yard dash. They couldn't perform such a feat even if there weren't a single enemy soldier in their way, because armies have to be fed and receive ammunition supplies to keep them moving.

Problem of Supply

Eisenhower indicated this yesterday when he remarked that the extent of the Allied thrust beyond the Rhine is limited at present by the problem of supply.

The Rhine still remains a tremendous impediment to movement of supplies, because the Allies need rail lines for expeditious movement, and the railroad bridges are destroyed, forcing them to depend on pontoons and trucks. Communications already are greatly extended, and this bungalo will grow by leaps and bounds as the rapid advance continues.

In short, this is a difficult moment for Eisenhower's offensive. Having achieved that smarang crossing of the Rhine — one of the great military feats of history — he must now get reorganized for the final onslaught. And in this connection it should be noticed that the Allies are going to have to carry every thing if they get no active opposition from an unfriendly population, the people at least won't give the support they have been getting in free Allied territory.

While Hitler's forces in the west are indeed "whipped," Eisenhower doesn't intend to take the possibility that they will organize a front at some point "where your maintenance is stretched to the limit" — that question of supplies again. The Nazis are up against the problem of finding time to reorganize for a stand and in this connection they are faced with the danger that one of the Allies' speeding armies may be able to cut Germany in two from west to east. The broad strategy of the Allied drive is this:

Broad Strategy

On the far northern flank the Canadian 2nd Division, British 3rd Army and U. S. 9th Army have been assigned the task of knocking out the great industrial Ruhr, and are trying to draw Field Marshal Kesselring's northern army into a battle of annihilation. On their south, the U. S. 1st Army is heading hell-for-leather out of the Remagen bridgehead toward Berlin with the idea of cutting Germany in half and thus preventing the German troops in the north from retreating to Hitler's Alpine redoubt and defences in the south.

Patton's 3rd Army still further south is running interference for the 1st, and the U.S. 7th is on Patton's right flank. The new bridgehead surrounding Pulan makes guesswork hazardous, but it's possible he may strike southeastward for a junction with the Russians, thus further hamstringing Hitler's preparations for a last-ditch stand in the Alps.

STILL IN DARK ON POSSIBLE MEAT RATIONING

Price Board Officials Decline to be Pinned Down on the Question

OTTAWA, March 29 (CP) — Officialdom, snuffing the first signs of spring steaks and chops, today told Summer without hedging several points, but still left many loose ends as to whether the government might again institute a rationing system. Officials at the Prices Board office, here, declined to be pinned down on the question. Hon. Donald Gordon, board chairman, has said that possible re-establishment of rationing was a question of high government policy which hinged on the extent to which Canada increases its meat exports.

Yesterday, Agriculture Minister Gardiner told the Commons that Canada has been approached for making the largest possible amounts of meat available to meet shortages in Britain.

Quota to be Increased.

He added too, that meat export still was under consideration and discussion and that reporting officials this House it was anticipated Canada's beef shipments to Britain this year would exceed the 163,000,000 pounds shipped in 1943. His did not say that this increase might be but added significantly that it would not be offset by reduced exports of pork and pork products because of Canada's current drop-in-hog production. Thus total meat exports to Britain would be about the same as last year.

Speculation on possible re-introduction of rationing followed during recent action of the U.S. government in limiting civilian supplies and making sharp decreases in exports to Britain.

Canadian still didn't have that answer, but they remembered that the lifting of meat rationing in February, 1944, was termed only temporary at the time.

Gardiner Refutes Charges.

Before a Senate sub-Committee in Washington this week Lt.-Col. R. M. Gaussiad, Director of Supply of the U. S. Commodity Corporation, charged that Canadian authorities said efforts to get large quantities of meat from Canada had been unsuccessful." He said the Canadian government would not permit exports across the border.

In reply, Mr. Gardiner said he could not understand why such a statement had been made without further explanation.

The situation was that at the peak of Transatlantic delivery last fall, the Canadian government had approached authorities in Washington and had gone directly to St. Paul, Minn., to obtain "plants getting a quantity of Canadian cattle be shipped to St. Paul for processing, a proposal had been turned down.

At present Canadian plants were not fully busy with livestock coming in "and for that reason I would say there would be less likelihood than there was last fall of anyone asking that we should ship our livestock to the United States for processing of meats on their way to Great Britain," he said. "More meat can be got to Britain by keeping our plants fully occupied."

In concluding, Mr. Gardiner said there seemed to be an erroneous impression in the United States that Canada's per capita consumption was higher than in the United States. Actually, on a per capita basis, Canadians were consuming slightly less meat than Americans.

Women's Land Army Centre of Controversy

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(CP Staff Writer)

London, March 28. (CP)— The 80,000 girls of the Women's Land Army, who have worked through the war in out-of-the-way places and with little publicity, are getting notice at last—as the centre of a parliamentary controversy over the government's decision not to grant them post-war gratuities for war service.

Outside of parliament they are getting notice, too. In several districts land girls stopped work in protest against what they termed bad post-war treatment. It was expected their strike would end today.

There were indications the refusal of gratuities would seriously affect W.L.A. recruiting, despite official appeals, a large number of volunteers would have to be found if essential farm work were to be done successfully this year.

The W.L.A. is a voluntary service, run without military discipline. Its members normally are employed by individual farmers at rates of pay, but others are paid by the Government through the war agricultural committees.

While there has been no clear-cut official explanation for the refusal of gratuities to those paid according to the women's services, it is understood the basic objection was that special treatment for the W.L.A. would bring claims on behalf of other groups of non-service war workers and that the government's position would become impossible.

There seems little likelihood that the cabinet's decision will be reversed, but many members of parliament have been outspoken in their opposition, and the Evening Standard said:

"Land girls wear uniform; they bear the King's Crown on their sleeves; they are called an 'Army.' No one will imagine that these marks of honour are bestowed lightly."

David Lloyd George

One of the great figures of the trying times of the First Great War, David Lloyd George, wartime Prime Minister in those fateful years in which Germany and Austria launched the war of aggression against the Allied Powers, is dead, leaving a name that will live as long as British history endures. As in the present days it has been the proud destiny of the British people to have so great a leader as Prime Minister Winston Churchill, so during the First World War, Britain had an outstanding leader in Lloyd George who was also one of the most powerful of figures of the Allies in the war against the enemy of that age. In these two instances it has been the unique destiny of Britain to raise up men so great that they have been towers of strength to the cause of world liberty and justice.

David Lloyd George had lingered on into the closing period of the second of the great wars of the world, and had been long enough to realise that his people under Mr. Churchill and his associates and their gallant military leaders were with the leaders of the other United Nations confronting and defeating the savage Hun and the victory which is now assured. He has passed away at a time when the sounds and feelings of victory are in the air and in men's hearts.

It has been Britain's glory in times of great crisis to have had men of destiny to guide her. It was so with the great William Pitt and also with Pitt the Younger. It has been given to have so many men in the parliamentary leaders of Britain in the two wars with Germany two of her great men, Mr. Churchill, from the stock of heroic Scottish blood and in the line of Lloyd George, with the fire of his Celtic ancestors in his veins.

A Welshman of the people Lloyd George was a champion of reforms, the course of which he strongly advocated and helped by his first struggle. In 1939-1945 the English Churchill defends the real foundations of British freedom as did Lloyd George and he also lives in a time of change. In these two great men one can see how the British spirit permeates every son of Britain in whatever part of the British Isles he is born. It is the same in the Briton and it is innate in the people of the dominions and Dominions. It has had its influence as well upon the growth of democracy and liberty across the world. So, no Kaiser Wilhelm in 1914-1918 and no Hitler in 1939-1945 could hope to conquer the freedom that has come down the ages in Britain.

Lloyd George was gifted in administration and also in oratory as is Mr. Churchill. No two men could be more unlike in many aspects or more alike in the strength of their passion for liberty and British freedom.

The great statesman who has just passed was first of all a champion of reform, then in the office of Chancellor he carried out tax changes. In the Great War days his courage and financial genius fired his nation and her Allies with determination. His last days in the service of his country were the years spent as the faithful independent member for the riding of Carnarvon. Not long ago he was accepted a seat in the House of Lords which he had in his earlier days criticised but he did not live long enough to take his seat.

His name will endure among British statesmen for he served during one of the great eras in the nation's and world's history and served well enough to merit the eulogy and honor of all free peoples.

John C. McCarthy

John C. McCarthy, a native and a citizen of Belleville who has done much to benefit this city, has passed away, honored by everyone as one who had put his life to the best use and tasks, and leaving a memory of a worthy citizen. Mr. McCarthy in relating a few years ago salient facts of his life told how as a boy he had had a newspaper route carrying the Intelligencer to very many households in this city. The enterprising spirit of that boy was a sign of the spirit of the man he was to be. He had faith and confidence, he possessed initiative and enterprise which found the opportunities which were offered here ample for the exercise of his fine talents.

Early in life he had gone with his parents to Akron, Ohio, and came back after some time with a flair in his system for mechanical design and construction. Working in the Walker Foundry he found the opportunity of cultivating his gifts and then for a period of eight years he lived in Chattanooga, Tennessee, operating a pattern and modelling factory with success. Coming back to Belleville he became active in business and then one day years later he saw a new enterprise rise in his mind, the designing, building and managing of a modern theatre in Belleville. Oddly enough he had never up to that time been associated with the theatre in any way but he had all the qualifications for undertaking he assumed. From his own design and construction there rose the Belle and McCarthy theatres.

His knowledge of design and engineering and his natural administrative and managerial gifts earned him a name in this new field. How well he managed the two motion picture houses is local history. With success as a designer and builder of movie houses came opportunities to incorporate his plans in other motion picture theatres which he built in other towns in Eastern Ontario.

The man who late in life proved his ability in this new field of effort, in many other ways contributed to the advancement of Belleville, of local individuals.

His life may well serve as an example to the young people of today and some words he spoke about the time of the opening of the McCarthy Theatre seven years ago will bear repeating for the sake of the boys and girls. He said: "If the boys and girls of today are allowed to follow their natural trends, whether they be in business, in mechanics, in industry, in music or in art, the world will be a better place to live in. Let each one find his or her proper niche and nothing but happiness will result." He has made a notable contribution to the life of this community by his work and other plans and projects and his memory is an example of devotion to duty, of attention to the task at hand, of cultivation of the best qualities, powers and individuals. He found his own proper niche and in his chosen field of effort which was wide and interesting he proved himself. His ways were kindly and gracious ways. Some years after he had built the Belle theatre, some sound pictures arrived. He as an enterprising man realized that they held the key to the future of the industry and soon Belleville and district movie fans were enjoying the latest in sound.

Mr. McCarthy will also be remembered for many fine gifts of his mind and heart. He was genial and cordial, and saw interest in everything and everyone. His memory will remain in his native city which he has served by his confidence and enterprise.

Closing Days of Lent

This week marks the culmination of the period of Lent during which for six weeks been observed throughout the Christian world. The more quiet and serious mood of these latter days of the penitential season will reach its climax on Good Friday which for nineteen centuries has been observed first in Palestine, then throughout the Roman Empire and afterwards spreading out into the whole world. The season officially ends at noon on Saturday but on Sunday will be the greatest of all Christian festivals, Easter, symbol and proof of the Resurrection.

Palm Sunday with its majestic symbol of the royalty of Christ and its forecast of the tragic scenes that were to follow in quick succession and now marked in this Holy Week, ushered in this final period of Lenten time. Now comes Good and the great hymns indelibly impress the thought of men and women at this time:

"Ride on! ride on in majesty!
Ride on in lowly pomp to die;"
Bow Thy meek head to mortal pain;
Then take, O God, Thy power, and reign."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 30th., 1918.

It was fifty-seven years ago that the last interment took place in the old Dundas street burying ground, that would be in the year 1867. The reason that burial ceased then was that the ground was filled with graves. The site will now become a city park and tourist camp.

Belleville Y's Men of their recent meeting decided to make application for a charter of the local club. Mr. Albert Adams occupied the chair at the meeting.

Mr. Fred Hickman, who some time ago proposed to the city council a scheme whereby he would purchase the motor system in the city, arrived in Belleville today for a conference with aldermen and city officials with regards to the project. This afternoon the city solicitor committee will meet Mr. Rawson: Mayor Wood, Aldermen Ellis, Peterson and City Engineer Campbell.

An architect from Toronto was in the city this week looking over the site for the new children's building and conferring with the committee with a view to getting plans for the new structure to be erected near the hospital this coming summer. It is reported that the building will cost in the neighborhood of $15,000.00.

Lieut.-Col. Herbert D. Ruttan, of the 2nd Battalion, has been appointed Commanding Officer of the 2nd Battalion. The appointment is now being raised in British Columbia and trained in Vancouver.

Watching Planes Land on Aircraft Carrier Hard on Nerves Says Pyle

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Western Pacific (delayed)—The first time you see a plane land on a carrier you almost die. At the end of the flight your leg muscles were sore just from being all tensed up while watching the plane come in.

It is all so fast, timing is so split-second, the place is so small and, somebody said that carrier pilots were the best in the world and they must be or there wouldn't be any of them left alive.

Planes don't approach a carrier as they would on land — from way back and level. Instead, they come they almost seem to be sneaking up as if begging. They approach in such an awkward position and flying at such a crazy angle you don't see how they can ever get on anything.

But it's been worked out by years of experience, and it's the best way. Everything is straightened out in the last few seconds of flying. That is—if it works.

Anything can happen in those last few seconds. Once in a great while the plane loses its speed and goes into the water just behind the ship. And sometimes a pilot is known to ram right into the stern of the ship.

The air currents are always bad. The ship's "island" distorts the currents, and makes for real woes. Even the wake of the ship—the waters churned up by the propellers—have an effect on the air through which the planes must pass.

If half a dozen planes come in successively there's a certain "wave off" from the signalman. You're doing fine, coming in for landing on the deck of a small carrier in a rough sea, he just waves like landing on half a block of Main Street while a combined hurricane and earthquake is going on.

You would call it a perfect landing if a plane came in and hit on both wheels at the same time. In the center of the deck and headed straight forward, and caught about the third one of the cables stretched across the deck.

But very few of them are perfect. They come in a thousand different ways. If their approach is too bad, the signalman waves them around again.

They'll sometimes come in too fast and hit the deck so hard a tire will blow. They'll come in half-sideways and the cable will snag them around in a tire-screeching circle.

They'll come in too close to the edge of the deck and sometimes their wing will hit the catwalk. They'll come in so high they'll miss all the cables above and slam in on to the high cables stretched across the mid-deck, called "the barrier."

Sometimes they'll come in somewhat over the barrier, and land on their own deck. Their wheels bounce all around and hit the "island." sometimes four times before they get the air and still get down all right. Sometimes they catch fire.

During the Tokyo strike, one of the big carriers running near us lost three planes in ten minutes. One was shot up and had to "ditch" in the water alongside the ship.

The next one slammed into the "island," and was so wrecked that it had to be pushed over the side. The next one to come in crashed the "barrier" and burned up.

And on the other hand, you'll land planes for weeks without a bad crashup. We wrecked three planes our first three days out in crashes—and not a single one after that.

The first time I watched our boys landing, I was scared to death. They hadn't flown for about two weeks, and were a little rusty.

It's always that way after a ship has been in port for a while. Everybody dreads the first two or three days, until they get their timing again.

As I was watching the first planes coming in one by one, my room-mate, Lieut. Cmdr. Al Mastin, came up behind me and said: "Well, I see you've got the carrier stance anyway. I noticed you standing there to help get them around into position."

When all the planes were back, I walked over to Cmdr. Al Gurney, the Air Officer, and asked him if I'm going to watch this for the whole trip, you'll have to provide me with a new pair of fingernails.

And he replied, "Well, think of it this way. You've got to see them. It'll drive you nuts."

The pessimistic skipper of the ship finally got re he refused to watch. When the planes were coming in, he just stood on the bridge and kept looking forward.

And the way I figure it the crew is almost as bad. He is Chief Petty Officer Jack Hall, from [illegible] St., Ft. Worth. His nickname is "Cactus."

"I was on this ship for a year before I ever saw an entire flight land," he said. "I just couldn't bear to look at them."

But he has gotten on the nerves improved and my own nerves hardened. Now I can watch everything to get all our planes down for the day—or trip without a single casualty either to them or to me.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Name Suggested For Boulevard

March 28, 1944.

Belleville, Ont.

Editor, Ontario Intelligencer:—

I read with great interest the letter in your issue of March 9th that was contributed by Mr. T. F. Owen Hently. In this letter Mr. Hently suggested that some name be given the east street development along the high bank of the Moira River by the name of "dogwood." In my opinion this appellation has an appeal to me, but I would like to suggest another name that seems to me to be even more appropriate and that will at the same time do honor to Belleville's most deserving citizen, J. Owen Hently. I therefore propose that we call our new thoroughfare, Owen Boulevard, in recognition of the service that Mr. Hently has given in putting Belleville in leadership which has brought about greater industrial development.

I was one of those fortunate enough to be present at the testimonial banquet at the Quinte Hotel given in Mr. Hently's honour on the evening of March 9th. I listened with interest to the selection of the eulogistic reference to the work of this outstanding citizen.

Some of the speakers came from distant points to pay tribute to Mr. Hently's outstanding effort has been recognized perhaps even more clearly than by those living in our hometown. I was impressed most of all by the address of Mr. Arthur Collins, who has charge of the Industrial Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway. Mr. Collins quoted as saying "I do not know of any better example of citizenship" Mr. Hently than by naming a park, boulevard or thoroughfare after him. Why not carry out this pertinent suggestion at such an opportunity as the present time?

I have known Mr. Hently for a number of years, and I have heard about him is his extreme modesty. He can travel a small piece of land 100 calories or a nut fudge sundae with 450 calories, or a bowl of vermilk yields 80 calories, or skim milk (milk from which cream has been removed), or separator milk (milk remaining after fat has been removed by the cream separator) buttermilk and skim milk or separator milk are very low in calories but nourishing as whole milk, so far as calories go, but in addition minerals and vitamins (B-complex and particularly B1, G or riboflavin, they are virtually equivalent to whole fresh milk in the diet.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

By WILLIAM BRADY, M.D.

WHAT! NO MILK?

I am following the regimen outlined in your pamphlet "Clew to Lose Weight"—mailed on request. If you provide a stamped envelope bearing your address—please do not use a slipping of this item (as if your request) and I am getting results already.

(E. T. F.)

The correspondent does not tell how much he has already reduced in body weight or bulk or measurement, but both in a remark, but from the correspondent's letter I infer that he or she is like most others is disappointed if the slacker flesh does not melt away at least ten times as fast as it accumulated in the first place. That childish wish—for magical reduction to or nearly to the ideal by eleven o'clock next week—is the bait that catches so many suckers for eight-day diets and similar Hollywood stunts.

Take it easy, folks. Remember, I'm just a plodding general-practitioner, not an eminent specialist not a "food specialist," not a "diet specialist," just an ordinary doctor.

If you follow the reducing plan, program, regimen or what not instructions I give in the pamphlet mentioned you may lose a pound at the rate of a pound or two a week, some less and in some instances perhaps from two to five pounds, depending on your condition and the degree to which you adhere to the instructions.

"If Dr. Brady says reducing a pound or two or even three pounds a week is slow, I don't want you then don't write now, fatty, bum me." Well your case is hopeless, Mr. Fatty, and I'm sorry.

The correspondent continues:

How about whole milk? Is fullcream milk fattening?

A glassful (half pint) of milk yields 160 calories, compared with a lamb chop 260 calories, an apple 80 calories, an egg 80 calories, a tablespoonful (one-fourth pound) of roast beef 300 calories, a teaspoonful of sugar 20 calories, small potato 100 calories or a nut fudge sundae 450 calories, a bowl of vermilk yields 80 calories, or skim milk (milk from which cream has been removed), or separator milk (milk remaining after fat has been removed by the cream separator) buttermilk and skim milk or separator milk are very low in calories but nourishing as whole milk, so far as calories go, but in addition minerals and vitamins (B-complex and particularly B1, G or riboflavin, they are virtually equivalent to whole fresh milk in the diet.

Is milk fattening? The answer is yes and no and/or either. It would be hard to get fat on a diet of milk alone—it is not below even 3600 calories a day, which many persons require for maintenance of normal weight and strength, would call for consumption of more than a gallon of milk.

On the other hand, as you will find the pamphlet "Clew to Slim Weight" for copy send stamped envelope bearing your address, low do not use a clipping in lieu of your request) I say that if you drink a pint of milk or even a glassful (half-pint) with a slice of whole wheat bread and butter or oleomargarine with or without sugar or jelly or marmalade or jam, each night at bedtime, will readily put on from ten to twenty pounds in a year. This bedtime snack of course is supplementary to the ordinary daily meals.

STAMPS PRINTED ON ENVELOPES

U. S. postage stamps cut from embossed envelopes, postcards or postal cards are not valid when affixed to letters for mailing.

Many people think that if they affix a stamp to a stamped envelope or spoil it in addressing they can cut the stamp from the original envelope and use it for prepayment of postage on a plain envelope.

This practice is forbidden by the postal regulations. The Postal Laws and Regulations provide:

"Mutilated or defaced postage stamps, fractional parts of postage-due stamps, stamps cut from embossed stamped envelopes, newspaper wrappers, or postal cards, stamps other than postage stamps, may not be used or counted in prepayment of postage."

However, stamped envelopes spoiled in addressing are redeemable at postage value by the postmaster at a post office in a substantially whole condition.

Unmutilated postal cards with imprinted stamps embossed on them are redeemable at face value. Postal cards are not valid when affixed to letters for mailing.

Healthy Cheese Industry Fundamental to Prosperity Of Dairy Industry in Canada

Quality, Maintained, Is Healthy Cheese Industry Is Fundamental to the Prosperity of the Dairy Industry as a Whole, Declares W. A. Jones, President of the National Cheese Council of Canada, told members of the Western Ontario Cheesemakers' Association here today. He stressed the fact that while a healthy export market was necessary for the 940,000,000 pounds of the industry, more consideration should be given to domestic cheese sales. "This should be a first among post-war plans for the industry."

Best quality Canadian cheddar was the finest of its kind manufactured in the world, but, despite the fact that some 170,000,000 pounds was made in Canada annually, Canadians knew not cheese from chalk, he declared. "Three times as much was exported as was sold locally," Mr. Jones said. He suggested that there should be an attempt made to educate Canadians with the merits of the qualities and food value of their own cheese. He also thought that improved merchandising methods and packaging should be considered.

"There was a grave possibility," he said, "that on a price basis, Canadian cheese would have great difficulty in competing with New Zealand and other Empire cheese in the British market after the war. The alternative, if this big farm industry was not to be adversely affected, was new export markets and increased consumption here in Canada. At present Canadians ate less cheese than the people of almost any other country, offering a great field for promotion. It was necessary to find out what type of cheddar they desired—mild, medium or strong—and cater to that market."

Since the war commenced the manufacture of cheddar cheese in Canada increased from 138,500,000 pounds in 1939, to 179,200,000 pounds last year. Of the latter amount 50,000,000 pounds were produced under Ottawa control. Most of this went to Britain during the war years, and there was hope that UNRRA would take quantities for some years to come. Eventually, however, said Mr. Jones new markets would have to be found, without the cheese industry to use the surplus milk the whole dairy industry might again suffer from the overproduction which plagued it before the war. He also made a plea for higher quality milk, regardless of the use for which it was intended.

PICTON

Plowing Starts Earlier Than Usual In P.E. County

Picton, March 28—Some Prince Edward County farmers have been able to do plowing. The ground, lacking frost, when the melted snow, and the bright, warm weather has contributed to the drying-up. Seeding at Sharp's was no severe frosts following the disappearance of the snow, farmers expect a bumper crop of hay.

Sucker Run On

Suckers, a coarse type of fish, but in demand on United States markets, are being harvested by fishermen at the village of Milford, seven miles south of Picton. The fish come up the creek from South Bay. At the bridge, there is a deep hole and thousands of fish congregate there. They are taken by net, by licensed commercial fishermen.

In many other creeks, spearing suckers is a popular sport with the boys.

Junior Farmers Meet

Prince Edward County Junior Farmers held their monthly meeting at Bloomfield hall. Plans were made for a livestock judging competition in Picton next week. The girls are to be responsible for a banquet at Demorestville hall in the evening.

Slides on home improvement were shown and members are to take part in a contest to improve home surroundings. An open meeting was planned for April 9 when the draw will be made for the cash donated by R. J. McFarland. There were seventy present.

War Bride Arrives

From her home in the bombed area of Croyden, England, Mrs. Margaret Garvin, wife of Cpl. Jack Garvin, overseas, arrived here early Tuesday morning. She was accompanied by their two-year-old daughter, Margaret.

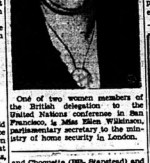
They are guests of his mother, Mrs. Jessie Garvin. The war bride stated her family had been evacuated from the danger area a year ago, is their home was twice hit by bombs. Canada is certainly a great change for me, but I know I am going to like it, she stated.

Mr. and Mrs. Cliff Gerow are moving from Kingston to Picton to reside.

CHESHIRE REGIMENT LANDS ON RHINE TO HELP BUDDIES

Men of the Cheshire Regiment land from amphibious craft (Buffaloes) on the east bank of the Rhine to support the force of British commandos that took West in the opening phase of the Met Army Group's drive across the Rhine and toward the heart of Germany's industrial Ruhr.

BRITISH DELEGATE



One of two women members of the British delegation to the United Nations conference in San Francisco, is Miss Ellen Wilkinson, parliamentary secretary to the ministry of home security in London.

PARTICIPATION

Mr. Raymond said Canada should play a full part in making peace and in the creation of an institution to maintain peace. He recalled that a year ago one of the Independents, J. S. Roy of Gaspe, had complained that Canada was not represented at the Churchill-Roosevelt conference and now when Canada was to be represented in an international conference the Quebec Independents were opposed.

"We want peace based on justice and on force," said Mr. Raymond who suggested the Canadian delegation use its influence to that end.

Fewer in Smaller Countries.

In particular, he urged it to work for the voting of more power in the secondary and smaller countries and removal of the veto provision in the Dumbarton Oaks draft under which one of the permanent members of the Security Council can block disciplinary action against itself.

Speaking for the Social Credit Party, Rev. E. G. Hansell, of Medicine Hat, proposed an amendment to the main motion which was ruled out of order. He said, however, the group had decided to support the main motion if the House first defeated because it did not want to oppose Canadian participation in the conference.

The Social Credit amendment would have toned down the government motion endorsing "the purposes and principles" of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals and instead the House's agreement that the Canadian delegation work for an international charter to include a declaration that an acceptable charter should ensure full participation of the participating nations. It added a clause disapproving the Bretton Woods monetary stabilization plan.

Other speakers during the day included Hon. R. B. Bennett (C.C.-York-Sunbury), Hon. Ian Mackenzie (C.C.-Vancouver-Centre), Hon. Colin Gibson (Lib.-Hamilton West), Hon. Dr. W. A. Bruce (C.C.-Toronto-Bracondale), T. C. Douglas (L.-Shaffesbury, Weyburn-Carey), J. W. Jones (Lib.-Cape Breton-South), Isabelle Hoy (Ind.-Cgarp), and Arm-

Little Benny's Note Book

Cousin Oscar went to the movies by himself in his corporal's uniform this afternoon, and when I got home from school he was up in the guest room packing all his things in his suitcase as fast as she could pack them.

Being the start of the plot to get rid of Cousin Oscar according to Mr. Maynes's idea that won the $5.10 prize in the contest and me telephoned to pop and he came home early and drove to the station with Cousin Oscar's suitcase, and we were in the living room waiting for the dinner bell to ring for supper and Cousin Oscar came in all excited, saying, I've been cleaned out, I've been robbed, maybe the whole house has been robbed.

By golies then I knowed a dream error all come true, and Cousin Oscar said, What do you mean, a dream? Mose Branch he said, and ma said, Your Uncle Will's he was here telling me about it. He was home and took a nap and dreamed that he had an attack of his old habits of talking in his sleep, and he dreamed that he packed up the four things and took them to the railroad station and checked them there, but he must actually have done it, for land sakes, she said.

I'll soon find out, pop said, and he quick said, Yes sir, here are the baggage checks, and there's a railroad ticket all the way to your home town, he said, and ma said, Goodness gosh, you really do get me in your sleep.

And by golies the train leaves at 7 forty tomorrow morning, pop said. Well, the dye is cast, Oscar, I'll be glad to land you a pair of my pidjamases tonight, and the least I can do under the circumstances is drive you to the station tomorrow, he said, and Cousin Oscar said, Maybe you walked in your sleep and maybe you didn't, but there's one thing there's no maybe about—I can take a hint.

Anyway he had his suspicions, and I said goodbye to him before I went to bed on account of me not liking to get up early.

Belleville Girl Was Contestant In Western U. Beauty Show

MISS GRACE WILKINSON, BELLEVILLE.

Three University of Western Ontario co-eds are finding it hard to settle down to their home days as they look forward to a trip to New York which includes a meeting with John Robert Powers, the man who has started hundreds of models on the road to fame.

The girls, Marilyn Campbell of London, Mary Lee Thourlby of Bad Axe, Mich., are winners of a cover-girl contest which for a time threatened to develop into an inter-campus feud. Students at University of Toronto insisted when the Gazette (the Western newspaper) boasted of the female pulchritude in the University halls.

All 26, the girls were selected by Jennifer Knox and Rune Grouty, London-born actors, and Bill Barrett, London photographer who sponsored the contest.

The trip is expected to take place before the end of May.

A number of the Western co-eds were elected weekly and termed the "Cover Girl of the Week" and by virtue of their selection became eligible for the final selection.

Among those who won this coveted title is Miss Grace Wilkinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. Wilkinson, 173 Church Street. The eighteen year old co-ed is the Irish colleen type with lustrous black hair and blue eyes. She is 5 feet tall and slender. She is a sophomore majoring in modern languages and one of her ambitions after she leaves university was to prepare herself for a secretarial position in Latin America.

The Experts Say

By HELEN HANNIGHAM
Canadian Press Staff Writer

OTTAWA, March 26. (CP)—One for the women and girls who like their figures slimming of the North American mode, Miss Canada, 1941 beauty champion, is a New York model who is 5 feet 7 inches tall and 125 pounds.

Miss Canada is Jeanne Lapointe, outstanding beauty of practice and competition in the Canadian capital. Miss Ottawa girl who has won the championship of Canada is perfect proportioned, a simple rules of health, dieting and beauty underlying food and plenty of exercise.

Thirteen Ann Lapointe's case much for herself and her sister Pierrette, 16, but her mother, Mrs. Clyde Scott, says: "She doesn't pay attention to any strict diet, just well-balanced meals."

Dieting habits differ in child-hood seem to stem, a survey of a group of young women finds. Some indicates. Of this group in question 15 to 20 per cent refused any vegetable other than potatoes and about one-quarter took no vegetables at all. In some cases, up to 35 per cent of the men who did take lettuce failed to eat the cucumber served.

Discussing the results of this survey experts at the Nutrition Division of the Health and Welfare Department point out that vegetables contribute essential vitamins and minerals. Minimum requirements for good health is two servings daily in addition to one of potatoes, with green leafy and yellow varieties included frequently.

Spices add variety to cooking. It should be done with a light hand, however, since a heavy hand masks flavour instead of accenting them. Skilful blending of flavors is an art and a secret blending of spices has made many a famous chef, many good receipes tell for a bouquet of spice—cloves, bay leaf and so forth.

It is wise to follow the manufacturers' directions when using synthetic spices and artificial flavorings, says the Agriculture Department Consumer Section. If directions are not available use sparingly until the amount for best results can be worked out.

Growing parsley and chives on the kitchen window sill instead of the proverbial geranium serves a double purpose—as a spot of beauty in the kitchen and as first aid to the cook.

Both parsley and chives justify themselves on several counts. They are perfect for garnishing, add flavor to food and contribute certain elements to the diet. Parsley also gives a fine flavor to soups, salads and eggs, while chives, mild cousin to the onion, gives a delicate flavor to sauces, omelets, potatoes and other dishes.

Another spice now almost unknown but popular in grandmother's day and deserving of a comeback is dill. Its caraway like flavor when a leaf is tossed in the milk.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Setting For An Easter Day Luncheon

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. I am inviting some relatives and friends to luncheon on Easter Day. Although my menu will be a simple one, I would like to please my guests by making attractively, appropriate for the occasion. Would you be willing to give me some suggestions about the table-setting? I have a lovely light green table cloth . . . should I use this?

C. P.

1. In and on your food items you can easily and delightfully capture many spring colors; sprigs of mint and a cherry or two on the colorful fruit cup for the first course accessories such as rose-bud radishes, slivers of carrots, hearts of celery (scallions, if you dare!) parsley garnishing on the main-dish platter; mint or other colorful jelly with the main dish; creamed soup garnished with thinly-sliced orange; peas and carrots combined; a variety of fresh shades of green in your salad; a pale shade of ice cream, or for the sauce; and a gay pink or yellow frosting on your cake. (And it's sometimes possible to buy them), pastel-shaded crystals of rock candy with the afternoon luncheon coffee.

2. By all means use your green table-cloth . . . a perfect Nature background for the colors used in your setting or service! If possible, have a flower centerpiece; all-white flowers are often used for Easter table-setting; or an artistically-arranged bowl of spring flowers; or fashion an old-fashioned bouquet, small flowers circled around a central rose-bud. Or use one large shallow bowl, or two matching smaller ones, holding floating flowers; for example, white and yellow freesias, pansies, jonquils. At each side of the centerpiece have a dish of bright-colored candles (preferably mints); or at each place have a small container, if possible a tiny little Easter basket, filled with vari-colored candy eggs or mints. And of course use your most colorful china. In so many stuffy ways you can make your Easter table sing its Easter song.

Party For A Mother's Re-Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1. Next month our mother, who has been a widow for quite a few years and who has three married daughters, is to marry a widower with four married children. We have many relatives on both sides of the family. Under these circumstances, it proper or necessary for us to give a dinner, or as has been suggested to us, to have Open House? Our facilities are very limited, both as to space and time.

2. Also is a gift from us in order? If so, what kind of gift?

C. J.

1. Any kind of party, either before the wedding, or directly after the ceremony, would be proper, though not "necessary" if your wishes and convenience make it a difficult occasion for you to plan for. You could, of course, if you wish, give a small, informal reception after the ceremony, limiting the number of guests to only the members of the immediate families.

2. Again a gift isn't strictly "necessary", but it would seem a natural gesture for you and your sisters either to give your mother individual gifts, or perhaps better, to combine on a "joint" gift of some article you would know she would appreciate and find useful for her new home.

What Makes a Glamor Girl, Or What Price Charm?

Dusty Anderson has personality.

By HELEN FOLLETT

SMART CLOTHES, a chic coiffure, the complexion that is enhanced with expensive toiletries, and these are grand to have. They cost money, too much sometimes for career girls with limited incomes. But it is well to keep in mind the fact that much that goes toward the making of charm and attractiveness can be had without the investment of a dime. You think it out of the air. You create it. It is wholly and completely yours, with it you build a personality that is distinctive, sets you apart from girls who are merely pictorial, have appeal only to the eye.

An interesting mind comes from cultivating a love of reading, an appreciation of music and art. This blessing means that one will be a better conversationalist, will never prove dull or tiresome, will never sit all on the defensive when the gabbing is good. One will have something to offer.

The speech and manners of gentle folk give one standing no matter where one may be. They build self-respect, banish shyness and self-consciousness. The kind of woman is a poet; the one who hasn't nice manners just does not belong. She is abhorred by her fellow creatures. Often the ill-mannered woman has the pleasant enough with her own kind, puts on her show of rudeness before those who serve her and cannot answer back.

Cultivation of Charm

It is possible to learn how to be interested in other people, how to make oneself interesting . It is a matter of using the old head, training oneself. Charm does not have to be born in you, any more than the capacity to play the piano, or drive a motor car. You must greatly desire to be interesting, then you must practice, see how pleasant you can deal with your fellow creatures.

Any one with sense will prefer the conscientious, the kind girl who is gay and witty, wise and tactful to that of the mixed flapper crop girl in the world whose head is full of emptiness. Is it not so, my hearties? .

The Marry Go Round

Spring Styles in Romance

There are summer resorts and winter resorts—but no spring resorts. That is because spring is always enchanting wherever you happen to be. Only the right kind of the moon are there.

At this dangerous season, husbands and their friends should be numbered like automobiles, so that each could be identified when stolen —and the wreck recovered.

The styles in spring courtship will be practically the same this year as last year. The man will begin to give a hint that he is lonely and is thinking of marriage. The girl will bat her left to follow it up with a convincing selling-talk.

Most of these endless, hectic spring romances are apt to become lop-sided—with all of the love and all the eggbeating to one side.

Women are not really more suspicious than men. They only seem so, because men never tell them anything, and therefore they have so much more to suspect.

Men are wondering if these wartime working wives will ever go back to the kitchen and be good old-fashioned housewives again. But what the 1st World Warfing-Wife is really hoping for is the return of the good, old-fashioned, home-loving husband who could make the furnace behave with one hand, while he spanked Junior with the other.

The spring marriages will "happen" to a lot of men who think they are girl-proof; and when they look at her, few of them will know just how they got there.

There are many kinds of men. There are many kinds of husbands. There are many kinds of wives. But men are married to women who don't understand them." Especially in spring.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

VITALIZE YOUR COMPLEXION.

Archeologists have found evidences that women have burned the cosmetic art for thousands of years. The urge for personal loveliness was born in the first sex. What a boon the coming of the mirror must have been! Can't you imagine the excitement of the ladies when they gazed upon their reflections?

Long before the time of Cleopatra, the notorious charmer, the girls were dressing their faces, tinting their fingernails, curling their shadows. When modern women play with the latest emollient, tabbing it into the flesh, they know that they are stimulating the vitality of living skin cells. They understand—that there is no more sense to the idea, either—that good looks are not a luxury but a necessity.

The right beauty-quester, if she has an observing eye, will realize the close bond between a healthy skin and appearance. If she loses sleep for a number of nights, there are those shadows under her eyes; the fine lines around the eyes are a little more pronounced.

If she is worried, gives way unnecessarily strain, her countenance has a saggy look. Lip ends, the mouth droops. She gets the cheeks a becoming contour, are down; she loses sparkle and color. There is the important matter of food. Your skin—as well as other body cells, the digestive organs, the nervous system—requires energy-creating vitamins, proteins and mineral salts.

Most of these days, understand the nutritive needs of their children and so prepare a balanced dinner but they aren't always at fussy about their own meals. Busy women grab snacks in the middle of the day. After getting the kids off to school in the morning, and the daddy off to work, they sit down to a cup of coffee and a few crumbs of toast. How can they expect to get through the day's work, with its attendant interruptions and annoyances, without sinking up? To help the bright-eyed look ten years younger than one's age, is a satisfactory beauty belief. It can be done. Take excellent care of your health, apply the helpful cosmetics.

Prisoner of War For A Night

By BOMBARDIER CECIL COOK

(Somewhere in Europe)

The following story is a fiction-al story of a Canadian soldier who, during one of his many night-long hunts for food, might have found himself to be a prisoner of war, so he thought. The same-ness of one day after another could easily happen in real life. The story is written in good style by an airman who has been living in the midst of his material for the past five years. Bdr. Cook lives at 16 St. Paul Street, and has been overseas the past five years.

Jim was hopelessly lost for the first time in his life, he had been driving for an hour without meeting another vehicle or seeing one to enquire the way. He thought of the number of times he had wheeled the big transport from Toronto to Montreal, the thousands of miles he had covered and it seemed him to think of how he had become lost within a few miles of the gun position. But then, of course, it was a different proposition driving the back roads of France at night with the lights. True the moon had been shining when he had started out to go to Headquarters but short clouds had come to blot out the moon and it was as black as black as ink. Not that night driving was anything new to Jim, he had been driving the roads and lanes of England for the past three years; but then he missed to himself if a fellow got lost in 'blighty' it he just jags along he was bound to end up in some familiar place.

Jim should drive on until he came across a farm house, as if was not too late he might find someone about, although his French was not so fluent he could speak enough to enquire as to his whereabouts.

As he drove along the narrow dust-covered road he began to wonder if it was possible to drive through forward lines at night unnoticed, he decided that he should be ready anything for such in case. He automatically checked his rifle and quickly felt around to see that his ammunition was handy. Presently he detected a faint light on the left-hand side of the road, and, true his lorry off the road, switched off the motor, lifted the hood and removed a most necessary piece of the motor and tucked and acquired the habit of wondering off on his own, which, of course, got the driver into a host of trouble.

Deciding that he should use a little caution until he was sure of where he was Jim shouldered his rifle and quickly made cover, and let the road entering a farm which led to a sprawling farm house a few feet from the road, the moon clouds had partly cleared and the outline of the buildings could be faintly seen. He cautiously approached the house and entered through a barn with half the lorry army, which gave him the feel of a ghost of a chance. He tried a few bales of sleep but as tired as he was his eyes refused to close as the strange language decidedly not English, the guttural sounds were unmistakably German. Apparently unaware of his presence the Boche passed within a few feet of him. As he was debating if he should try to get back to his lorry he heard the sound of a sentry pass on the opposite side of the hedge, so that left only the way he had come in, which he doubt he would have trouble getting back out on there was probably doubtlessly more guards patrolling the place. Just as he was about to start back, out of the darkness came the clomp of marching feet, good lord, thought Jim, they have landed in the middle of the whole German army by the wrong of things. By this time the night had filled with lorry noises, the wind was rising, a small thing was so well known to Jim, he thought, himself freed of all the unfortunate incidents.

The place Jim became involved with the enemy so Jim decided to try and make it to the barn, perhaps he could hide out there for the night and then there was a chance the Boche would be gone by the next night in this area. By following the hedge Jim finally reached the barn undetected he was even with the farm house, all the while hearing how many jerry's he could account for when they got him if they discovered him. Jim was just about trying to enter by the main door when he noticed a small door in the back of the barn and almost ran smack into a large haystack in the act. He heard someone approaching the front of the barn so throwing caution to the winds Jim hurriedly climbed the ladder and found a fairly large hole in the centre of the hay mow. Footsteps were quite audible as the German drew below and presently the place began to fill up with soldiers, they were, no doubt, searching for Jim, or so at least.

Jim thought of his plight and weighed his chances of ever getting back to his lorry he was in a barn with half the jerry army, which didn't think of a ghost of a chance. He tried a few bales of sleep but as tired as he was his eyes refused to close as the strange language decidedly not English, the guttural sounds were unmistakably German. Apparently unaware of his presence the Boche passed within a few feet of him. As he was debating if he should try to get back to his lorry he heard the sound of a sentry pass on the opposite side of the hedge, so that left only the way he had come in, which no doubt he would have trouble getting back out on there was probably doubtlessly more guards patrolling the place. Just as he was about to start back, out of the darkness

Red Cross Parcels Life Blood of Prisoners of War

In an eloquent plea to the people of Canada, Squadron Leader Fred Holton, D.F.C., R.C.A.F., Officer Commanding No. 3 Release Centre at Rockcliffe, Ontario, urged that the weekly food parcels being shipped overseas by the Canadian Red Cross to Allied prisoners of war should be kept flowing in as great a volume as possible.

Himself a prisoner of war for a year, his arrival at Rockcliffe and hospitals, and now returned to Canada, Squadron Leader Holton summarized the attitude of thousands of men, behind German barbed wire, when he stated in six words: "Thank God for the Red Cross."

"Perhaps there are some who do not realize just how much the Red Cross parcels of food mean to the boys over there," he said. "I can bet your bottom dollar that on get your bottom dollar that on a lot of our boys wouldn't be alive today if it weren't for the extra food they receive regularly from this great organization.

"I heard some talk about cutting down the number of Red Cross parcels to be sent overseas," he went on. "As one who has been through it, and was fortunate enough to come back, I would say don't. Don't stop for one minute. The parcels mean so much more than you could possibly realize—to the poor devils still there, that there should be no possibility they will ever go short.

"If, by any chance, there does happen to be a surplus of parcels when the war ends and our boys are freed, this Roman said, "the parcels need not be wasted. There are millions who say in desperate need of food. A Red Cross parcel to these people would be the richest gift they could receive. It was to us."

Shot down near Amiens in a Spitfire while on a German bombing mission, Squadron Leader Holton recalled that he lost 30 pounds in the prison's confinement. "It takes a long time to get back to normal," he asserted. "I was a prisoner only a year. What about the lads who have been over there in Prison camps for four and five years. I'll take them off my hat. But if it hadn't themselves up, I wouldn't be here for the Red Cross." I feel sure that they would be beyond any hope of recovery."

Toronto Bandsman Is Acquitted of Manslaughter

Cobourg, March 26 (CP)—Bandsman Frederick Poole of Toronto was acquitted yesterday of a charge of manslaughter in connection with the death on October 26 of Bandsman Herbert Johnson in a Toronto military hospital. Evidence heard during the trial revealed the two Toronto men had been in a fight October 26 at Cobourg Armouries.

Pte. G. Lang testified that the fight was the outcome of an argument started when Poole objected to his practising his cornet and Johnson told Poole to "mind his own business." He said both men fell to the floor during the scuffle and one of them struck a table and bench in the fall.

Later Johnson had to leave the ranks as he was ill. He became worse during the evening and was taken to the Toronto hospital where he died.

Both Pte. Lang and Pte. John Wright testified that Johnson had fallen backwards on the pavement the night prior to the fight when he was returning from a dance at the Armouries.

Crown Attorney Harry Deman told the jury that evidence given Friday by Dr. I. R. Rob of Toronto, made it clear that the fracture of the skull blamed for Johnson's death could equally have been caused by a blow from a fist, but not from a fall on a flat surface such as a sidewalk.

Citizen

A white man and a Negro were driving together over a long, straight road in a remote part of Georgia at 16 miles an hour. "Pull over," said the cop. Then, turning around and following, "First miles back there was a small town with a courthouse. In marched the Negro. Fred Rodell relates in The American Mercury. The sheriff in shirt sleeves grunted and said, "Strangers, aren't you? Forty's the limit here. See the sign?"

A door at the back opened and the county judge ambled in. As he glanced at the white speeder, his eyes suddenly looked puzzled. He said, "you look mighty like a man whose picture hangs back here in my office. Name Black from Alabama. On the Younited States Jourgevene list. What's the charge?"

"Hugo Black," said Hugo Black. "Well," said the judge, "I'm mighty pleased to see you!" "pursing his to the cop, he winked, "I guess he wasn't speeding after all, was he?" And to Black, "Don't you try to put you out."

"We were doing 56," said Black. "What's the usual fine? Down here, you're the judge and I'm a citizen."

Citizen Black paid his $10 and, with his Supreme Court messenger spelling him at the wheel, drove on toward Washington.

Leafs Defeat Canadiens 4-3 In Twelve Mins. of Overtime To Take 3-1 Edge in Series

Toronto Squad Fights From Behind Scoring Match Twice Before Winning

By EDDIE LEE

Toronto, March 26. (CP)—Montreal Canadiens may be the "greatest hockey team in 20 years" as Coach Dick Irvin claims but they'll have to prove it the hard way to Toronto Maple Leafs.

The Habitants trailing Leafs 6-3 in an eight point Stanley Cup semi-final series, face elimination unless they recall successive victories against Leafs at Montreal Thursday, here Saturday and Montreal next Tuesday.

Leafs Tuesday night steamed to their third triumph against the Montrealers, 4-3 victory won on young Gus Bodnar's goal at 1.38 of the overtime session before 13,306 fans.

Montreal Goalie Bill Durnan, who Irvin says is the best goalie in the National Hockey League in twenty years, almost single handed held off Leafs for three periods as the Montreal forces shattered before the Toronto attack.

Canadiens took an early first-period lead on goals by Elmer Lach, 22 seconds after the face-off, and Maurice Richard, who scored two minutes later. They dominated play for the first ten minutes ended.

But Leafs, gradually gathering momentum, unleashed a withering onslaught and tossed 56 pucks at Durnan, compared with 24 handled by Goalie Frank McCool of Leafs. Nick Metz finally slid the puck into the Montreal net at 7.34 of the second period with Durnan lying out of position after stopping Ted Kennedy's shot. Dave Schriner tied it up before the period ended.

Bobby Pilton took advantage of a penalty to Blake Reid to give Montreal a lead in the third period but Pratt tied it up about five minutes later.

The Leaf victory was the first for a home team in the play-offs to date.

LEO DUROCHER HIGH ON TEAM

Bear Mountain, N.Y., March 26—(AP)—Dem Bums of Brooklyn may not win the pennant this year, but they are going to finish in the first division, manager Leo Durocher intimated as the Dodgers wound up their second week of spring training.

While refusing to predict where his team will finish, Leo insisted his club was as good as four other outfits in the National League, "and if battle means anything, we ought to beat them out."

On paper it appears Durocher may have been whistling in the dark, for the Brooklyn situation can well be summed up in one phrase—long on material with 94 players in camp, but short on talent. Nevertheless, Leo declared the Dodgers are greatly improved.

"We have much more punch, at least 30 per cent better pitching and we hope to have an infield that can function ever day," he asserted. "Most serious problem is catching, but with Mickey Owen back and Clyde Sukeforth around, we should not have too much to worry about there."

Toronto, March 26 — (CP)—Followers of Ontario senior hockey invariably seem to get into a discussion as to the age of Doug Runions, Hamilton's centre-ice star. The average guess is that Doug will never see 40 again. But Tommy (Hamilton Spectator) Munro has disclosed the deep, dark secret that Doug is only 33.

When the present season comes to a close, it will mark the completion of 20 years of play in the O.H.A. for the Hamiltonian. Though he was born in Cornwall, he first donned skates and wielded a hockey stick in Campbellford. Later he was seen in the lineup of West Toronto junior.

From the Queen City, Doug jumped to Belleville and then to Brantford where he played a couple of years as an intermediate. At the ripe old age of 20, the call of the north had its allure and Doug went to Sudbury where he stayed long enough to play hockey for a couple of seasons.

Port Colborne was his next stop—for five years. It was there Port Colborne for it was there that he was able to learn the machinist's trade. And it was a choice of being a machinist and playing amateur hockey over accepting an offer to turn pro with Montreal Maroons, Canadiens or Detroit Red Wings. When the depression hit, among other things, the machinists trade, Doug found himself working in Hamilton, and he has been there ever since.

Quit the Game?

"Why should I?" replied Doug. "I feel good and intend to keep going as long as my legs stand up."

In the Soup:

Ab Superstein, 180 pounds of defenceman who turned down a call from Chicago Black Hawks this season because of a shoulder injury, didn't see action in the Alberta junior series because of Edmonton inter-club bickering . . . Mickey Hall of Maple Leafs Athletic Club, he refused to wear that club's colors in the city junior loop.

Edmonton Canadians wanted the swift "Soop", but they were blocked by Maple Leaf officials who said that if Superstein didn't play for their club, he wouldn't play anywhere. The Alberta Hockey Association backed them up and Ab was benched — at home — all winter.

Incidentally:

Vancouver may be able to boast the first hole-in-one of the season. Eddie Trites, former puckster, holed his tee shot on the 125-yard 13th at Fraser View links last week . . . Nell Colvile, former New York Rangers' star, is uncertain whether to return to pro hockey or stay in Ottawa where he has been offered a good post as well as a job to act as playing-coach of Jimmy McCafrey's Ottawa Commandos . . . the series is still in the elimination stages, but western sports writers say they have it on good authority that Moose Jaw Canucks have little to fear in the St. Michael's team.

DETROIT WINGS WIN ON WEIRD GOALOVERBRUINS

Teams Are Now Tied at Two Games Each With Next in Detroit

Boston, March 26 — (CP) — A weird goal by Veteran Harry Oliver, staging with less than three minutes remaining gave Detroit Red Wings a 2-1 victory over Boston Bruins before a capacity crowd of 12,500 here last night, deadlocking their eight-point Stanley Cup semi-final series at 2-2. The teams play the fifth game in Detroit Thursday.

Armstrong, aboard in the winning goal after Hal Jackson lashed a long drive from the boards and wedged between goalie Paul Bibeault's pads. While going down to stop Jackson's shot, Bibeault lost sight of the puck and when it rolled he cleared the Wings' centreman rammed it home.

Detroit had to come from behind before registering the winning marker. Bobby Bauer, with the Bruins the lead at 8:31 when he took a long forward pass from Cowley, sidestepping Earl Seibert and rifled in a 20-foot drive from a sharp angle.

Armstrong set up Seibert for the equalizer in the second period after intercepting a pass in the Detroit zone.

Herb Cain, pivoting the third line in place of Gino Rosina, injured in the first period, scored the Wings into a 2-1 lead just after the mid-point of the middle session.

The Wings put on the pressure from the start of the second and at the five-minute mark Joe Carveth stickhanded through the Boston defence and flicked a puck into the open side of the net to tie the score.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

London, March 26 — (CP) — The eight-day international lawn tennis championships at Wimbledon via the bomb-damaged Wimbledon this week, will be the only tourney in the world-famed grounds since the war began.

Invitations will be sent to many outstanding players now in this country, including Fred Perry, Canadian, Yorkshire's Dan Maskell and Lieut. Colonel Harold Mahony, veteran top-notchers, and Charles Hare, a Royal Tank Regiment sergeant but still a British citizen.

Last summer seven courts, including the Centre Court were in use by members despite damage caused by a German bomb in 1940. One bomb struck the entrance gate and others the Alberta Hockey Association backed them up and Ab was benched — at home — all winter.

Incidentally:

Vancouver may be able to boast the first hole-in-one of the season. Eddie Trites, former puckster, holed his tee shot on the 125-yard 13th at Fraser View links last week . . . Nell Colvile, former New York Rangers' star, is uncertain whether to return to pro hockey or stay in Ottawa where he has been offered a good post as well as a job to act as playing-coach of Jimmy McCafrey's Ottawa Commandos . . . the series is still in the elimination stages, but western sports writers say they have it on good authority that Moose Jaw Canucks have little to fear in the St. Michael's team.

Training Camp Notes

Lafayette, Ind. — Manager Lou Boudreau of Cleveland Indians says he will give outfielder Roy Cullenbine a trial at the third base position left open by Ken Keltner's induction into the Navy.

Bloomington, Ind. — Cincinnati Reds' stock has taken a bullish turn today with the unexpected arrival of Bucky Walters, long a mainstay of their pitching staff. Walters has been engaged in war work in Philadelphia.

Mathematics.

Recently a Canadian editor was in a quandary where extremely fine mathematical operations were being carried on.

"What are your tolerances on this job?" he asked a man at a lathe.

"One fifth-thousandth of an inch," replied a workman.

The figure conveyed little to the editor, for he asked, "How fine is that?"

The workman, too, seemed puzzled. He called to his neighbor on the next machine, "Bill, how many five-thousandths are there in an inch?"

Bill scratched his head. "Gee, I don't know. But there must be millions of them."

Looking Ahead.

There's little doubt but the Belleville Anglers' Club is doing more towards increased tourist influx into this part of Ontario (after the war is over) than any other organization you can throw a stick at. In their restocking of local waters, the Belleville Anglers' Club has completed something concrete for the district to remember by. The Bay of Quinte and Hastings County district will be nothing short of an anglers' paradise in a few short years.

With over 300 on hand at the "Y" Monday night Dr. Van Blaikie chairman of the clubs restocking enterprises, made a surprising but pleasing report. Most of the fish-restocking of local district waters was made by the anglers' club back in 1935 when 15 applications for the replenishment of game fish were completed. Years later, in 1940, the same club completed over ten times as many applications when a total of 155 applications for restocking waters filled, funds. Includes restocking of Speckled and Rainbow Trout, Pickerel and Bass. Meadowvale, Pickerel and Bass at Moscow Pike, Now Dr. Blaikie proposes to include Atlantic Salmon in the next regulation for restocking from the Department of Game and Fish series. For the information of city anglers the entire length of the Bay of Quinte has been completely restocked with lunge and bass as far west as Trenton.

Another project Dr. Blaikie told the angling fraternity has had been guaranteed by the Department of Game and Fisheries and that was the erection of dams in the northern part of Hastings County, which also will materially assist in the propagation of game fish all through the Moira River system. This is a project that has been long talked about by Belleville delegations, but little was ever done about it. Now the anglers have something definite to report on the long-needed erection of dams in the north. Such projects would also keep the water flowing evenly all year around in the Moira, another feature to be considered.

Life of Connie Mack.

G. P. Putnam's Sons, publishers of Connie Mack's latest book, "Connie Mack, Grand Old Man of Baseball," have announced that the book will be put on sale April 7, ten days after the opening of the major league season.

The story takes Connie Mack from the time he was born in a frame cottage in East Brookfield, Mass., during the Civil War, December 22, 1862, through his minor and major league career as a catcher, his early managerial ventures in Pittsburgh and Milwaukee and his interesting and dramatic seasons as manager and later as president-manager of the Philadelphia Athletics.

The making of Mack's great championship teams and the stories behind their dismantlement are told. The book is even more than a baseball chronicle. It is the intimate, human story of a great American, a man who appropriately has been termed "the Patron Saint of Baseball."

Mr. Mack gave full co-operation to the author in writing the story of his life, giving him many of his rich reminiscences. The book runs close to 100,000 words and is profusely illustrated. It will sell for $3.75.

FIFTY ATTEND MEETING TO TALK BASEBALL

Five Teams Already to Face Barrier and More Are Promised

Baseball, the game that brought sport distinction to Belleville in years past, seems to be headed toward the leading sport fans have long hoped for.

Last night at the City Hall five potential teams signified interest in entering a Belleville Senior "B" League with indications that more teams were in the offing. The potential five clubs are Alemite, Browns Bread, Optical Company, Corby AC and Lads AC, and the fathers of the project is the fact the majority of the clubs interested are outgrowths of sponsored junior or junior players.

The largest baseball meeting to greet the game in over a decade was on hand when baseball players and executive men mustering up courage to 50 swelled the city hall council room to forty boys. Baseball is still keen in the minds of both the youth of the city and men desirous of sponsoring the game in Belleville. Following a lengthy discussion of the possibilities of the formation of a city baseball league committees were set up to contact business and industrial business heads in the interest of the game that, in years past, carried the name of Belleville far into the sport realm of Ontario.

Don Lee was named as chairman and Wade Smith secretary and the meeting adjourned until Tuesday, April 3 when other interested baseball supporters are invited to attend a meeting when offices will be elected.

The teams represented at the inaugural meeting included: Alemite by Cord Booth, Browns Bread by Don Reynolds, Optical Company by Ken Elsmore, Corbys A.C. by G. Barrage and Lads by Dr. Jack Empson.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 642
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Some bridge players would rather lose with what they know than win with what you tell them. Where such ignorance is bliss, it seems folly to put them wise. However, they may get to be poor partners. With mixed hands or weak hands, you need only a simple set of rules to guide you all about them. With not more than two tricks, you rarely pass. Do not bid unless you have at least three tricks.

A suit trick is either a high card (queen or king or ace) or a short card (each card short of three in any short suit.) Tricks in no trump are high cards only.

Thus, some of the tricks in a suit response may be short cards. But all the tricks in a no trump response are all assumed to be high cards. Therefore, a responding bid in no trump shows three high tricks.

All bids follow in order of choice in 7-A-N; takeout, assist, no trump. A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. A jump some bigshot says so.

of any kind is forcing to game.

Get acquainted in a deal with a responding hand like this:

♥ 9 6 6 3
♦ 9 8 7 4 2
♣ K 9 4 2

You have three suit tricks; two high cards and a short spade. But you have only two no trump tricks; the two high cards. You have tricks enough for a response in suit, but not in no trump.

If partner opens with one spade or one heart, you have no guilt takeout. Nor have you adequate support for an assist. Nor have you three high cards for a no trump response. So, you should pass.

If partner starts with one diamond or one club, you have no suit takeout. But you have support for an assist. Bid two in partner's suit. You have the three suit tricks for it.

With such a hand, players who respond with one no trump are not correct. And that goes no matter how expert they claim to be.

A wrong is not right just because others do it.

BUFFALO BISONS KEEP IN RACE BY BEATING BARONS

In Other Bracket Hershey Bears Enter Finals by Defeating Capitals

(By The Canadian Press)

Buffalo Bisons remained in the running for the American Hockey League Calder Cup playoffs by downing Cleveland Barons 5-3 at Buffalo.

In the second-place series Hershey Bears earned the right to enter the finals by a 3-2 victory over Indianapolis Capitals, their fourth in five games.

Barons forged into the lead three times in the early stages of the game at Cleveland but each time Bisons knotted the count. Two counters in the third period, while goalie Yves Nadon held Barons scoreless, gave Buffalo the winning margin. Boothman and Paul Mundrick each accounted for two of Bisons' goals as Len Haldenby one. Cleveland scorers were Joe Dunnigan, Jim Trudel and Earl Bartholoma.

At Hershey, Alex Rilson sparked the Bears to victory, slamming in two goals while Art Jackson got a third. Dick Kreckiak and Borden Skinner scored for Capitals.

CHAPTER 4

"I let that pass because I had no more respect for Leach's ability as a newspaperman than I had for his taste. I told him a spot than a re-write man. How he happened to become a gossip writer, I don't know.

"I did think of the servants, but Kitty wouldn't listen to any objections. Victorine's day off was Wednesday and she has seen Mademoiselle Kitty several times. But Madame Jowett wears glasses. If her glasses were knocked off in the evening, there would be no danger of her suspecting anything."

"We both have terrible imaginations; went on Kitty. 'To American ears, our voices sound more alike than they really are.' I answered Mrs. Jowett on the telephone the other day and she mistook me for you. Ann, don't you see it's just because the whole plan is so daring that no one will ever suspect the truth? Boldness is the essence of bluff. And even if somebody does catch you, nothing very dreadful can happen! Some of the old people may get a little shaky, but I'm sure the young ones will think the whole thing a perfect scream. Oh, if only I could be there to watch you!"

"And next to laugh again".

"I couldn't refuse", Ann Claude said, looking calmly from Basil to Stoel. "I'm hoping that I thought it would be rather a lark. And then, I felt I owed Alida and Kitty such a good bit because they made it possible for me to come back to Cannes."

The rest of that night was like a dream. Even the memory of it is as unreal as the memory of a dream.

"Under Victorine's fingers, my face was a plastic clay. She told me there were just five important differences between my face and Kitty's. Her eyes were set further apart, and by a slight protrusion of her cheek bones, while mine were a colder, bluer gray, and closer together. Her nose was a little longer, and her lips a deeper red. Her skin, that Alida called 'ivory', was darker than mine, was actually one shade darker. She used henna on my hair, powder, while I use Rachel No. 1.

"Victorine cut and trimmed my hair and waved it with old-fashioned tongs, because there was no time for a permanent wave. She plucked my eyebrows to the acute angle of Kitty's, my memory was utterly the part of the brows near the nose and ordered them to the temple with a pencil, she made my eyes look as wide apart as Kitty's. She used two shades of face powder and fully twenty shades of red and dark tones made my nose seem as long as Kitty's. She made my eyes greener than they really are by putting a greenish yellow 'eye-shade' on the lids beside them, using the same principle as the Impressionists' 'spectrum palette'. Finally she used two shades of lipstick, one over the other—'foundation and shading' to make my lips seem the same

IF IT'S ABOUT YOUR EYES . . . SEE McFEE

"When she put me into the velvet dress and, I admit, it looked glam, it was Kitty who looked back at me! All the outward signs of Ann Claude had been blotted out in about two hours. Poo. a moment I felt nervous; rather as if Ann Claude had ceased to exist. The dream was a nightmare, a nightmare, I started myself and wondered: 'Am I Kitty Jocelyn? Is the girl in Kitty's bed really Ann Claude? I suppose everybody has times of 'mix-up's theory that each human personality consists of a man and a female part, one 'ana' and 'an anima.' But it had never impressed me until then. I suppose I had a new 'ana'—had I perhaps a new soul as well? It was like Pirandello. Or the Chinese poet who dreamed he was a butterfly, then woke up and began to wonder if he wasn't really a butterfly, just dreaming that he was a man? I supposed I was tired and excited, and scared to death of the scandal Victorine brought me a light supper on a tray which I ate in Kitty's sitting room, and then Aunt Rhoda and I went downstairs and I went to bed again."

"What happened?" asked Basil.

"At the dance? Nothing. Nothing whatever happened. I mean, Jim afterward. . . .

"Well—no one suspected that I was not Kitty—so far as I know, I danced with Kitty's many admirers, but I'm sure he didn't suspect. Mrs. Jowett nodded and smiled when I came downstairs, but I noticed she wasn't wearing her glasses. Victorine had evidently contrived to have them 'mislaid.' Everyone in Cannes, Americans and Philip each, but I'm sure neither of them suspected anything. Victorine's 'cutting-in' system I only used a few moments with each. I danced with Philip Morale several times, but of course he was in love with me. He didn't say anything about it, but I felt sure from the way he smiled that Aunt Rhoda had told him just as she had planned.

"I'm afraid I don't remember anything in orderly sequence. I just remember bits of things. It was my first American dance and I couldn't get over the way the 'stags' huddled together at one end of the room with appraising eyes on the parade of girls. I made valiant efforts to eat indigestible food and drink imported champagne, until I began to feel sickish as well as tired. I wasn't enjoying Kitty's practical joke because I had no one to share it with.

"I remember dancing with one partner at a window and watching some men driving up. With Avenue in a truck with snow overhead. And then I remember the white dawn bleaching the color out of everything, the flowers wilting in the warm air, the dirty dishes being carried out of the supper room, the musicians yawning as they packed their instruments, and sleepy boys and girls eating sausages and scrambled eggs.

"I dragged myself upstairs and found Victorine waiting for me in the hall. She took me to Kitty's suite and brought me a cup of hot chicken broth. Aunt Rhoda came in just as I was dropping off to sleep, I yawned and said, 'Is Kitty all right?' And she answered, 'Perfectly all right,' and then, I fell asleep.

"I didn't wake up till about four o'clock the next afternoon. I got up and took a bath in Kitty's bathroom, then I put on a negligee gown and rang for breakfast. The maid who answered was Victorine.

"'Where's Carter?' I asked. Carter was Kitty's own maid. I had forgotten all about him until then.

Victorine answered, 'Madame let Carter go with ten months wages! And I couldn't get any more out of her. She's Auvergnate and awfully stubborn.

"When she brought breakfast, Aunt Rhoda came, too. I thought she looked older than I had ever seen her. There were new lines at the corners of her mouth and there were shadows around her eyes.

"'How's Kitty?' I asked as I began to eat.

"Aunt Rhoda stared at me a full moment. Then she laughed. 'Really, Kitty, I don't know what you mean. Why do you speak of yourself in the third person?'

I laughed, too. I thought she was joking, for of course, there was no point in keeping up the impersonation before Victorine who was in the secret. I said, 'Well I'm going to see her as soon as I'm dressed.'

"'Her?'" repeated Aunt Rhoda. "'Kitty, of course!'" I answered impatiently. The joke was wearing thin.

Aunt Rhoda said gently, 'I'm afraid you're not feeling well, dear. After all it was a dreadful strain getting up for the party right after when you had such a fever.' Her fingers rested lightly, 'I think it's gone now—no more than a bit more. But it must have left you weak. You'd better spend the day in bed.'

"Victorine cried out, 'Aunt Rhoda, are you mad? Or am I?'

"Aunt Rhoda looked at me a full moment. Then she said, 'I hope you don't mind, but I've telephoned Dr. Bruce. But you have certainly been under a great strain, or you would not have fainted, Ann Claude had fainted.'

"I said quickly, 'I'm not Kitty Jocelyn, I'm Ann Claude.'

"I thought: 'This is another of Kitty's practical jokes, but I don't like this one.'

"I got up and ran into the sitting room, then woke up and dressed. The door into the hall wasn't even shut, and there was no one in the hall that I could see. But I had an odd feeling that I was being watched.

"I raced upstairs to my own room where I had left Kitty the night before. I burst open the door shouting, 'I suppose you think this is funny!'

The room was neat and bare and empty as an unoccupied room in a hotel. There was no sign of Kitty. There was no sign she had been in there. The bed had been stripped of sheets and blankets—there was nothing but a mattress, a bolster and a dust sheet. My trunk was gone. So were my two cases and my fur jacket. My clothes, my toilet articles, my books and papers, even my mother's copy of the 'Peterkin Papers' which I had had down when Victorine called me the night before—all had vanished. One of the suitcases had contained my means of identification—my passport; my French carte d'identite, one expired, one current; my birth certificate and my parents' marriage certificate; their wedding engraved inside; various letters addressed to me. The empty silence of that room was more eloquent than any words I ever heard.

I groped my way to a chair. After about ten minutes I pulled myself together and rang the bell for a maid. It was Hagen, one of the housemaids who sometimes did Kitty's or stupid looking girl. I decided to ask Victorine. I would know by the way she looked at me whether she thought Kitty was that why Carter had been sent away?

"I was badly shaken, but I tried to keep my head.

"Did you see Miss Ann leave the house?' I asked Hagen.

'Oh, yes, Miss Kitty. She left last night about ten o'clock when you were getting ready for the ball.'

'Alone?'

'Yes, Miss.'

'What was she dressed?'

'In that shabby black coat she always wears. Come from Paris, she says, miss, but all I can say is, if that's Paris, give me New York!' And her hatpeg!'

'It went by express this morning. I hope you were asleep, Miss Kitty.'

For an awful moment, I wondered if they could be right. Suppose I really was Kitty Jocelyn?

I had to get dressed, so I went back to Kitty's suite. Sitting on a cushion there was her little dog, Kai Lung. He came forward slowly, tail wagging but still tall, as he always did when Kitty appeared. He sniffed at my bare feet as if I were strange to him. Then he lifted up his muzzle and began to howl. I put on a shoe and threw to my identity. They had got rid of Carter, they had forgotten the dog! I think he saved my reason.

I sat down and tried to think what I could do. I had no money for a lawyer and didn't know any lawyers. It would be hard to make a stranger believe my story. The only person I really knew in New York was a girl who had been at school with me in Passy—Polly Fraser. — knew she ran a bookshop and I had thought of getting a job with her when I left Aunt Rhoda, But I hadn't had time to write her the few weeks since we reached America. I found her name in the telephone book and looked about for Kitty's telephone. It is a habit to keep portable extensions and I soon found that it had been detached and removed. All, that remained was the socket in the baseboard. I ran into the sitting room and tried the door into the hall. This time it was locked. Like a fool I had walked back into a trap.

Ann Claude looked from Sobel, to Basil, to Bellis. Willful eyes were inscrutable. She lighted another cigarette.

"Victorine brought me supper on a tray," she said as she settled back in her chair. "I asked for the morning papers and she sent for them. They all had photographs of Kitty Jocelyn with the captions and lists of guests I had helped Mrs. Jowett prepare. The hoax had been only too successful. It would be almost impossible to prove I—Kitty had not been present at her own coming-out party.

That night Victorine slept on a couch in the sitting-room. I lay awake and heard her four in the morning. Then I slept the sleep of exhaustion until noon.

Victorine insisted I stay in bed. She said I needed a 'rest' and I saw no one else all day long. I had never realized before how enigmatic her face was and I felt that she was stronger than I. She's probably about 45.

On Friday morning when she brought breakfast, Aunt Rhoda came with her.

"You look much better, Kitty, dear." Her calmness was deadly. I couldn't understand how I had ever thought her attractive. Have you feel well enough to get up for dinner? she went on. 'You're planning so much — moping like this. Madame Danlin called yesterday afternoon and asked if I thought you were resting and couldn't be disturbed. She was most unfortunate. This evening we're going to the opera and I'm sure it would do you good if you feel equal to it."

"Of course I said 'Yes'—it was my only chance to escape, I thought. But I was more puzzled than ever.

"Victorine dressed me with even more care than on the night of the dance. There was time for a permanent wave now and she spared no effort. I looked in my mirror—exactly like Kitty's in every swirl and dip. Then I put on a evening dress that was a very startling shade of clear vermilion. Victorine made me put it on. When I was dressed Aunt Rhoda came in and looked me over. Then she said, 'That's perfectly splendid' and went downstairs together.

"Greg greeted me with decorous cordiality and said, 'Good evening, Miss Kitty, if I may make so bold, I'm very glad to see you well again.'

"He could I say except 'Thank you, Greg, I am much better'?

"I had dinner with Aunt Rhoda and Victorine served that I was Miss Jocelyn and that Ann Claude had left the house.

"We dined at home with Iola Sprague, Mrs. Jowett's secretary, because he lives next door in the building that used to be the Jocelyn stables and coach house. The lower floor is a garage now and Aunt Rhoda lets Iola use the upper floor as a studio. During dinner I thought him watching me speculatively and I decided I liked him even less than I did Aunt Rhoda.

"And then I remembered Iola had been in the secret of the original hoax two nights ago. After dinner Aunt Rhoda began to play the piano in the music room. Victorine was near me and I whispered to her, 'Don't you help me get out of this?'

UNDER-SECRETARY FOR AIR MISSING ON WAY TO CANADA

Cmdr. Brabner and Others on Flight in Liberator Bomber

London, March 26 — (Reuters) — Cmdr. Rupert Brabner, under-secretary for Air, is missing from an airliner trip to Canada, Parliament Under-Secretary Thurtle announced in the House of Commons today.

Along with Cmdr. Brabner, 36-year-old Conservative Member of the House of Commons, other senior Air Ministry officials and public servants are missing, Mr. Churchill said.

He said the last contact with the plane was made early Tuesday.

Cmdr. Brabner was to represent the British government at conferences terminating the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan in Canada, which comes to an end March 31.

Cmdr. Brabner, 32, D.S.O., D.S.C., is the youngest member of the British government. He was given his portfolio only a few days ago in succession to Capt. Harold Balfour.

Cmdr. Brabner, Conservative Member of Parliament for Hythe, formerly served in the Fleet Air Arm before four of Britain's greatest aircraft carriers, Courageous, Eagle, Victorious and Indomitable. He commanded a fighting squadron aboard the Eagle during the siege of Malta, and participated in the Battle of Crete and the Allied landings in North Africa.

Cmdr. Brabner was 24 when he won the Distinguished Service Cross.

Among those with him on the flight were Air Vice-Marshal Sir Frank Inverforce, Air Minister for Training; Sir John Abraham, Deputy Undersecretary of the Air Ministry, and R. J. Jones, Air Ministry Director of Public Relations.

Mr. Churchill said the weather for the flight had been favorable and that after-the-war searches were started promptly, but so far without trace of the missing men.

Also in the party was R. Twentyman, British Commissioner in Washington on the Interim Commission of Food and Agriculture of the organization, and of the International Wheat Council.

Mr. Churchill disclosed the group was travelling in a Liberator bomber which he said "I sometimes use when I have made many journeys."

"I cannot think that anything of this kind would have been put in effort have been made, but such journeys cannot be undertaken by us without elements of danger," he added.

Ottawa, March 26 — (CP) — Cmdr. Rupert Brabner, British Under-secretary for Air reported missing on a flight to Canada, was to have represented the British government at the final ceremony at Uplands airport in connection with the closing of the Commonwealth Air Training Plan.

Cmdr. Brabner was scheduled to have taken part in a brief ceremony tomorrow afternoon at the R.C.A.F. training school at nearby Uplands airport.

Montreal, March 26 — (CP) — The aircraft on which Cmdr. Rupert Brabner, British Undersecretary for Air, is reported to be lost to Canada in the famous Montreal-based Liberator "Commando" of the Royal Air Force Ferry Command, it was learned here today.

Hitler and Gang May Flee to Japan

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, March 26 (AP) — A Rumanian diplomat on route home from Tokyo asserted today that Premier Ion Antonescu had told Foreign Minister Heinrich Stumpfel and Reichsleader Martin Bormann that Hitler "almost any time" now that Germany's cause was hopeless.

The diplomat, they've been supplying them for a long time," Antonescu told Stumpfel and former newspaper of the Rumanian embassy staff in Tokyo Constantin Karadja in Moscow.

He said the Japanese did not appear particularly pleased about the prospect of getting Hitler and his gang as neighbors, fearing that it may only make life harder for them than it already is.

Gustavescu, who travelled through Manchuria on his way here, said he had found an unmistakable spirit of defeat prevailing everywhere among the Japanese. Although the press and radio are carrying on as usual, he said, conversations with ordinary people they will win the war. Gustavescu said he also had talked Japanese with whom he had talked—some among the highest circles—who really believed this.

He added emphatically, however, that everyone who thinks the Japanese are going to quit is gravely mistaken.

District Lieut. Governor Visits Kiwanis Club

"Today a service club's direct challenge to every man and woman here to take up the task of rehabilitation of the veterans who will soon be within our gates," said District Lieutenant Governor Fred Moynes of Lindsay in addressing the Belleville Kiwanis Club at their weekly luncheon at the Quinte Hotel, it being the occasion of the official visit of this well known and popular Kiwanian. As an extra treat Fred brought along a quartet composed of himself, Charles Williams, Percy Mitchell, Hilton Mabey and Clifford McPherson as planis and four numbers were given which proved most delightful and entertaining.

Kiwanian Welcomed Home.

George A. Lee, past president of the club, was welcomed home from his trip to Vancouver and Victoria, B.C. on account of his health. He stated he had visited International Headquarters in Chicago and was treated most royally but in all his wanderings he still thought Belleville was the best city in Canada. Those members, who have achieved perfect attendance records were rewarded for their faithfulness by being presented with pins denoting their length of perfect attendance: Harold Bateman, Chairman of Attendance, and the pioneer; J. R. Collins, Frank Domenico, Frank Pollard, Herb Ayre and William Pomfret one year; Dorland Houston, Jack McVeigh, Jack McIntosh, Eddie Shapiro and Jack White, two years; Gordon Barclay, Ernie Pearce, and Bruce Latchaw, three years; Eddie Logan, four years; Cliff Basinger, seven years, and Ross Silver, nine years. The pins were presented by the District Lieutenant Governor, who wished them all many more years in Kiwanis service.

Certificate Awarded.

Also presented to Jack McVeigh, Immediate Past President of the club, by Fred Moynes, was a certificate of appreciation for his work for the club during the past year. Jack thanking the District Lieutenant Governor but stated the award could not have been made if it had not been for the wonderful co-operation given him by every member of the club. Ray Stiver, chairman of the Blood Donor Committee gave a few figures to show that the Belleville Clinic has gone a considerable amount of work since its inception. He stated there would be no clinics on Good Friday and Easter Sunday and that in 1944 there were 7,375 donations.

In the Thursday clinics from November 9 to March 29 of this year there were 560 donations and from January to March of last year there were 2,326 in comparison to 2,561 for the same period in this year. Mr. Stiver explained that the drop this year was due in some respects to the weather but more particularly to the drop of service personnel in this area.

The District Lieutenant Governor was introduced by Past District Lieutenant Governor Cliff Basinger who stated that Fred Moynes had been an active Kiwanian for 18 years and was president of the Lindsay club in 1936. Thanking Cliff for the introduction, Mr. Moynes stated it was a distinct pleasure to visit the Belleville club, one that ranks high in the district. The secretary, Ross Stiver, came in for praise for the excellent reports sent to the district office and more commendable they were always on time. He stated that all members be not merely luncheon Kiwanians but ones that put everything into every job presented for the betterment of the club. He praised the work of service clubs in general and stated they are building better communities and better citizenship." He showed that Kiwanis International was the largest and most energetic service club in existence today and was giving guidance in sports, vocational guidance and juvenile delinquency.

Blamed on Parents.

Speaking on the latter phase, Mr. Moynes thought that perhaps a great deal of juvenile delinquency was caused by parents themselves because they had not given the proper guidance to their children. He showed that out of 22 parents that were before the courts in Lindsay with respect to their children, eighteen did not participate any church for membership and of the children presented only two of 22 attended any Sunday School.

"Revenue rooms are overflowing with the youth of this country," said the speaker, "yet the churches are depleted of membership of the younger groups." The work of the Lorne McDougall presided at the luncheon with Fred Crossgan entertaining the fines and Harold Orchard leading the singing. Bill Mavin was at the piano.

Stalin Tanks, Armored Cars Reach Austrian Frontier

Shatter Defences Of Bratislava Gap In Danube Valley

Gyor, Komarom Captured Making Way to Vienna Easier

London, March 29 —(CP)— The Red army, smashing through the shattered defences of the Bratislava gap in the Danube valley, has reached places along the Austrian frontier, it was reported from Moscow today.

The Big Stalin tanks and armored cars of Marshal Feodor Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukrainian Army, smashing ahead from captured Czorna, hammered at the defences of Frohsdorf, 18 miles southeast of Vienna, St. Johann on the frontier to the northeast and Mooreh (Wiesdorf), near the Danube 21 miles southeast of Bratislava, Moscow broadcasts said.

"Whether the units which fought their way to the frontier planned to remain on Austrian soil, or were executing groups feeling out the strength of the much-heralded fortified zone is not known," said one dispatch.

"There are no indications that any of these tanks and armored cars actually crossed the frontier into Austria."

Pamhegen is 46 miles south of Bratislava and 17 miles west of Czorna. It is just inside the Austrian frontier and 10 miles from the stronghold of Sopron, at the southern end of the Neusiedler See.

Mooreh is 20 miles northwest of captured Gyor.

The fall of Gyor and Komarom on the Danube 20 miles east of Gyor, announced yesterday by Marshal Stalin, shattered the last defences of the Bratislava gap in the Danube valley.

In between the three strongpoints, under attack, tanks, armored cars and cavalry cut behind one group of Germans after another.

Marshal Rodion Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian Army was moving along the southern side of the Danube to outward Bratislava from Gyor in coordination with Tolbukhin.

Soviet bombers pounded the fortified junctions of Windau, Wiesdorf, Parndorf and Bruck, between Lake Neusiedler and the Danube. Bruck is 36 miles south of Vienna and Kleinhoewen's front at Aschatenburg.

It is good tank country and there was a big concentration of Germans hinging ahead in his characteristic style, would surge straight west into the mountains of the Austrian border cities of Oedenburg and Eisenstadt, both important centres of Germa and cut the main communications line out of Bratislava and northeastern Italy.

He was about 35 miles from Graz, 47 Miles to Vienna.

Moscow announced last night the capture of Gyor, important road and the 3rd Ukraine Army of Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky, co-ordinating with Marshal Feodor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukraine Army a drive on the Austrian capital, now only 47 miles distant.

The twin operation blasting the Germans out of northwestern Hungary along a blazing 130-mile front scored one-day gains up to 17 miles and breached the Raba River natural defence line. A 20-mile wedge enveloping the rail junction of Czorna, eight miles beyond the river, and the communications centre of Szarvas, was driven by Malinovsky's troops.

The two armies captured 300 Hungarian cities and communities, while other Red Army forces far to the north occupied the Baltic naval base of Odynia and thrust into the western part of Danzig, port city 10 miles southeast.

These successes reflected the Russian strategy of speeding operations to clean out the last resisting Baltic pockets and the large Soviet force to augment Marshal Gregory K. Zhukov's 1st White Russian Army now poised along the Oder River east of Berlin.

The Germans said Zhukov's forces already had seized the fortress town of Gorlitz, on the west bank of the Oder five miles north of Frankfurt and 87 miles from the German capital. A Moscow dispatch said the Russian supply system was "working all-out to give a spring offensive" on this front.

WRECKED CEBU CITY FALLS TO YANKEE TROOPS

Japanese Chased Into Hills North of City and Harbor Taken Virtually Intact

Manila, March 29 (AP)—United States troops pursued the Japanese into the hills north of Cebu city today, headquarters said, after that Philippines' second largest city of the Philippines was captured in a while two-day drive across the Americans' Cebu Island beachhead on the east coast.

Troops inside the city fought scattered battles along heavily mined streets, but for the most part the enemy was reported to have abandoned well-prepared defences and fled.

The city of 150,000 was badly damaged. A Japanese demolition crews carrying out their "scorched earth" policy set fire to its blasted Manila. The important harbor area, however, was taken virtually intact.

Capture of the city was preceded by an attack by midget submarines on American shipping off the Cebu beachhead, about five miles south of the city, which they had sent up during daylight Monday, forcing all unbeached ships to put to sea where they remained until the next morning.

Liberate Eleven Towns.

The Americans, who have liberated 11 other towns in the island, drove the Japanese northward from Cebu city, while the supporting far eastern air force tore into Japan's line of communication.

A communique said fighting on Leyte Island had started in the central and southern sectors because of the enemy's "great losses which cannot be replaced." Japanese resistance is becoming "disorganized and confused" in Leyte's areas but remains strong in the north around Kaplan and across the valley near the Balesi Pass.

Bombers raiding the China Sea base seven freighters, some of them used as transports, and damaged 16 others.

SPANISH MONOPOLY

At one time Spain claimed the whole world, ranging in the north-north Pacific, and issued a prohibition against other nations trading in those waters.

March Threatens to Set Record For High Temperatures, Early Recording

By EDDIE LEE
(CP Staff Writer)

These are the Spring days could be March, 1918 — not 1945.

Not since the floods of the First Great War started to lift with check of the Ice Age have so many Canadians seen spring as early.

Temperatures from the east coast to the foothills of the Rockies this month skyrocketed to new high touched summer records in some points and brought out spring flowers and migrating birds earlier than for many years. Unless the experts are wrong, spring is here to stay.

Only in the Yukon and parts of the Arctic is it generally does as May 1. So far in the 1945 normal growth his experience and many farmers in the province now are planting spring grain.

Early disappearance of snow, lack of frost in the ground and the warm weather had combined to permit farmers in the province to start work on their land earlier than usual.

Meteorological officials said that temperatures over most districts this month will be an all-time high in the province.

COMMONS PASSES WORLD SECURITY MOTION 202 TO 5

Prime Minister King Brings Debate to Close—House Turns To Domestic Duties

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 29. (CP)— The House of Commons today turned to domestic matters, after nearly seven days of debate on planning for peace in the post-war world and a thumping vote of support for the Canadian delegation at the San Francisco Security Conference.

The second item of business in the House of Commons session, the voting of money appropriations to carry on the government until August, was taken up last night in consideration of further supplementary estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1945. Items totalling $80,154 were approved.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, the only speaker in the World Security debate yesterday, brought it to a close with a grim portrayal of the consequences to Canada, and the world, if another world war should occur and with a warning of the difficulties involved in creating a sound peace organization.

The vote on the government resolution of support for the San Francisco delegation and of the aims of the United Nations conference passed by a vote of 202 to 5. The five dissenters belonged to the Quebec Independent group, but did not include members of the Bloc Populaire.

"If another world war breaks out in 20 years it will be more horrible than this war, which has been more horrible than the last", said Mr. King.

Hope For Effective Agreement

"The barbarisms of the enemy now exceeds those of our enemies a generation ago. In another war cities and towns will be blotted out by restrained savagery, equipped with new and more frightful weapons would spread over the world.

"All should hope, I think, that the San Francisco Conference will result in an effective agreement."

Will Be Surprised If Germany Still Fighting on May 1

London, March 29 — (CP) — In a broadcast from Germany yesterday, Matthew Halton of the CBC said: "I don't see the war on that but it's nearly over. Everybody here would be surprised if the Germans are still fighting on May 1."

Success Near — CHURCHILL

LONDON, March 29 (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill declared today that the "hour of success" is near.

His prediction came in a letter endorsing a Liberal candidate for parliament in a special election to fill a vacancy.

"The endurance of the British people and the steadfast devotion of the fighting services have at last brought us near the hour of success," he wrote.

"Let us now prepare to make sure for the sake of our country, our Empire and civilization that we reap the due and just rewards of victory.

"That and will best be served by maintaining unity of effort and of purpose."

FOOD AND TEXTILES WILL BE SHORT AFTER THE WAR

End of War Will Bring New Problems in Preventing Inflation, Says Annual Report

Ottawa, March 29—(CP)— The end of the war in Europe will bring with it new problems in preventing inflation, and shortages of some supplies—particularly foods and textiles—will continue, Donald Gordon, Price Controller, Canada, said in his annual report tabled in the Commons Wednesday by Finance Minister Ilsley.

Recalling the sharp upward surge of prices after the First Great War, Mr. Gordon said: "In some respects the pressure on prices might be even greater after the present war.

"The board's objective is to remove price control as the cause of feasible moment consistent with prevention of war-generated inflation," Mr. Gordon said. "In doing so it must look towards the gradual relaxation and removal of subsidy payments."

Sharp Fluctuations.

"Reviewing the supply situation, the Board Chairman said in many commodities there had been sharp fluctuations in the quantities of goods available to civilians in 1944 because of changing war requirements. In many instances increases of consumer spending more than offset increased production.

Consumption at least did not increase greatly after the suspension of rationing early last year, but the machinery for meat rationing had been retained in case it was found necessary to put it into operation again.

While over-all food supply was better in 1944 than in 1943 shortages existed during the year in canned fruits and "there were not a number of indications that supplies were becoming more plentiful as the year drew to a close."

Increased shipping and activity, especially in the sale of used cars, also existed during the year.

In a general outline Mr. Gordon said the official cost of living index ceased rising during the year and was a shade lower at the year's end than at the start of 1944. Wholesale prices which had risen considerably in 1944 were practically stable in 1944.

"Despite this encouraging record a critical examination of the past year raised serious questions as to the outlook," Mr. Gordon reported. "The recent condition of comparative stability which was in part the result of good fortune, as, for example, the excellent crop weather, could readily develop into a state of rising price and maladjustment.

"Throughout 1944 rising costs continued to press against the ceiling and purchasing power continued to enlarge. Nevertheless, there was some improvement in civilian supplies during 1944, the prospect changed for the worse as the year drew to a close.

"Moreover, the past year provided some indication of the sort of problems and reactions with which the Board will have to deal when Germany is defeated, and these gave a new emphasis to the difficulties that lie ahead.

KERAMA ISLANDS UNDER INVASION SAYS TOKYO RADIO

Okinawa Undergoes Its Sixth Day of Bombardment by U.S. Ships, Carrier Planes

Guam, March 29 — (AP)—Okinawa underwent its sixth day's bombardment by the United States fleet's largest guns as hundreds of carrier aircraft attacked its remaining strongholds, Admiral Nimitz announced today.

Radio Tokyo held to its report that U. S. troops have landed on the Kerama islands, asserting a fierce fight for the beaches is becoming a spoof American invasion forces on the islands, 15 miles west of Okinawa, which is the coordination point for fleet headquarters of Admiral Nimitz.

Today's incomplete Pacific Fleet tabulation for the past 16-day carrier and battleship offensive reads:

819 aircraft probably destroyed.

Fifty-seven or more ships sunk or damaged, including carriers and a 45,000-ton battleship.

Some Suffer Damage

Nimitz acknowledged "some fleet units" suffered damage "under enemy air attacks" including "artillery fire from Okinawa," but the "larger units" and another ship, and minor damage to several others. None of these ships was reported lost.

Besides the heavy jabbing of the U. S. fleet, upwards of 250 Superfortresses hit Kyushu and Honshu and an unconfirmed Japanese broadcast said other B29s smacked it again Tuesday night.

The Japanese said the Americans landed in the Kerama group near Okinawa Island, principal unit, in the Ryukyu chain, Sunday. One of these reports added that active land fighting had not yet started. Another said savage battles were under way.

Mutiny Reported On Nazi Carrier Against Scuttling

London, March 29. (CP) — The Moscow radio said today in a German-language broadcast that the crew of the German aircraft carrier Graf Zeppelin mutinied at an unidentified Baltic port against scuttling orders.

"The Gestapo seized the crew and ship and sailed them to Kiel, the broadcast added.

Admiral Karl Doenitz, chief of the German Navy, issued orders to scuttle the Graf Zeppelin and other warships in the Baltic ports to scuttle their ships if they could not defend or move them", the Moscow report said.

It indicated mutinies had occurred in other Baltic ports before there were orders to scuttle the Russians.

The broadcast added that Doenitz' order gave authority to those in charge of the ships to scuttle them.

The Graf Zeppelin, 19,200 tons, was built in 1939.

"Despite this encouraging record a critical examination of the past year raised serious questions as to the outlook," Mr. Gordon reported. "The recent condition of comparative stability which was in part the result of good fortune, as, for example, the excellent crop weather, could readily develop into a state of rising price and maladjustment.

Hitler Expected To Make Address

London, March 29 (Reuters)—The Evening Standard's Lisbon correspondent wrote today that Hitler would speak to the German people during the next few days.

He was quoting high-ranking Argentine diplomats reaching Lisbon by plane aboard the exchange ship Drottningholm, who have been in touch with diplomatic sources since their arrival.

These diplomats are certain that the speech will be unusual and say that until now the Germans have been expecting Hitler would set peace first, and thus leave the Allies divided. But now they say they did not lose the war, but were let down by their Allies.

British, American Troops Continue Sweeping Drive Into Heart of Germany

Several Ruhr Cities Fall To Victory-Flushed Armies

By JAMES LONG

Paris, March 29 —(AP)— British and American troops racing today through a wide break in German lines north of the Ruhr were reported menacing Hanover, 145 miles from Berlin, while flushed Allies hit Army shock troops raced to a point 207 miles southwest of the capital.

Duisburg in the Ruhr ran up the white flag.

Fall of Frankfurt-on-the-Main except the northern outskirts was captured by the United States 3rd Army, whose advance troops operating in echelon with the 1st Army moved eastward to within 214 miles of Berlin.

Hamborn, Weisboden, Hanau, Aschaffenburg and the northern half of Mannheim fell to Gen. Eisenhower's victory-flushed armies fighting up to 143 miles deep in Germany.

Three Cities Menaced.

The full extent of the advances in Westphalia was hidden by a security blackout, but Ned Nordness, AP war correspondent, said Muenster, Osnabrueck and Hannover all were threatened by the sweeping gains outflanking the Ruhr to the north. Several defending rivers were crossed easily. Hannover is 112 miles from last publishable British positions on the approaches to Muenster, capital of Westphalia.

Western Canada infantry were fighting against stern German resistance on the Rhine-Herne canal at Emmerich, on the Allied left flank, but the security blackout prevented additional word of Canadian progress.

The nearest 1st Army approach to Berlin was at Amoenburg, 85 miles from the capital, but was 255 from Russian siege lines in the east. The 1st and 3rd armies scored advances of 20 miles or more overnight, capturing the important Lahn river traffic centre of Marburg, without opposition.

The 7th Army, fighting 38 miles east of the Rhine on a solid front with the 3rd and 1st armies, virtually encircled the last defenders of Mannheim by crossing the Neckar river near that chemical centre.

The 7th also crossed the Main south of Aschaffenburg at points east of Schweinheim and Neidernberg.

Exploit Break-Through.

British and American armored battle teams north of the Ruhr in Westphalia exploited the breakthrough so thoroughly that Field Marshal Montgomery imposed strict security silence "because of the regional moves operations." This suggested a momentous victory was being fashioned.

Highlanders of the 3rd Canadian Division were fighting their way into the German Rhine stronghold of Emmerich, which was not expected to be defended as bitterly as recently-fallen towns. On this front have been, according to a dispatch from Douglas Amaron, Canadian Press war correspondent.

(Luxembourg radio today said the Rhine crossing already had fallen to 21st Army group forces.)

Other Canadians had seized Isael, about a mile north of the captured town of Rees.

U. S. 5th Army troops crashed through the Ruhr port of Duisburg a city of 431,000, which the German army had abandoned. The aged and extremely young of the Volkssturm, left behind as defenders, laid down their weapons and quit outright as the Rhine city hung out the White Flag.

One of the U.S. 1st Army's tank columns captured Hohlsteaun, 88 miles southeast of Muenster and 11 west of conquered Marburg. This force was driving north from central Germany, perhaps toward a junction with British 2nd Army forces in the Muenster area in a manoeuvre which might seize the entire Ruhr and its myriad defence forces.

At Amoenburg, Lt.-Gen. Hodges' racing armor was 95 miles southeast of Muenster and 214 from Berlin.

Early Spring May Bring Forest Fire Hazards Month Ahead of Time

By DOUGLAS GREEN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, March 29 — (CP)—Lumbermen, particularly in Northern Ontario — have reason to wish nature hadn't ushered in spring so early.

Foresters, mindful of disastrous fires in the northern Quebec mining belt last year, said today that it is still premature to predict the presence of rainfall the forest fire hazard this year will be no greater than a month earlier than usual, and will involve an early movement of Ranger crews and the protection crews of the timberlands. They urged settlers the world over to exercise caution to clear their properties of anything inflammable and keep a sharp lookout for grass fires.

Not within the recollection of operators have the woods been in their come so rapidly and been so dangerous as they are this year. Operators had not planned to assemble river drives for another month, but with the weather in northern Ontario has forced them to start log drives already.

In the settled sections of Ontario and Quebec excessive snowfall had some effect on long production. Hauling, with soft snow packed, can be a real pressure and the building of roads difficult. Because of the early break-up in March the hauling season has been shorter than usual.

Insufficient snow fell in northern Ontario above the snow belt, and that disappeared with, the thaw which left no bank of snow upon which to draw. No hauling has been done since March 11.

The outside limit "old" Ontario and northern Quebec is considered "not too bad," but in northern Ontario it is regarded as fairly serious. Some pulp and paper companies at the peak of the season have left up to 30 per cent of their logs in the bush. Actual deliveries of pulp, however, are up 20 per cent over 1944.

The weather has affected pulpwood and jackpine in northern Ontario. Hardwood logs either will have been brought out or are so located that they can be harvested during the summer. A few white spruce have been left "high and dry" with their logs in the bush. A number of operators have left a watchtaker to get logs into the water to prevent them from insect infestations.

Difficulties experienced by lumbermen have arisen at a time when the potential United States market for Canadian lumber is greater than the Dominion's total output, Canada's policy remains 4,000,000,000 feet a year, and this year's production is expected to approximate 4,700,000,000 feet.

TRENTON

Two Trenton Boys Arrive Home After Long Service

Trenton, March 20.—Two well known Trenton boys are back from overseas after long periods of service.

Gunner Donald V. Vieau, son of Mrs. A. Vieau, Campbell Street, arrived home Friday after nearly four years' service. Private Vieau was wounded in the invasion of France on D-Day, June 6, 1944, receiving fractures of the left arm and right leg. He enlisted at 18 with the artillery from Kingston. While in England he took a course in signalling. A brother, Private Gordon Vieau, has spent four years with the Manly Pews, returned in the last year. Another brother, Petty Officer Jack, is with the Royal Canadian Navy.

Corporal H. E. Ellis, son of Mr. Fred Ellis, Dundas Street, served for five years overseas, and was twice wounded. He enlisted in 1939 with the Royal Canadian Corps and is now stationed in Sicily and Italy. His wife, the former Mary Lucan and two children, reside on Dundas Street.

Brides Arrive.

Two more war brides, wives of Trenton and district soldiers on active service, arrived in town on Tuesday morning and were met and welcomed by representatives of the local branch of the Red Cross Society. They were Margaret E. Wilson, wife of Trooper C. C. Gibson, who will make her home with her father-in-law, Garfield Gibson, and Evelyn M. Evelyn M. Wentworth, wife of Private W. G. Wentworth, who will reside with her mother-in-law, Mrs. J. Wentworth, R. R. No 6, Trenton.

At the Trenton Rotary Club on Monday night, nominations for the new officers who will serve the twelve months were received, and election will be held at the next meeting.

To succeed President E. L. Fraser, when he concludes his term of office, R. F. McGinnis was chosen unanimous vote. The retiring president-elect automatically becomes vice-president. R. F. Joyce was returned as treasurer of the club, Two nominations were received for secretary, Norman Banfield and Bert Smith, and one will have to be chosen. Furthermore, there are thirteen in the field for the board of directors, with five to be elected.

Speaking on the evening Robert Blakely, talented member of the Lions Club Boys' Band, who won honors at the recent Kiwanis Music Festival in Toronto, was heard in two musical numbers and received hearty applause.

The band numbers were given by Robertians Dr. E. A. McQuade and E. L. Fraser.

Traffic Tied Up.

Highway No. 2 was tied up again on Wednesday for about two hours, from about 9.45 to 4.30 when a large MacFarlane Construction Company truck and steel girders in the top of the bridge.

Unfortunately the mechanic who runs the crane was not on the equipment at the time but only the driver, and the assistance had to be gained of the local Police Department to keep the one lane traffic moving. Eventually the crane was backed up sufficiently to extricate it but in doing so it damaged part of the brace.

Many motorists have been made for an improvement in the bridge which crosses the Trent River at this point and it is definitely hoped this will be one of the first pogo war projects.

Rev. Geo. Quiggin Speaker at Passion Week Services

Special Passion Week services, designed to promote Christian fellowship, worship, the spirit of prayer and stimulate devotion to Jesus Christ, are being held all this week at Victoria Avenue Baptist Church. Rev. George Quiggin, pastor of First Baptist Church, Ottawa, is the special speaker.

Mr. Quiggin's quiet personality and keen exposition of Paul's epistles to the Romans is assuredly a genuine appreciation in the goodly number of Belleville and district friends of the church who are attending.

Started on Monday.

Beginning on Monday night, Mr. Quiggin dealt with the terrible indictment of Paul as recorded in the first chapter of Romans, the culpable ignorance of men who laughed at God and worshipped idols. He spoke the manifestation of God's wrath in human and the sin. Therefore God had found it necessary to give them up to the fruits of their own actions.

Dealing with the second chapter on Tuesday night, the speaker pointed out that Paul was warning the Christians of the day against self-righteousness and the judging of others who do the same things. This indictment applies equally to the religionists of our day, pointed out the speaker.

Speaking in connection with the third chapter of Romans on Romans Mr. Quiggin spoke on Paul's great theme from the text Justification comes through faith by grace, the unmerited favor of God in His Son, and not by works.

A Great Day.

"The day whose comes it will be a great day," said the speaker, when Romans chapter 3 shall no longer cease to roar. But it will not be a real peace because the world will still be at war with God and will still be sin—hatred, greed, suspicion, envy, bitterness, jealousy, of resentment. Will the nations accept God's way of peace? Has it has been fired? If mankind accepted God's peace then Jesus Christ war would be impossible.

Ravages of Fifth Column.

"In our own country we see on all sides the ravages of that fifth column, and Canada's young men makes proof out of the degradation of human sin. Only the blood of this beautiful old city in the fine spring weather, but the blood of the nation's lovely poem, "All's Right With the World." That is true with nature but not with mankind for men have spoiled it all. "But we can have peace in this world by finding fault in Jesus Christ, we have peace with God and His gift of eternal life.

"If we will remind these last words in his letter to the Romans, countless thousands have been converted. Only the power of God through the ages have re-discovered the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the truth of justification by faith.

"This, my friends, is the world, today is not of God's making. This grave judgment is the inevitable consequence of man's own actions. The sooner man realize their desperate plight and turn before helpless God Him, the sooner they will appreciate His boundless grace.

Luckless Troopers Lose to 'Sarges' In Bowling Event

The sergeants of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) are strutting around their armouries these days with an air of justifiable pride. For brothers the squadron sergeants have defeated the officers' mess six nite camp in a tournament held in the building following the annual Dinner. Sergeant-Major Lloyd Now the "sarges" are looking for a challenge from anyone. They challenged the officer squad to a goodly number and Sergeant-Major Thurlbeam is running high and the blokes with the pips are tuning up for the big event.

Life Insurance Funds
Spark the Progress of the Nation

Life insurance dollars are never stacked up, all in one place, doing nothing. Instead, they are vitalizing sparks flowing through the channels of trade, and ready to turn the new wheels which initiative, enterprise and ability provide.

When highways are to be built—or bridges, or harbors, or schools, or hospitals . . . when money is needed to develop our resources, to expand transportation, to launch great industrial projects . . . when municipalities need financing, or a farmer or a householder wants a mortgage . . . then the funds which the people of Canada have placed in life insurance are turned into the power-lines of progress.

The laws of our country properly restrict the types of investment in which policyholders' funds may be placed and state requirements which every such investment must fulfil. These laws are a solid safeguard to policyholders, who are assured, through continuous Government supervision, that life insurance funds are safely as well as usefully employed.

It is good citizenship to own LIFE INSURANCE

German Armies Whipped

Events in the war in Germany are moving with a swiftness which is carrying the fronts forward closer and closer to Berlin, the defence lines of the enemy in the west have been broken and the German armies have been whipped. Supreme Allied Commander Eisenhower says that there may still be tough fighting ahead and that the enemy may be able to form a new front where maintenance may hamper the Allies, but the enemy has been whipped.

On all sides Germany is feeling the extremity of her position with Allied armies on the two main fronts pressing forward inexorably and their joint effort and the collapse of German military power. The commander of the Western Allied forces does not see the possibility of a negotiated unconditional surrender of Germany but what he said he expected to see was unconditional surrender imposed by the united might of the east and western offensives.

The signs indicate disintegration of German military power before the great series of victories which have reached their high point in the results of the crossing of the Rhine at last week. Allied armies are penetrating deeper and deeper into Germany and the Russians are driving with their armies through Hungary towards Austria.

Never in history has such a flood of military power flowed over the German defences and forces as in these last days. Germany which was stronger than she ever was in her previous history and who added to het strength by her inroads on her neighbors for several years after the outbreak of the war has suffered extreme losses. Never has the toll been greater to indicate that the belief that the Allies held that the Germans were being drained of their power and were feeling the result of war was founded on fact. The struggle along the Rhine which dragged on slowly with the swift offensives of late showed the enemy, once so powerful, is defeated and that the long attrition of the war and the blows of the Allies have taken their captive, have told on the enemy's resources as it was anticipated would prove true.

Teamwork is telling and General Eisenhower has drawn attention to this in having so large a share in battering the enemy.

The United Nations and their armies have brought very near by their gigantic victories in Italy and about the Siegfried Line and on the Eastern Front the end of German ability to recover their balance or to strike back. The sequel to the battle west of the Rhine has come more swiftly than was expected so that in the west the crossing of the Rhine has released upon the German armies power much too great for the enemy to face.

Blockbuster . . . Earthquake . . . Now Volcano

The British 22,000-lb. bomb, used for the first time last week, is the most destructive weapon of war yet invented. It is teh times powerful as the Nazi 4,000 mile-an-hour V-2 Rocket and, unlike that weapon of blind destruction, it is highly accurate. If it were not for this accuracy the new bomb would be little value, for it has been designed to destroy difficult pin-point targets, not to cause a wide-spread area of devastation.

The whole purpose of this bomb, latest in the blockbuster - earthquake series of British bombs all designed for some specific job, is to smash targets hitherto regarded as indestructible. Such a target was the massive Bielefeld viaduct in Germany on which the bomb was used for the first time. At least six spans of the viaduct crumpled up as the 22,000 pounders hit it.

Underground factories, U-boat pens and fortifications of unusual strength are other natural targets for the new weapon, the strength of which lies in its combination of penetrating power and explosive force. For months the Americans were held up in their advance towards the Rhine by the famous Roer Dams, and every type of bomb then in use by the R.A.F. was tried out on them but without success. The dams held. Had the 22,000 pounder been in use at that time it might possibly have breached the dams, for it is nearly twice as powerful as its predecessor, the 12,000 pound "earthquake" bomb, that was used to sink the Tirpitz. Without doubt Bomber Command has a list of similar targets, regarded until now as impregnable, on which the new weapon already named 'The Volcano' bomb will be tried.

Experimental trials were carried out with scale models which were dropped from aeroplanes and given wind tunnel tests. One model was actually fired from a gun at a velocity calculated to be the same as that at which it would strike the ground when dropped from an operational height. Then a full-sized case was made and filled with ballast. This was dropped at an experimental station in Britain, and it took eighteen men, working twelve hours a day, nine days to dig it out again. The test verified previous calculation. A real bomb was then made and this was dropped on a small granite island off the British coast. The island was blasted out of existence, and the Ordnance Survey Department's map of that part of the Continent under operational conditions, with full crew, petrol and ammunition aboard, the bomb had to undergo many more modification. A new bomb trolley was designed and a special ballistic tackle manufactured. Even then it took six men half an hour to get the bomb into position in the plane. When the original Lancaster started its bombing career it had an all-up weight of 60,000 lbs. What it weighs now with the 22,000 lb. bomb on board is a secret, but it is certainly the undisputed weight lifting champion of the bomber world.

The new bomb is all-British in concept and development, and the first ones to be used were entirely made in Britain. Now that tests and actual use have proved its worth, some of the casings are being manufactured in America to British specifications. The English Steel Corporation in Sheffield cast the first bomb cases and helped supervise the metallurgical side of the problems encountered. The dangerous work of filling the monsters was done entirely by British labor in both the experimental and production stages. It was done so perfectly that the Americans have decided to fully duplicate the arrangements of the factory did not know they were working on top of a 'Volcano.'

Exact details as to the performance of the new bomb, such as the actual size of the crater it makes and its powers of penetration, must remain secret. Almost certainly it will find its way to the Pacific and there is no question that the Japanese know thick they must build their concrete fortifications or how deep they must bury their underground factories in order to obtain immunity. At the moment the U.S.A.A.F. has no operational bomber adapted to carry any of the bigger British bombs, either in the European theatre or the Pacific. Whether the 'Volcano' is eventually adapted to the Lancaster or by modified B-29's, the news of its existence must be giving the Japs much food for thought.

And the Cigar Lit!

(Letter in London Express)

Surely our best war memorial would be a Statue of Liberty on Dover Cliffs showing Mr. Churchill facing Europe with folded arms, cigar and all, the cigar to be lit at night. And we should make the Germans build it with marble supplied by the Wops.

JUST FOLKS

RICHES

There are two kinds of riches here
For man with strength to earn and own,
Both products of a brave career
By which the worth of him is known.

The first comprises bonds and lands
And coins of silver and of gold,
Mute symbols that he understands
How things are made and bought and sold.

Yet, like the loveliest things of earth,
More fragile is the second kind.
The coined in fleeting hours of mirth
And in an understanding mind.

Its vaults are hearts of folks and friends
Which keep dear, records of the past
Of gentleness which never ends
And love which knows no chilling blast.

And though man gain a fortune great,
And hold it safe throughout his days,
Save friendships gladden his estate,
Despite his money, poor he stays.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 20TH, 1923.

The young people of Bridge Street Methodist Church, presented the three act comedy, "Miss Searles and Company," in the Sunday School rooms at the church last evening and played to a capacity audience. The players were Helen Lattimer, Thos. Reid, Alex. Robertson, Ruth Bond, Malcolm Stewart, Dorothy Diamond, Ethel Wheeler and Ida Enfield. They all played their parts well. Between the acts musical numbers were given by Mrs. Wilson and Mrs. Knapp, who rendered vocal solos; Miss Gertrude Lowe gave a reading and Miss Doris Ventress and Miss Florence Ventress played an instrumental duet. The evening was much enjoyed by the large number present.

There was a large market this morning and the supply of maple syrup was plentiful and all offered for sale sold at 80 cents and 85 cents per gallon; eggs 27 cents per dozen; butter sold at 36 cents per pound; eggs 27 cents per dozen; chickens sold at $2.25 per pair; ducks $1.20 each; potatoes 75 cents per bag.

'Doing All the Fighting'

(Owen Sound Sun-Times)

There is dangerous possibility that the home front may feel complacent, in the years following the end of the First Great War, that "we won the war," many people appear to think that it was so. That appears in an outburst by one Portuguese who represented the Allies in Paris, when the other nations that "it couldn't have been revealed a few weeks ago but it can now be told; the American forces on the western front were only for show fighting."

Perhaps it has happened that when Mr. Porter "shot off his mouth" American forces on the western front, were not actually in the fighting—and certainly not long enough to suit Mr. Porter's impatient headliner—but the remark, to express it politely, was in bad taste. Mr. Porter had conveniently forgotten, apparently, that the Allies' "secret weapon" were a new and bitter fighting in which British, French and Canadian troops had taken an active part in opening the supply from the sea, through the ports on the borders of and into Germany. He had also conveniently forgotten that in 1940 and 1941 Britain, practically alone had fought and defeated the Nazi air force before the United States had "more than completely bogged" becoming an active belligerent. We can say again, without hesitation, that the Portuguese statement was in very bad taste.

American troops did fight well; but so are other Allied soldiers who have taken part in the conflict. All are soldiers of the army that will have been working as a unified force in which every unit has been doing its share towards final victory. It is equally fitting that Generalissimo has publicly gone on record that British sacrifices and the deeds made possible the German successes at Hanigan and Cologne, to let us have the memory of that "We won the war" blather.

Tension Increases as Action Nears

By ERNIE PYLE

In the Western Pacific—(Delayed.)—There is a tenseness about voyages to war has much of the calm and repose of a pleasure cruise in peacetime.

For day after day we sailed in seas that were calm and warm, under benign skies. There was no air of impending danger. True, we had an air patrol in the sky, but it was really a practice patrol, for we were far away from any enemy.

Sailors lay around bare to the shirt. Little bunches of flying fish skimmed the blue water. They nested in dark glassy areas and Pilot took sun baths on the forecastle.

Up on the broad flight deck, clad only in shorts, the chaplain and executive officer were playing deck tennis. And in the afternoon the forward elevator was let down, and officers and men played basketball.

Every night we had movies after supper. It was hardalo keep it in your mind that we were a ship of war, headed for war.

Then ever so gradually the weather changed, as we plowed northward. Yesterday and all the days behind it had been tropically hot. Today was surprisingly and comfortably cool. Tomorrow would be cold. We were nearing the Great Fuuting Ground of Japan.

On the last day you could sense the tightening of tension over the ship. Not by anything big, but by the little things. Our weeks of monotony and waiting were at an end.

The daily briefings of the pilots became more detailed. There were less lighthearted remarks in the ward room. Ortnary ship's rules were changed to battle rules.

What is known as the "extended action" went into effect. Sailors could let down their racks in the daytime, and get a little more rest.

Meal hours, instead of being at 12 and 6 o'clock sharp, were changed to run from 11 to 1, and from 4.30 to 6.30, so that the men who could topde off and dash in for a bite. The captain never left the bridge, either to sit or sleep.

When you came into your cabin, you found your bunk had been made up with a "flash sheet" around it. That is a heavy canvas sheet, to protect you from bomb burns.

Everybody was issued "flash gear." That consists of several items—a tin hard to cover your nose and mouth; lsnigaus goggles for your eyes; and a pair of heavy gloves with a high gauntlet.

All of this is to save your hands and face from the searing, flame-producing blast of a big shell or bomb when it explodes. On some ships the men paint their faces with a certain flash green, making them look like circus clowns, but we didn't go in for that.

On the lower decks, every compartment was provided with gear for use in case of a torpedo shock. Also, it would flood only the compartment where it struck. All the rest of the ship would be sealed off from it.

The ship's hospital was shut off, and the wards set up handsome ill. the many prearranged air stations scattered on higher decks about the ship. They could even perform operations on any one of a dozen temporary spots set up in mess halls or cabins.

Also we broke out cold weather gear for the home-chilling days ahead. An extra blanket was put on our bunks. Blue heavy sweaters came out for the first time. And blue stocking caps, and several kinds of rain capes with a parka hood, a hood that hung down over even as a few peajackets.

And yes, believe it or not, we even had been underwear too. It had never been used before, and good reason, for how long it had been laid up in shipboard stockrooms.

Some of it was unsanitary. Even the suit they got out for the captain, well, they had to wash and dry it hurriedly before giving it to him, because it smelled so badly from mould.

After supper on the night before our strike, we saw the movie "The Spitfire Story." I guess it's very old, but it was good and awfully funny. At least we thought so, for everybody laughed hilariously. When the movie was over, we went to our bunks and tried to sleep.

PERSONAL HEALTH TALKS

THE NATURE OF RHEUMATIC FEVER

Is attributing cr'ic "exposure" to cold "poppycock" or "hooey"?

No one who harbors that notion is likely to give any consideration to the nature of infectious disease, whether spoky or conversational infection.

Cold and wet play no favorites, and shortly who will take exception—that if the rank and file of plain folks' today devoted themselves as zealously to the prevention of respiratory infection in the school, at home, wherever children meet or gather, as they give to the "isms" of bonds and adenoids, a good many children would be saved from being attacked by rheumatic fever.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Mrs. Mansfield Sweet asks:

What is your advice as to the minerals one needs to maintain good health. (H.C.D.)

Answer—If the diet is not too greatly restricted to refined foods, there is little danger of mineral deficiency, except calcium deficiency and in some sections of the country, to iodine deficiency. Send stamped addressed envelope for my booklet "Instructions for Taking an Intelligent Interest in Foods." Foods of your most also the pockets "The Calcium Shortage."

Mrs. Mary Fields asks:

Five year old child wets the bed at night. Cure, if possible. (M.)

Answer—Send stamped envelope and request and I will send you booklet "The Bed-Wetting Habit"—a clipping will not serve as a request.

Mrs. Fields

Three weeks ago, we were, 9, riding out of driveway, was snipped on ankle by stranger dog—bit barely broke skin. Dog not mad. There was no blood. The dog disappeared. . . . Please send my information on how to have hydrophobia. (Mrs. D.D.R.)

Answer—Please send for booklet "Hydrophobia." If he were my boy we'd have forgotten the bite. Forget it, child, forget it. Only irrelevant I'd use in such a case is an immediate application of plain Tincture of iodine, as far out from the wound as possible. Wash your face and then forget it.

SKIMBLE SCAMBLE

There are several interesting parallel facts in the lives of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln. Both were born in Virginia; both served two terms as President with the Presidents who preceded and followed two terms; both became President at the age of 52; both died on the 4th of July, and both are buried on the banks of the Potomac.

It is a curious fact that washington was born in February and died in December, while Lincoln was born in December and died in February.

There are also several interesting parallel facts in the lives of John Adams and Martin Van Buren. Both were elected Vice-President, and both served terms as President; both were candidates for re-election, both were defeated by the same men they themselves defeated when they were candidates; both were born in July, both lived more than twenty years after retiring from the White House.

The annual report of the Office of Indian Affairs says that during the fiscal year, 91,756 American Indians, exclusive of officers, had their full fighting forces and the women's auxiliaries. Indians have over 700 military decorations, including the Croix de Guerre and the Congressional Medal of Honor. Four tribes have won more than one medal, no less than 10 in a man before a period of great danger, and the citation is usually longer, and often visible. That's the way it was at the movie that night.

Except I noticed there were only half as many people at the movie as usual. And not long after it was over, everybody had gone to bed. For they knew there would be no rest tomorrow.

COMMONS PASSES

Canada had more to lose in another war than any other country because of its resources, its climate, its situation between the two Americas and "Above all its industry every effort to do his utmost to see that the conditions did not arise again."

Driving home his point, Mr. King quoted from a letter received from Field Marshal Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, accepting an invitation to visit Canada before or after the Conference. Field Marshal Smuts referred to the "possibilities of success or failure" of the conference.

"If it is a failure," said Mr. King, "God alone knows what will happen to the future of this world."

Mr. King directed sections of his speech pointedly at two parts of the opposition, the Progressive Conservatives and the Quebec Independents.

He appealed to the latter not to vote against the conference resolution and, if necessary, to abstain from voting in order that the world would not get the impression any part of Canada was against participating in international organization for peace. He warned them that if they did not vote for the resolution they would not be expressing the feelings of their own constituents, or of Canada as a whole.

Claims Words Misinterpreted.

He objected to Progressive Conservative speeches on two grounds, that they misinterpreted his own words in attributing to him proposals regarding the organization of military forces for peace maintenance which were not his, but those of the great powers and that they created the impression Canada was not willing to work in harmony with the rest of the British Commonwealth.

Both these impressions, while they could not exist in fact, might mislead standing in Canada, would have a bad effect outside, if stating the adoption of the Dumbarton Oaks proposals would not require Canada to send forces to Middle Canada at the call of the Security Council he had simply stated a fact. Yet the opposition had tried to read into it some bidding back. The Dumbarton Oaks proposals were that such forces should be embodied in later agreements.

Mr. King offered his own personal record and Canada's performance in the war as convincing evidence that Canada was willing to and did co-operate with the rest of the Commonwealth. He challenged any member to say when he himself had not stood with the rest of the Commonwealth. He said:

"There has never been a serious attempt to make the British Commonwealth a single personality in international affairs," said Mr. King. "It has never been done in the League of Nations or its subsidiary agencies nor has it ever been suggested as applying to the inter-governmental bodies created during the present war."

Cannot Go Back on Process.

The Commonwealth members now could not go back on the process by which they had reached nationhood. Yet that was what the opposition was seeking to do in suggesting a "single voice" policy.

"Perhaps my friends do not realize the mistake they are making," said Mr. King. "Everything they have been saying about the British Commonwealth not operating together as one is going to be inimical and harmful to members of the British delegation and all who represent any part of the British Commonwealth at San Francisco".

For the most part, Mr. King's speech was an answer to questions directed at him by members in speeches which followed his introduction of the bill on March 19. In the course of his answers he gave an interpretation on the process by which the projected world organization for peace is to be built.

Canada was not invited to the Dumbarton Oaks talks at which the present proposals originated, he said, because someone had to start the thing and it was better for the great powers to do so since their agreement was essential.

The first but most difficult step was the attainment of complete agreement among the great powers on basic proposals which was done at Dumbarton Oaks and Yalta. The next step was the conference and in the basic proposals was a plan for obtaining the support of as many of the United Nations as could be drawn into the organization. The proposals were framed in such a way as not to make it impossible for other powers to come into the organization at the start.

Proposals Carefully Drafted

"In creating a great organization of this kind", he said, "steps have been taken, one at a time in order to remove grounds, for suspicion. . . "They (the proposals) have been drafted carefully in order to make it possible to bring duly organization into being then, after it is created, the further steps that are necessary will be taken by one in order to ensure the performance of peace".

The San Francisco Conference would not deal with military commitments. That would be dealt with after the Security Council, which would have responsibility for maintenance of peace, came into operation.

Mr. King said he himself would head the Canadian delegation, but he could not accept any office in the conference, such as chairman, if there was any thought of that because of his responsibilities as head of the government. The delegation would be chosen from the representatives of the people in parliament. It was necessary to draw the line somewhere and he felt no mistake could be made in emphasizing the importance of parliament.

The opposition members going would form part of a delegation and would not be associated or advised. Judging from the tenor of the debate, he anticipated no disagreement among them, but if any member of the delegation disagreed with decisions for which the government would have to take responsibility he would be at liberty to make his views known.

Touching a personal note he said it was possible the conference would take place during the early part of the forthcoming Federal election campaign. If he was not in Canada for the whole campaign he hoped the Liberal party would understand that he considered the work of the conference more important and would not conclude he was not interested in the return of the government to office.

No Election Date Set

He could not fix the election date yet. A new factor was the prospective Ontario election and in fixing the date for Federal polling regard would have to be taken of that.

Labor Department items in the further supplementary estimates provided most of the discussion at the night session. Labor Minister Mitchell, answering questioners, said provision would be made as for other years to make sufficient manpower available for harvesting for seeding and harvest.

Those voting against participation in the San Francisco Conference were five Independent members from Quebec — Frederic Dorion, Charlevoix-Saguenay; J. S. Roy, Gaspe; Liguori Lacombe, Laval-Two Mountains; Wilfrid Lacroix, Quebec-Montmorency; and Emmanuel D'Anjou, Rimouski.

They registered their opposition despite the fact that Mr. King, in opening his address, asked that they support participation or abstain from voting as that it could not be broadcast throughout the world that some Members of Parliament believed they could not further a world organization aimed at maintaining the peace.

Plastic Surgery Restores War-Maimed Veterans

Many Canadian servicemen in this war have suffered such terrible facial wounds, head injuries and burns that they thought in the First Great War they would have died, or at best survived to live out their lives in an atmosphere of hopelessness, frustration and semi-solitude. Today, however, thanks to the almost incredible progress of plastic surgery, these men are being returned to civil life so miraculously reconstructed and healed that in most cases a stranger would be hard put to guess the original nature of their wounds. The photographs above illustrate some of the amazing work done by Canadian Army plastic surgeons. Top left: Lieut.-Colonel Stuart Gordon, surgeon-in-charge of the big plastic surgery unit at Christie Street Hospital, Toronto, and adviser in plastic surgery to the Director General of Medical Services, National Defence Headquarters, checks one of the thousand or more color plates, graphs of patients, taken at various stages during their hospitalization. Top right: A surgeon-at Christie illustrates the method by which a patient's arm is used as a vehicle to carry living grafts or "pedicles," of skin from one part of the body to another. By this case a flap or skin has been raised from the patient's stomach and the severed end sewn to his wrist. Later, when it has grown firmly to its new location the other end of the pedicle dangling from the wrist, will be moved down and placed over the patient's upstream kind and the severed end of the pedicle sewn from immediately above a wound on the front of his leg. When the pedicle has adhered to his leg, it will be cut away from the wrist, opened up again and a flap, and turned down over the wound, firmly sewn in place. Centre: Plastic care of a Canadian officer's face, made before and after a plastic surgery operation, illustrate the perfect job made in repairing an upper lip badly mutilated by shrapnel. Lower right: A Canadian tank driver proudly exhibits his "new" hand. Not so long ago it was little more than a bony claw, with all the flesh burned away from the wrist down. Now it is completely "re-upholstered" with healthy skin grafted from his stomach. Lower left: A Canadian infantryman who had a good half of his skull blown away, his left eye blown out and the entire left side of his face crushed in by German shell fragments, looks with amusement at a plastic cast taken of his damaged face shortly after his arrival at Christie. Below is how well he might. Eye plastic surgeons have completely repairing his shattered skull, and working from photographs—built up the entire left side of his face, fitted him with an artificial eye, provided him with upper and lower eye-lids and generally made it impossible for anyone even to guess the terrible extent of the injuries he received on the battlefront.—(Canadian Army Photo.)

The War Today—

Allied Air Power Potent Factor In Cracking Up Hun Machine

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

Field Marshal Montgomery today clamped a news blackout on the Allied northern wing, thereby placing the whole erupting western front under a cloak of intriguing mystery, though one which fortunately is pleasant enough in its implications. All we know is is merely for security reasons and coincidentally dulling of mounting victory over the Germans.

One thing a news blackout can't hide and of course isn't meant to conceal, is that Hitler's military machine and civil administration are in a state of rapid dissolution. They're like a dyke which gradually has been weakening until finally the ravaging waters tear a gap and the whole structure seems to dissolve in the flood.

Many kinds of Allied pressure are responsible for the collapse — the power of the land, the sea, the air, vast resources, moral fortitude and bright morale. However, it's the unity of note that we now are seeing the cumulative effect of the British, Canadian and American bombing, which certainly has been a mighty factor in breaking the enemy.

Advances Fence by Years

It's no exaggeration, I believe, to say that without this giant striking power, we would still be years away instead of just round the corner.

The development and application of Allied air strength has been one of the epics of the war. Only as far back at '42 Anglo-American bombing was just beginning to show potentialities. The world was aroused to possibilities by the first great 1,000-plane raid by the R.A.F. on Cologne, some days' warning. Later it developed that this was staged by Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Harris for the purpose of surprising the Allied world into an understanding of what air power could do.

That first great demonstration was in effect a plea for more bomber strength. In the fall of '42 when I spent much time with both Harris and Gen. Ira Eaker, then head of U.S. bomber forces based in England, they were begging for more planes. Harris had asked virtually everything he could make fly in order to stun the Cologne raid. The Allies were weak in air strength then, and really "got going" in the early two years ago. Under Steady Pounding.

Since the big-time bombing of Germany has been under way there has been a steady and devastating hammering of Hitler's war potential. This naturally has increased as Allied air strength has grown until recently the Allies have had as many as 4,000 planes over Germany on more than one occasion. There have been the heavy bombers which have torn at strategic centres, and the lighter tactical planes that have dealt with communications and the fighting fronts.

The beautiful coloring of the tree foliage in the Fall, was particularly lovely. Winter scenes also proved that Canadians live in a land of which they should be very proud.

Use Dehydrated Apples To Save Both Money and Sugar

Dried apples have gone modern. Up-to-date canning methods have been so successful that dehydrated apples are as much a part of modern menus as the old-fashioned apple rings were in grandmother's day. Dehydrated apples are economical as well as convenient, require no peeling or coring, just soak dehydrated in order to be restored to plump-ness before cooking.

The Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture gives the following pointers in the care and handling of dehydrated apples.

To measure: Pack the measuring cup firmly. One cup equals approximately 8 cups of apples per pound.

To reconstitute: Cover with water and soak for four hours or better still over night in the refrigerator or other cool place. Use about two cups of water to cover one cup of dehydrated apples. If the apples are fresh and very dry they may require more water which may be added while the apples are cooking.

Sweetened apples are "sugar savers". Usually two tablespoons of sugar per cup of dehydrated apples is ample for sauce and one-third cup of sugar for a nine-inch pie.

To store dehydrated apples: Keep in a dry place, preferably in a tin, or glass container with a tight fitting lid. Keep closely covered to prevent the apples from absorbing moisture from the atmosphere and to prevent them from turning dark.

Dehydrated apples may be used in batter and steam puddings, prepared as for fresh.

Apple Sauce

2 cups dehydrated apples
4 cups water
1-2 cup sugar

Add water to apples and soak for 4 hours or over-night in refrigerator or cool place. Bring to boiling point and cook gently about 5 minutes or until apples are soft—adding more water if required. Add sugar and serve as fresh apple sauce or use in other recipes. 4 cups apple sauce, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon OR 1-8 teaspoon nutmeg.

Apple Pie

2 cups dehydrated apples
4 cups water
1-3 cup sugar
1-4 teaspoon cinnamon, mace or nutmeg.
1 teaspoon lemon juice
1 tablespoon butter
(pastry for double-crust, 9-inch, pie)

Add water to apples and soak 4 hours or over-night in refrigerator or cool place. Bring to boiling point and cook gently 5 minutes or until apples are tender, but still retain their shape. Arrange in uncooked pie shell. Combine sugar, spice, lemon juice and dot with butter if desired. Cover with pricked top crust and bake in hot oven, 450F. for 30-35 minutes. Makes 1 nine-inch pie.

BEAUTY By HELEN JAMESON

Consolation for Flat-Head Girls

Tall girls do a lot of moaning because of their extra inches. Girls who have been short-changed in height say they can't like the idea of being only half of a man-sized hug. Well, well Both have their advantages. The tall darling can be stately, the small one can be cute; each according to her figure type.

If the under-sized girl is slender, well-proportioned, there is no sense in giving up the ambition—let her remember Helen Hayes, one of the beloved charmers of the stage, who is only a little more than five feet tall. Her scarcity of inches hasn't interfered with success. And there are others, many of them. The tall girl will be envious of waiting off with the catch of the season. The girl who is above the average in height feels that only a tall girl will be suitable companion for the march to the altar. Men seem to like the long, lean ladies. They have a protective attitude toward them.

Short stature is usually an inheritance. After the age of seventeen or eighteen there's not much to be done about it. Before that a girl can help nature to extend her bones.

Shorty should take up various forms of vigorous exercise, preferably outdoor sports. Casual calesthenics won't do a bit of good; she must use her muscles, work hard. Gym classes offer an opportunity but must not be overlooked. Be passed by. In grade and high school she can make the team and shine. The more a girl romps, the harder she works . . . with her body. Stretched, the more likely she is to keep on growing and developing.

Growth goes on to a greater extent during sleep than during waking hours. The amount of energy activity to wear it down, attends to the matter of building and storing energy for the next day. We suggest that the little girls make it a practice to pile into bed at a decent hour. Mothers who can't get their children to retire before ten o'clock or later, will fail in with that idea. Most children are reasonable. A little cushion between the vertebrae of the spine and the base of the cranial column is stretched high and low. To prevent the shoulders to fall forward it to give these cushions a raw deal. Good posture makes also, that the lungs are kept airwashed, circulating in a chance to breathe, all of which gives a good coloring to the complexion.

Milk, raw vegetables and fruit help bone development. Milk contains calcium, necessary for healthy teeth. A quart a day is not too much for a growing girl. The diet should include cereals, meat, fish, poultry, eggs, green salads.

Skilful Cook Serves Tasty Meals Using Cheaper Meat

A little extra care in preparation and serving can make tougher cuts of meat quite delicious. Besides they add variety to meals, not always easy to get these days.

The home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, state that the price per pound of meat is not always the best guide to economical buying. They also say that cheaper cuts, tougher meat, if cooked longer, and requires more skill in seasoning. When properly prepared, however, they are just as tasty, and every bit as nutritious as the higher priced steaks and roasts.

Tongue belongs to this class of meat and introduces an entirely new flavour and texture into the menu. The price is reasonable and being boneless it is an economical buy. Beef tongue may be purchased either fresh, smoked or pickled.

Boiled Fresh Tongue

1-4 to 5 lb. fresh beef tongue
4 qts. boiling water
1 clove garlic (if desired)
2 stalks celery
1 onion, peeled and sliced
1 carrot
1-4 cup vinegar
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
2 teaspoons salt

Wash tongue well and place in covered saucepan. Add boiling water, garlic, celery, onion, carrot, vinegar, sugar and salt. Cover and simmer for about 3 1-2 to 4 hours, or until a fork pierces the tongue easily. Remove from pot to cool in liquor for at least 1 hour. Remove, take off skin, bone and trim. Slice or cut small bones at root end.

Pickled or smoked tongue is used, soak in cold water for several hours or overnight. Bring to boil and drain. Continue cooking as above, omitting salt.

Glaze for Beef Tongue

1 teaspoon dry mustard
3 tablespoons brown sugar
Few grains cayenne pepper
1-2 teaspoon curry powder
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons vinegar
1-2 cup tomato catsup

Mix together the mustard, sugar, cayenne and curry powder. Blend in the water, vinegar and catsup. Pour over cooked tongue.

Sweetbreads

Sweetbreads do not belong among the cheaper meats, but are always a delicacy. Sweetbreads consist of the thymus gland of the calf, which is divided into two distinct parts. These are sold separately or as a pair.

To Prepare Sweetbreads:

Sweetbreads spoil quickly therefore as soon as delivered remove the sweetbreads from the place in boiling water. Add 1-2 teaspoon salt and 1 or 2 tablespoons vinegar to each quart of water. Simmer gently for 20 minutes, then drain and cover with cold water to whiten and keep flesh firm and white. Remove membrane and tubes. Then broil saute, cream or prepare as desired.

Creamed Sweetbreads

1 lb. sweetbreads
(prepared as above)
2 tablespoons mild-flavoured fat
4 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
Salt and pepper to taste
1 cup fresh cooked mushrooms
Make cream sauce of mild-flavoured fat, flour and milk. Add seasonings. Cook for 2 minutes, stirring continually. Add mushrooms and sweetbreads and serve in patty shells or on toast. Serves 6.

Mental and Spiritual Beauty

Faye Marlowe is as sane sing as she is beautiful.

By HELEN FOLLETT

MANY WOMEN never grow old. They are highly energized, have spirit to spare, brilliancy don't seem to fade. Keeping young keeping interesting, is a matter of nerves, not a matter of years. Some girls in their twenties are older than their mothers because they are bored to death, make no effort to make themselves beautiful mentally and spiritually.

It would be a fine thing if some young ladies who despirate their face with care, who are afraid to spoil their cosmetic mask by lifting an eyebrow, would come out of the coma of sophistication, be a bit more interesting. Beauty isn't entirely external. You have to have animation.

Middle aged woman who fail to find life sestful, have nothing to offer, are weak sisters. There's plenty of helpful work for them to do these days, and being useful brings rewards. Also middle-age doesn't have to tear around, get a hair-do as well as a new hat.

Dashes are far and away the No. 1 flower, which would be encouraging if they didn't cost nearly as much as orchids.

Fashion Flashes

INTERESTING ACCENTS distinguish many of the new suits. As a finishing touch the cardigan necklines, one designer does a black and white checked suit with a short, fitted jacket that has double envelope revers, two of each.

Lacky country-dwellers are going for suede coats. A beauty is in pale cocoa cream, soft suede with deep fringed shawl collar, two pockets, topping the large patch pockets and edging the hem.

Either you like 'em or you don't. We refer to earrings at this writing! A new and beautiful design has a tiny gold and jewelled star attached to the top of the ear lobe with tinsel stars falling loosely on the ear lobe.

Resort reports tell us that this is the season for the return of the simple shirtwaist dress in white or pastels, with the neck neatly finished with tailored bells, some of gold kid with nailhead trim, others of leather and chunky stones. So it looks like a big fashion come late Spring.

Look out for one of the biggest white successes some lapring when the white coat appears all over town. Already the white or off-white coat with creamy white for and lynx collar ruffs is being worn in many sections of the country.

Growing in favor is the print frock for very smart afternoon wear. An all-over black and white print on a pink ground is used for a design in beautifully draped skirt. The very deep oval neckline has a double ruffle of self material and there are double ruffles to finish the long, tight sleeves.

CANADA WILL BE SHORT

Ottawa, March 29 — (CP) — Canadians were warned by Munitions Minister Howe last night that reprivation of when the war in Europe ends, Canada will be short of coal next winter and he appealed to citizens to conserve fuel by letting furnace fires die out as soon as weather permits.

SMUTS REVIEWS SOUTH AFRICAN RACE PROBLEMS

Tells Parliament No Reason Why European Should Not Continue to Remain Racially Pure in the Nation

Cape Town, March 28.—(CP)—A fixed policy to maintain white supremacy was agreed on by all parties in South Africa except those "quite mad," Prime Minister Jan C. Smuts told the nation parliament in a review of the race problem.

Commenting on Opposition demand that Malan's query as to whether "these will eventually still be a white race in South Africa", Mr. Smuts said the fear motive must be eliminated in discussing the problem. Only the 300 years the Europeans in South Africa had remained racially apart from the native also made it possible to know why any sudden change in this attitude would stand now.

The kernel of the whole situation lay in "mixed residential areas, Mr. Smuts said. New residential areas extended, Mr. Smuts said, 100,000 Europeans and 10,000 Indians lived "shoulder to jowl" in Durban alone. The Natal government's adoption of ordinances for separate Indian areas stood as a solution, but some of the ordinances were rejected by the Crewe. The government hoped to introduce legislation this session amending the housing act to enable the legal setting aside of separate residential areas.

Opposition leader Malan said 100,000 non-Europeans in the armed forces would demand equal rights at the end of their service. Ammunition was being allowed free play in the Union and natives were flooding into urban areas. Non-Europeans were penetrating universities, schools and track unions. Mr. Malan said that a non-European front was being formed which was a challenge to the white race.

As a result of an explosion March 9 which destroyed the Voortrekker statue at Pretoria where small arms ammunition was being stored, it was announced the Union's production of small arms ammunition would be substantially curtailed. It is not possible to rebuild the major portion of the factory within a reasonably short period. Approximately 6,000 workers affected by the shutdown have been asked to find other work. They have been placed on part-time pay and have been promised a month's holiday on full pay and free rail transportation to their homes, it was stated.

Thirty-four persons were killed in the blast and 420 injured. A military inquiry found that there was "not the slightest indication of sabotage" in connection with the tragedy.

Crew Initiated Crossing Equator

By WILLIAM STEWART

(CP War Correspondent)

Sydney, Australia, March 29 — (CP Cable)— Elaborate initiation ceremonies have been held when H. M. C. S. Uganda, Canada's first cruiser, crossed the equator recently.

Most of the 900 men in the ship's company had been previously initiated across the waist of the world, although Able Seaman A. Davis of Victoria, B. C., was undergoing his 30 crossings of the Equator.

Lieut.-Cmdr. H. S. Mainguy, Canadian, R. C. was invested with the order of "Sleeping Dragon" and Surg. Lieut. Hugh F. Pullen of Oakville, Ont., became a member of the order of "I didn't know I was sick."

The ceremonies, in which everyone was lathered with soap which was scraped off with a huge razor and squirted in the mouth with a ketchup concoction designed to "kill tropical diseases," provided the men of the Uganda with a break in the monotony of the long voyage to the Pacific via the Panama, the Mediterranean and the Suez Canal.

New Type Bullet Used in Training

With the release recently of details of its new frangible bullet the Army Air Forces Training Command proved conclusively that the Texas border is still the place to learn to fly. In a three-day visit to Laredo and Victoria, flexible and fixed gunnery schools, Lieut.-Gen. Barton K. Yount, head of all training for the Air Forces, showed correspondents the high speed technique in making the new ammunition meet stealthily in favor of American aerial gunners from Berlin to Samboanga.

At Laredo young men from all over the United States—from all over the world, indeed—end their training by going into the air and firing at each other. They fire from the wakils of Fortresses and Liberators at their friends charging in on them in Kingcobras at 300 miles an hour and better, says a New York Times writer.

This complete simulation of battle conditions is made possible by the frangible bullet, plus a special type of duralumin tube with bullet-proof glass protecting the pilot and vital parts of the target plane. Though it pierces ordinary duralumin, one-quarter inch thick, one-four-inch timber joists, or would stop an unprotected man as the extreme range of a Garand rifle or .30-calibre machine gun, the bullet breaks up into powder against and special dural and glass.

New Techniques Developed.

At Victoria and on the near-by Matagorda Peninsula the finer gunnery have developed a technique that lands the equivalent of a light cruiser's broadside in a seventy-five-foot circle by way of the five-inch rockets and bombs they drop from diving or climbing Thunderbolts, Mustangs and Lightnings.

Both kinds of gunners fire at speeds unimaginable to Wyatt Earp, Frank Hamer or Jesse McDonald, the lawyers and sheriff who made Texas history through quickness with a .45. In fact, their guns shoot faster than their eyes. They hit before they see. The explanation is that of a day-and-a-half's work at calculus in a split second.

Instead of bed men biting the dust, the pilots of the target planes calmly reports the hits by radio and a light, simulating the blast of the .37 mm. cannon that would be in the Kingcobra's nose normally. He also marks each shot on hoses in the few whirring seconds of the plane's attack.

This correspondent can testify to the brilliance of the method. For while he did fairly well on the mechanical anti-aircraft picture trainers and on the skeet course in a truck at twenty-five miles an hour, he never did register a hit in two passes that made the attacking plane look bigger than a whole barn as seen from the waist window of a B-17. And for many hours he was firmly convinced that a .37 mm. shell, or something, had passed cleanly through his middle.

Consoled by Commandant.

Col. E. M. Day, commandant at Laredo, consoled him, however.

"That', he said, "is what this combination is designed for. If you'd had a few more hours, you'd have got over the hump fever like most of the boys get the first time. We found that, no matter how well they were trained, they got 'it in combat when the first enemy pursuit ship came zooming in. Now with this bullet and this plane, they get over it right here. And they live to tell the tale of their first combats while Germans and Japs die."

Colonel Day is responsible for what is perhaps the war's greatest euphemism. Describing the methods by which the frangible bullet and other devices still secret are being used to train aerial gunners to handle the remote control and ammunition fire systems of the B-29 Superfortress, the new giant bigger bombers soon to follow it, he said:

"This enables our gunners . . . to shoot down the enemy more confidently."

The frangible bullet is now mounted in .50 calibre machine guns. But the computing sights are so adjusted that the firing effect with the .30 is the same as it would be with the .50.

These sights have reached such perfection, incidentally, that no tracer ammunition is now permitted in the Training Command and little or none of it is in use in the combat areas.

Sights Far More Accurate.

"It never was accurate", General Yount explained, "and the sights are far more so. These boys have to be trained to use its perfection just as subconsciously as they use the perfection of a fine piano or sewing machine."

The frangible bullet is a combination of plastic and speed—Fritz developed at Maj. Cameron Pallister's Armament Laboratories here and Duke, Universities, the Bakelite and Corning Glass laboratories, the research bodies of the Army and Army Air Field and the best brains of the aircraft armament sections of the Air Forces General Staff. All of whom at first declared the project impossible.

Some hits on the special plate produced a slight depression but Major Pallister explained that these were really powdered out and that subsequent hits on such depressions bored less and less effect the plate apparently hardening as it hit. The method of testing the plate is secret.

On the special laminated glass surrounding the cockpit hits made only a slight dent on the outer surface. Tests have shown that it takes twelve hits in precisely the same point, an impossibility in practice, to penetrate the glass, the newspaper says, and therefore the cockpit while their friends blazed away at them with machine guns and Garand rifles from a plane's standing.

Plane Specially Selected.

The Bell Kingcobra was selected as the target plane because of its buried Allison engine, ease and availability of facilities in the Bell plant at Niagara Falls. Construction, nevertheless, was extensive. The usual skin of a Kingcobra is from .036 to .051 inches thick and the machines and mantrices to handle it were useless against the one-eighth to one-quarter gauge plastic stock to protect it against the frangible bullet. Many of the first forms were hammered out by hand.

"I felt like the village blacksmith", said Lieut. Col. Donald S. Russell, who supervised the work, "telling of a two-hour fight he had with a Scottish foreman, a sledge and a file. But we got it out and now we have the machines".

They have enough of them, painted a brilliant yellow, to spread this special combat training to all the flexible gunnery schools in the United States and eventually, for refresher work, to the theatres of operation. They are rapidly justifying the motto over the door or one of the barracks at Laredo down by the Rio O'Grande: "Through these doors walk the shootingest guys in the world." Shmmler and Tojo please note".

Fast-Moving Battle Leaves Newsmen Behind

With the U.S. 1st Army, March 29, (AP)—The war has run off and left the "front line" correspondents.

In the first place, nobody knows just where the front is, and trying to get up forward is far away from advance elements of the 1st Army is giving correspondents a beating worse than they took during the dash across France last summer.

The surging attack has left the Press camp far in the rear, and even a base of operations is almost useless —except for daily briefings by a staff officer in the morning and late afternoon, meals, and a place to sleep.

But no correspondent can get too far away from the censorship and communications centre so the daily problem is to get forward as fast as possible, and then to get back and mail it soon.

Black Market Activities Increased Last Year

Ottawa, March 29 — (CP)—Black Market activities increased in Canada last year, Donald Gordon, Prime Minister's colleague, told the 1944 report, tabled yesterday in the Commons. Cases of profiteering were particularly prevalent in used cars and gasoline.

"Chiefly examples of certain goods, both rationed and unrationed, were sold at prices above ceiling prices on a scale which was wider than in 1943", said Mr. Gordon. "The existence of organized black market operations became apparent and called for intensive investigations, progress and a stringent prosecution policy".

Violations of price ceiling on used cars were curbed by new legislation.

Black Market Tendencies

In Textiles.

"Black market tendencies in textiles were also apparent and investigations centred on 'anonymous middlemen who left no documentary evidence behind them', who, by making scarce goods available to the buyer at higher than price, became unwanted links in the chain of normal distribution and thereby raised consumer prices to illegal levels", Mr. Gordon reported.

"In the field of food rationing there was little evidence of organized bootlegging by consumers. It became apparent that sources other than those which industrial users and quota users of sugar and butter could obtain these commodities without ration documents or increase their quotas by illicit acquisition of ration documents".

The enforcement division of the Prices Board also enforces oil control orders.

Oil Regulation Enforcement

"It was necessary to increase the time spent on enforcement of the oil controller's orders rationing gasoline since the wide-spread evasion by dealers and consumers which existed in 1943 through the use of loose and counterfeit coupons showed no signs of abating during 1944, and in certain districts assumed proportions which indicated that more highly organized methods were being used to distribute and obtain illegal gasoline", the report said.

Prosecutions for violations of Prices Board regulations numbered 1,166 in 1944 compared with 2,665 the previous year. Prosecutions under oil regulations were 3,540 last year as against 1,482 in 1943.

Despite this, experience showed a majority of the public were ready to comply with controls.

Canadian Private's War Gratuity Almost Equals British Field Marshal's

Here is some information which may be of some interest to those of "discharged" Canadian armed services personnel who are not satisfied with their war gratuity.

Believe it or not, according to a British War Gratuity statement issued in the London Overseas Daily Mail, Field Marshal Sir Bernard Montgomery, and all other field marshals of the British Army will receive exactly the English equivalent of $1,175 per month for each month of service in the present war. This is $3.75 in excess of what the Canadian buck private who has seen overseas service gets.

Certainly this is unequal.

And that incomparable fighting man, Mr. Average Canadian back private of the rear rank, will get a "parsimonious" $1 per day per month for each month in the service and this does not include the gratuities in the Territorial Army.

That's it. The poorest paid soldier in the world. Even the "rookie" who mops hop the bloomin' 'Un with the blinkin' bayonet" gets a war gratuity of three pounds, English, for every six months of service. And there are no financial trimmings attached, such as an extra month's pay for overseas service, such as his Canadian pal gets after he has received his "ticket".

Scale of Pay

The scale rises gradually. The lance jack, on the six months basis gets the equivalent of $17; a sergeant $21; staff sergt., $22; WO2, $26.50; WO1 $30; second lieutenant, $37; lieutenant, $45; captain, $50; major, $65; lieut.-colonel, $67; colonel, $75; brigadier, $85; major general, $90; lieut.-general, $95; general, $100; field marshal, $175 per month.

In other words a British buck private after five years in the army

Snow Follows 3 Days' Rain At Winnipeg

Winnipeg, March 29. (CP) — White roofs featured the Winnipeg skyline Wednesday as snow returned following a three day rain spell. Reports on the Western Prairies the weather was clear and moderately warm.

Spring floods continued to plague many rural districts in Manitoba and the Red River at Winnipeg was reported to have risen 11 inches during the last 24 hours.

Heavy icing, causing changing temperatures, interrupted telephone and telegraph communication in greater Winnipeg area and northeastern Manitoba Wednesday night.

NEWS BLACKOUT IMPOSED ON CANADIAN FRONT

No Mention Can be Made of Canadian Advances Beyond Enemies Soil

By NORA HENDRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians East of the Rhine, March 29 —(CP Cable)— The Reich's Rhine line defenses, faulty in street fighting in Southern Holland, crumbled today while the Winnipeg Rifles advanced north of Emmerich near Hetteren to approach Netterden, three miles northeast of the Rhine bank stronghold.

Emmerich was found to be strongly held by German infantry recently transferred from northern Holland.

(The Luxembourg radio reported that Emmerich was captured.)

As Hetteren fell, Canadians in the key town on the Allied left flank, a force of armor, artillery, backed by Canadian artillery and tanks, struck out in an attack steadily gaining momentum.

But the full extent of the Canadian progress was masked by a security blackout similar to that imposed last August during the breakout eastwards from Falaise and the Trun gap in Normandy when Canadian columns ran wild across France.

The blackout was expected to remain in effect for several days, barring specific mention of Canadian advances.

Through Sixties Area.

Working along the railway line leading to the centre of Emmerich, the Regina Rifles went through the station area and the marshalling yards, and late this morning were penetrating the main built-up area along the Rhine.

Some men of the Canadian Scottish Regiment, of Victoria, B.C., were with them and tanks of the Sherbrooke Fusiliers were giving support fire.

Several other Canadian regiments were lined up on the west bank of the Rhine opposite Emmerich and during the night they fired thousands of rounds of shells interspersed with bursts of machine-gun fire into the town in what was called a "pepper-pot" shoot.

The Germans in Emmerich apparently have been told to stay put and hold out to the end to prevent the Canadians from breaking away on good roads fanning out north and northwest from the town.

Enemy guns are placed to the north. This artillery fire along with machine-gun fire and sniping in the town itself makes the Canadian advance difficult and necessarily slow.

Stepping on Gas Dear Pastime

It may have been the fine spring weather that prompted the urge to "step on the gas", but such pastime proved costly for 10 less three motorists paid fines for speeding, when appeared before Magistrate T. Y. Wills today. All the above charges were preferred under the War Measures Act and saw heavy fines imposed. Several other traffic cases were also heard in today's Non-Master police court.

Norman Smith, Toronto, was assessed $40.00 and costs after being convicted of speeding. Traffic Officer R. Caldwell told the court Smith was "roaring on it" along Highway No. 2 east of Belleville at a 75 miles per hour clip. Harry Allore, also of Toronto and FO. N. Copping of Desmanville, were anyone handed driving at an alleged speed of 60 miles per hour with the result each was assessed $25.00 including costs. All paid their fines.

For driving a motor vehicle with defective brake it cost Donald Leslie of Trenton, four months and Mrs. Riby Stacey, Trenton, paid two dollars and costs for permitting defective brakes on motor which was equipped with improper lights. Thos. Corbin, R.R. No. 3 Belleville, permitted his son, who was home on leave, from Eastern Canada to drive his car, when the son only had a Newfoundland driver's permit. The father paid ten and costs today. Howard Cooney of Stirling paid five dollars and costs before court was opened admitting to a charge of failing to notify the Department of the sale of a motor vehicle. Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan pointed out the minimum fine in such cases was ten dollars, but Cooney still had a comfortable majority. Magistrate Wills decreed.

SWISS GUARD REINFORCED

Bern, Switzerland, March 29 — (CP)— The Swiss army guard was reinforced yesterday to prevent re-treating Germans troops from rushing into this neutral country.

Many Officers Mentioned in Dispatches

Ottawa, March 29 — (CP)—Brig. Churchill Mann, DSO, Toronto, Gen. Andy Chief of Staff, Toronto, are 217 officers and 250 other ranks of the Canadian Army recently mentioned in dispatches, Defence Headquarters announced last night.

The list included the names of 16 officers who have already been listed in casualties, but these, like Padre, Capt. Rev. Thomas Edmund Moriarty, St. Portland, Ont.

Also in the list were 13 other ranks who have been since reported killed or missing. No citations were given and the date and place of the actions were not identified.

Others in the list included: Maj. Gen. Albert P. Malhaes, 36, Toronto, overseas divisional commander and son of the Ontario Lieutenant-Governor; Col. Rev. Maurice Legendre Roy, Quebec, son of Hon. Ulysse Roy, K.C., and Capt. Jaff Mickin, 30, former Winnipeg Blue Bomber football star, listed under the key town on the Allied left flank, a force of armor, artillery, backed by Canadian artillery and tanks, struck out in an attack steadily gaining momentum.

But the full extent of the Canadian progress was masked by a security blackout similar to that imposed last August during the breakout eastwards from Falaise and the Trun gap in Normandy when Canadian columns ran wild across France.

The blackout was expected to remain in effect for several days, barring specific mention of Canadian advances.

Through Sixties Area.

Working along the railway line leading to the centre of Emmerich, the Regina Rifles went through the station area and the marshalling yards, and late this morning were penetrating the main built-up area along the Rhine.

Some men of the Canadian Scottish Regiment, of Victoria, B.C., were with them and tanks of the Sherbrooke Fusiliers were giving support fire.

Several other Canadian regiments were lined up on the west bank of the Rhine opposite Emmerich and during the night they fired thousands of rounds of shells interspersed with bursts of machine-gun fire into the town in what was called a "pepper-pot" shoot.

The Germans in Emmerich apparently have been told to stay put and hold out to the end to prevent the Canadians from breaking away on good roads fanning out north and northwest from the town.

Enemy guns are placed to the north. This artillery fire along with machine-gun fire and sniping in the town itself makes the Canadian advance difficult and necessarily slow.

Hun Civilians Try to Hurt British Troops, Officer Cites Tricks

— By CHARLES LYNCH

With the British 2nd Army, Mar. 29 — (Reuters) — German civilians are doing all they can to hurt the British troops, officers report, and Commandos ordered told of some of the tricks these civilians are up to.

They are having poisoned food stores behind in their cellars, with poisoned chocolates and candies for our troops to find them.

They have left behind explosive charges and have even disguised dead rats, stuffing them with explosives and leaving them on the roads to blow up our vehicles.

In good Rhine wine this colonel drinks! "Real one to the civilians in this true German country."

Never before have I seen British troops so alert.

For the first time since D-Day our conducting officer sat in the front seat of our jeep with his pistol drawn.

"These are the new kind of Germans we are meeting now and nobody is taking chances."

POLICE COURT

In the first case of its kind heard in a local police court since the outbreak of war, R. K. Jackson, Deseronto restaurant keeper, was fined $50 and costs by Magistrate T. Y. Wills here today after pleading guilty to a charge of selling butter illegally, contrary to the regulations of the War Time Prices and Trade Board.

The constable appeared as special prosecutor and after accepting a plea of guilty informed the court that 25 pounds of butter had been confiscated from Mr. Jackson after it was admitted the butter had been illegally acquired. "This has the appearance of a black market," commented Magistrate Wills as he imposed the $50 fine with costs added.

A subsequent hearing of the charge of possession of liquor in quantity is slated for next week's court.

Fred Harrington, Leaside, pleaded guilty by letter to a breach of the Ontario Temperance Regulations and was fined $25 and costs. W. D. LaFrance, of the Board, told the court Harrington had phoned for additional motorcars, besides his own, using fictitious names. He gave him three "AA" gasoline ration books, pointed out the witness. The fine was the minimum as it was an initial charge.

Observed in court Pearl Vandevoort of Trenton, paid $100 and costs after admitting a charge of having liquor not acquired on her individual permit, while as a sequel to this charge Henry Allore, Toronto, paid ten and costs after being convicted of the illegal possession of liquor.

Three Indians from the Tyendinaga Reserve were convicted of being found in possession of intoxicants while on the Reserve with the result each was assessed fines of ten and costs. Cpl. Wm. Beatty preferred the charges.

Magistrate Wills will preside at Police Court in Kingston this afternoon.

Edinburgh —(CP)— The Earl of Balfour, Scottish controller for the Ministry of Food and answer told miners at Lingerwood Colliery that "those who strike without taking any attempt to use constitutional methods for settling their differences are letting their country down, as well as their trade union, and bring odium on the miners as a class."

Earliest Opening of Navigation In History Expected on Bay, 'Cement Carrier' to Arrive Monday

With the last of the ice in the Bay of Quinte reported practically consolidated one week ago, expectations of the earliest opening of navigation in the history of the waterway by those interested in the movement of boats through the bay now seem to be more than justified. The ice is nothing to prevent the opening of navigation immediately, but the first boat will not go down the bay until over the weekend.

Superintendent of Canada Cement Company plant at Point Anne, Mr. J. M. Legate on Wednesday stated the "Cement Carrier" was expected to leave the dock loaded with cement for Toronto on Monday. This boat usually opens navigation in the Bay of Quinte, but not until approximately the 15th of April.

Officials of gasoline company who have marine storage tanks at the local waterfront stated they had no indication of when the first tankers would arrive with supplies. Since the outbreak of war notification of the boat movements on the lakes is by code.

Coal merchants officials stated no effort was being made to make appreciably early delivery as stocks of the type of coal ordinarily brought to Belleville by boat are still in good supply.

Gold Ring May be Link to Identify Unknown Soldier

London, March 29 — (CP)—Initials on a worn gold ring are the clues by which records branch of the Canadian Army hopes to link a name with the body of an unknown soldier who died in action in Italy.

The soldier, lacking identity disc and distinguishing marks of rank and unit — was buried sometime before Oct. 3, 1944, at Cortona Ridge, Italy.

The ring taken from his hand is a signet. On its squaring face it bears a scroll across the upper left-hand corner, with the initials O.L.M slightly below the scroll and to the right. The C is at a lower level than the L and M. Its shape is more pear-ing through the upright of the L.

Inside the band is engraved with an M, and following it, the letters J.H.W.

Opposite these are the words "gold silver lined."

The baffling thing is that neither British nor Canadian records show any soldier whose name coincides with either set of initials as killed, died of wounds or missing.

It is considered that the ring may have been a keepsake given the soldier by a relative or friend. He may have been British or Canadian. Troops of the Cape Breton Highlanders, supported by some from the 8th Princess Louise New Brunswick Hussars and the British Columbia Dragoons fought in the area at the time the man became a casualty. They were relieved by British troops. A number of Cape Breton Highlanders lie in the cemetery there.

If the ring's initials are merely those of an acquaintance, it is possible that the dead soldier has been reported as a casualty — perhaps as "missing, believed killed" — but already in records filed, and that his family has been informed. But there was nothing connected with the body by which identification will not know until the ring has been tied to the name of the person who wore it.

The ring has been photographed and every effort is being made to trace it back to the original owner.

First News Will Be From Eisenhower When Hostilities End

Washington, March 29 — (AP)— War Secretary Stimson indicated today that Eisenhower will give out the first news on the cessation of hostilities in Europe.

In reply to a news-conference query over the department arrangements for handling the announcement, Mr. Stimson said it will be prepared in "further supplemental information to that which emanates from the theatre."

Highlights King's Speech

Ottawa, March 29 (CP)—Highlights of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's speech in the Commons:

Canada was not attempting to draw away from the British Commonwealth.

Canada and other members of the Commonwealth were agreed the Commonwealth could not speak as an entity in any world organization.

Opposition members in the Canadian delegation would go to the San Francisco Conference as full members and not as associate members.

Field Marshal Smuts will visit Canada before or after the Security Conference.

Date of the forthcoming Dominion-Provincial Election will depend to some extent on the time chosen for the Ontario Election.

There was a possibility the General Election campaign might get under way before the San Francisco Conference was finished.

Proposals for the organization of an international security body dealing with education were expected to be made shortly.

Progressive Conservative members "always felt it necessary to bolster Canada's war effort".

Canada has made no proposal as to the use of force by the Security organization.

In traditional studio style the whole show was kept going at a rapid pace by the two radio announcers who divided the show and also acted as masters of ceremonies. Telephone requests for special numbers to be played or sung by artists were read out over the air by announcers.

Proceeds of the afternoon and evening are to go for the Kinsmen club's two war charities, the "Milk For British Funds" and the "Red Feather" Arrangements for the show were made by a special Kinsmen Club committee headed by Bill Dennis.

DETROIT WINGS NOW SITTING IN DRIVER'S SEAT

Syd Howe, Versatile Centre, Out of Four Games, Will be In Lineup

Detroit, Mich., March 29—(CP)—Back on the home ice after evening their first round Stanley Cup series by a pair of 3-2 victories over Boston, Detroit Red Wings are confident of continuing their drive to cup finals in tonight's game with the Bruins here.

Syd Howe, versatile high-scoring centre of the Wings' No. 1 line who was injured in the second game of Bruins series and kept out of the playoff contests at Boston, was reported ready to rejoin his mates tonight.

Bruins were without the services of Olno Rosinni who was injured in Tuesday's game at Boston. Bruins' manager Art Ross planned to play Ross Kropp, 190-pound forward from Edmonton, Alta., in Rosinni's place.

After tonight's contest here, the teams return to Boston for the sixth game, with succeeding games, if needed, to be played here.

Detroit hockey fans record as good news the showing of Toronto's Maple Leafs, who had a 2-1 edge over the champion Montreal Canadiens in their playoff series. Should the Red Wings gain the cup finals, their opponents would be Toronto, though play in the Leafs whom they beat 8 times during the regular season. Were the Canadiens from whom the Wings were able to salvage only one victory.

(By The Canadian Press)

In the event the U.S. racing ban continues during the coming summer, owners of three-year-old entries for the Preakness will receive a disbursement of nomination fees although the feature will not be held, it was announced yesterday by the Maryland Jockey Club at Baltimore. With 81 horses eligible, the accumulation for the 31 owners now stands at $12,176 which is made up of the $10 registration fee for foals in 1942, a $25 installment in 1944 and a further $100 contribution last January. The Pimlico Club announced it was going ahead with plans for the $50,000 Preakness, however, in the event it would be possible to maintain continuity of the event. Otherwise there would be a refund of entry money next fall.

Manager Leo Durocher of Brooklyn Dodgers disclosed yesterday that a 17-year-old Rookie shortstop, Tommy Brown, formerly of the Newport News, Va., farm team, "is the only infielder sure of his berth" as the team started at the Bear Mountain, N.Y. Training Camp. Arky Vaughan, Clyde Sukeforth, former manager of Montreal Royals, would do the bulk of the catching this season.

Western Counties Baseball Association will have a promising four-club intercircuit league this season, it was announced at Strathroy last night. Delegates from Ingersoll, Strathroy, Forest, Watford and the Thamesford-Arkona combine.

The annual convention of the Ontario Baseball Association is scheduled to be held April 20 and 21 in Toronto.

Toronto, March 29 — (CP) — The sports horseman's plan to curry favor with Ottawa fans, although The other day, the Provincial Legislature's private bills committee killed a proposed bill to incorporate the Prairie Agricultural Fair.

The Association had been formed by horsemen in the provinces with the idea of sharing some of the handsome business done by bookmakers. Their plan was to set up branch offices — on the pari-mutuel style — in Winnipeg, Regina and Calgary during the time that race meetings were going on in these cities.

But they never got a chance to function, for the bill of incorporation was swept by the wayside — and hasn't been seen since. Judging by the fact that the public and press barely commented on the bill's premature death.

Now illegal wagering will carry on as strongly as ever in Alberta — much to the disgust of horsemen — and the provincial coffers have been done out of a handsome sum yearly from revenue that would have been derived through the extra pari-mutuel betting.

Disappointing Act!

A couple of licensed exhibitions of wrestling at Maple Leaf Gardens last-score the other day when someone shouted a taking aside, "there's that non-forgotten National-Lacrosse Union."

Among the hot-stovers was none other than Charlie Querrie, renowned as the first manager and organizer of the Toronto Tecumseh in the N.L.U. Charlie was also the original and first "boss" of the Ted Solman Trophy, emblematic of the N.L.U. title. Charlie drew a big hand.

It seems that somewhere near the end of the 1914-18 War, Querrie went the long championship and "took" Charlie to jail for the night to pay to Cornwall for the team budget. Charlie said he went to the place in question when the city was stored and asked that it be shipped to Cornwall immediately.

"When they opened the box at Cornwall," Charlie said, "there was nothing in it. I got blamed for everything — including pawning the trophy."

"As a matter of fact, we still don't know where it is."

SUDBURY FROOD FORCED SEVENTH GAME IN FINALS

Down Hamilton Majors 3-1 With Water Covering Ice Surface

(By The Canadian Press)

Sudbury, Frood squared the Provincial Senior Hockey playoffs and forced a seventh game in the series by downing Hamilton 3 to 1 in a surprise victory at Hamilton last night. The crucial fixture if scheduled to be played in Hamilton tomorrow night.

With half an inch of water covering the playing surface, the game was held up for drifting for a couple of periods. The first period was scoreless but the Miners went into the lead at 5.27 of the middle frame thanks to a rush by Cloutbier who converted A. Leduc's pass. The score was no more scoring until the final period when the Northerners outscored the Flamboro-Burlington Binning getting the lone counter for Hamilton.

W. Jenkins and Lalki were responsible for the other two Sudbury Aces in the game Jenkins which saw only three penalties.

Penalties Evidenced

St. Michael's captured the All-Ontario Junior championship in three games at Broadway when students last night outclassed Forest Hill Juniors 4 to 1 on Toronto Ice, to enter the next phase of competition for the Memorial Cup and Dominion honors

The final goal went to the Northerners off the stick of Casanto after 2.37 of 30 seconds of play but the Collegiate sticky was said of the situation to lead 4-1 for the initial contest, to increase the margin to 8-1 in the second and rang down the curtain on the goals in the final.

St. Mikes' veteran sharpshooters were in good-sitting condition as Sadler and Tod Sloan each accounting for three tallies and Johnny Bliute coming through with a brace of net-bulgers. Single markers went to Casanto, Paul, Turik and Gray, the last-named earning his notch on a single-handed effort. Porkies' scores were Gajdosio, Curtik and Barry Sullivan, ex-Oshawa stalwart. There were five penalties of a minor nature.

CANADIENS FACE ELIMINATION FROM STANLEY CUP PLAY

Montreal Team Will be Strengthened by Return of Buddy O'Connor

Montreal, March 28 — (CP) — National Hockey League champions, in a run-away fashion, Montreal Canadiens face elimination from Stanley Cup play tonight when they attempt to figure out a winning combination against Toronto Maple Leafs in the fifth game of their semi-final series.

A loss tonight means the end of the season for the Canucks. A victory would send the Leafs back to Toronto Saturday night and forcing another game back here next Tuesday.

The prospects were not bright for the Canucks, but every 60 minutes was the possibility Buddy O'Connor would be back getting into the action on third line. O'Connor suffered a knee injury in the second game here and was forced to remain out for the rest of the season.

Pete Gaudreau will be back to strengthen the same line. The other lines are in for a shakeup. Only the first string trio will be handicapped again by Elmer Lach's poor ankle and Toe Blake's leg.

The Leafs arrived in fine form for what they hope will be the deciding contest to send them into the finals against the winners of the Boston-Detroit series.

PHILLIES BUY WHITLOW WYATT

Wilmington, Del., March 29. (AP) Philadelphia Phillies have entered another deal with Brooklyn Dodgers and-peach-fuzz dates.

General Manager Herb Pennock announced the purchase yesterday of Whitlow Wyatt, veteran, who last teamed with Kirby Higbe in 1941 when they were Dodgers to the National League pennant.

Purchase terms were not disclosed, but estimates placed the figure at $20,000 to $25,000.

Wyatt joins two other one-time greats, Jimmy Foxx and Gus Mancuso, as members of Veeran moundsmen Bill Lee, Vernon Kennedy and Dick Mauney, Phillies.

On the other side of the ledger are a pair of 21-year-olds, Granville Lee Hermanski and Ken Heintzelman.

Wyatt won 22 games in 1941 and was the Dodger to win a world series decision over New York Yankees. Relegated to a relief role last year, working only part time and winning two while dropping six.

Lighter Vein.

Little Mrs. Newlywede was still rather shy about asking her husband for more money, but the time came when she simply had to.

"Dearie," she said one day at breakfast time, "will you please lend me $1, but only give me half of it?"

"Yes, darling," said her husband, handing her only two dollars.

"Oh, well, don't you see, then you'll owe me ten shillings and I'll owe you ten shillings, so we'll be square, won't we?"

Opportunity Knocks.

Over in Toronto they have what's known as an "Old-timers' Baseball Association." It's composed of former baseball players of years long past who are holding a game yearly for the sponsoring of baseball, especially among the minors. Seven players in Oshawa and vicinity can take an active part in coaching the youngsters of those communities at baseball. Now the opportunity to do a little service work in Belleville has arisen and will be presented when Manager Coleman arrives on this city, who can do much towards helping the newly-proposed baseball league. A couple of coaches the kids. When over 40 players and interested spectators at last night's meeting, it would seem that baseball was the case Tuesday night, then it's high time oldsters get together and lend their support. All that is asked is the odd evening in coaching the kids on the elementary points of the game — and this shouldn't be asking too much from veterans, players who owe much to the game itself. There will be another baseball meeting called next Tuesday night at the I.O.D.E. Rooms, when veterans of past diamond wars could well attend to add prestige to such a gathering.

Trust Mr. Dykes.

Luck-of-the-Irish Department: For his spring training season Jimmy Dykes, poacher extraordinary, brazenly appropriated the Cubs' old French Lick for his White Sox, blandly ignoring the outraged howls of Cub executives. This year, though, the Little Round Man has out-smarted—or was he? The Bruins signed for "exclusive rights" to the Indiana spa, thus shunting James off to his old stamping ground he blindly selected Terre Haute as his base.

And what happened? The Cub field is flooded and the GOP has banned all direct rail transportation into French Lick, the nearest station being eighteen miles away. Meanwhile Dykes is on a main rail line, his field is dry and he's been giving a loud horse-laugh to Jimmy Gallagher of the Cubs. Of all the folks in the baseball business only Dykes could reap such a windfall. His luck is beyond belief.

Same Class, Uh?

No doubt the majority of Belleville sport fans have been in the Maple Leaf Gardens at some time or other and no doubt admired the system of colored seats, red, blue, green, etc. Even the ticket sold at the same color as the section of seats in which the holder is sold. Well, the Gardens has nothing on the Roma Arena these days.

When wrestling opens here the middle of April, the Arena are in for a surprise when they enter the Market Street sports palace. Manager Ted Reeve has had the first two rows of seats painted red, the next two blue and the top two rows green besides having the side walls painted white. All of the ice has been removed from the rink and all is in readiness for the grunt and groaners to present their stuff. They're even purchased a new canvas and new ropes for the ring which won't before they were needed.

Speaking about the Arena Manager Gerow says they have plans for an outstanding dance band for the summer months, which also is welcome news.

Remember When.

A twelve-year career in the National Hockey League ended eight years ago tonight, when Lionel (Big Train) Conacher hung up his skates in Detroit after helping the Montreal Maroons win a 3-1 victory over Jack Adams' Wings.

While on the subject of hockey it might be well to note the Maple Leafs had over 2,000 shots and shots on Durnan as Les Cahadiens had 1,000 shots on Broda, which goes to prove it's team concerted rifle shots and not individual goal-keeper they're bound to be rewarded eventually. The Leafs' win was an overdue affair after they had out-shot Les Canadiens 50 to 20.

READY FOR NEW START

Dublin, (CP)—Premier de Valera, receiving Jean Reviere, new French minister to Eire, said New Zealand hopes France will rapidly recover and be able quickly to take a foremost place in the rebuilding of Europe on those Christian principles without which peace and progress were impossible.

COLEMAN THINKS BOSTON BRAVES HAVE A CHANCE

Added Speed and Defensive Ability to Back Up Efficient Hurling Staff

Washington, March 29. (AP)—Bob Coleman thinks his Boston Braves have a chance for the first division in the National League on added speed and defensive ability to back up a small but efficient pitching staff.

"I never did know who was going to play first, second or third at this time a year ago", said Bob. "No matter whether it's Joe Mack from Columbus or Vince Shupe from Hartford, a .240 slugger, we're sure to be improved at first. Frank Drews showed me he could play second base and Dick Culler is a short and Tommy Nelson at third when needed is more class. Culler, who hit .305 for Milwaukee, was last reporting but I still have Whitey Wietelmann".

Bill Ramsey, the Pacific Coast League stolen base champ, probably will play centrefield supplanting Tommy Holmes who was moved around to left, leaving right to Welcome Cleveland and Charley Workman, both unreported.

Coleman is trying to make a starting lefthander out of either Charley Gilbert, an 18-game winner at Atlanta, or Jim Wallace, an army discharge.

Phil Masi and Clyde Shoats of last year's staff are the first-line catchers.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 643

By SAM GORDON

The Ribitzer

Horse Sense is bridge in its frankest and clearest terms. If you learn bridge, that way, you are ready at a long for correct responses. Or, for knowing when you have another bid.

Consider every no trump trick as a high card; ace or king or queen. Consider every suit trick as either a high card or a short card; each card short of three in any short suit.

Consider: An opening one bid shows five tricks; an unbeaten partner has two tricks; each raise by either shows another trick; partner has two tricks; each raise by either shows another trick; each unforced no trump bid shows another (high card) no trump trick.

Consider: In answer to a one bid, any responding bid admits at least three tricks; if in a suit, only two need be high cards; if in no trump, all must be in high cards.

Now consider what to do with this responding hand:

♠6 3 2
♥K 8 4 3
♦K 5 4
♣K 7 4

Your hand contains three tricks, all high cards. Therefore, you have enough for a responding bid in either a suit or no trump. How will you show them?

If partner opens with one club or one diamond or one heart, assist to two in his suit. Bestow support, you show three tricks. But only two of them are assumed to be high cards.

If partner's second bid is two spades, your second bid is two no trump. That shows your third high card. Since it is not a raise, it does not show any more than your promised three tricks.

Suppose partner's opening was one spade, with no support your immediate response is one no trump. That promises three high cards. But in a weak hand. So, you still have a still raise left.

If partner's opening bids two in your suit, you have an assist to three in the suit he has bid, that raise assumes your third trick.

When you have enough you can show your suit.

Training Camp Notes

Terre Haute, Ind., March 20 — (AP)—Bill Dietrich, Chicago White Sox right-hander who won 16 and lost 17 for the seventh place team last year, arrived in camp yesterday, and manager Jimmy Dykes announced he had come to terms with the front office. ROYALS DEFEAT OTTAWA JUNIORS IN TWO STRAIGHT

Montreal Squad Will Meet Maritimes Champions for Eastern Title

Ottawa, March 20 (CP)—Montreal Royals, fast and well balanced, last night qualified to move against the Maritime champions in quest of the Memorial Cup and Canada's junior hockey championship by defeating St. Patrick's College of Ottawa 9-5. The victory gave them the total-of-three playoff series in two straight games.

The lighter Ottawa team battled hard all the way but was unable to overcome the handicap of Royals' experience and extra poundage. Fred Mugford, Ottawa's 15-year-old netminder, whom Royals outwitted in their 8-2 first game victory in Montreal Monday, turned in a stellar performance. But he couldn't hold them off alone.

Jimmy O'Connor and Pierre Cadieux got two goals apiece as the Royals skated to victory. Doug Harvey, Fred Wheeler, Jack Bellamy, Cliff Malone and Johnny Chevrier got the others. For St. Pats Pat Coburn and Tommy Rutland each got two and Les Anning the other.

The pace was blistering from the start but only three penalties were handed out—to Eddie Cutts, Royals defenceman and Aubrey, his Otawa counterpart and a 10-minute misconduct to Johnny Chenier of Royals.

German Attack Is Repulsed

Rome, March 20 — (AP)—A German attack on British 5th Army positions near Cotignola, six miles north of the Bologna-Rimini highway stronghold of Faenza, was repulsed yesterday as the rest of the Italian front remained relatively quiet.

Rain restricted visibility on the Italian 5th Army front to the south-west. There was scattered German artillery fire in the forward areas of the front.

A naval communique reported new shelling of enemy positions on the Franco-Italian border during the week, in which French and British destroyers participated.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 6

"But he looked at me coldly and answered, 'My dear Kitty, I don't know what you're talking about!' Have you ever heard that tone? Have you ever felt that you're real self is entirely different from the artificial idea of you that other people hold and force you to live up to? It was like that, only a thousand times worse.

"I came to the opera and went directly to the Jocelyn box. It belonged to Uncle Edgar, but he has been sharing it with Aunt Rhoda since she came to New York. He was there already and when I saw him at little hope stirred in my heart. For he had seen both Kitty and myself at cocktails time the afternoon Kitty fell ill. Even though he had been deceived by my impersonation of Kitty in the excitement of the dance, I thought he would surely recognize me when he saw me calmly at close quarters.

"But he greeted me as Kitty in the most matter of fact way imaginable. During the first intermission some of the men who had been at the dance came into the box. The two cousins said, 'Hello, Kitty,' and the others said, 'Good evening, Miss Jocelyn.' Not one of them showed any doubt or hesitation.

"I couldn't stand it any longer. Just before the second act, I whispered to Uncle Edgar, 'Something dreadful is happening. I'm not Kitty at all. I'm Ann Claude and Kitty has disappeared. They say she's gone to California—I mean, they say Ann has gone to California—but that can't be, because I'm Ann and the whole point is: Where is Kitty?'

"Uncle Edgar simply stared at me Aunt Rhoda leaned forward and I caught the words 'delusion' and 'overwrought.'

"That was too much. I sprang to my feet and cried aloud:

"'My name is Ann Claude! I'm not Kitty Jocelyn—I'm not!'

"Just then the lights were turned low and the orchestra drowned my voice. The people in the other boxes couldn't hear what I said, though they may have seen me stand up.

"Uncle Edgar whispered, 'We'd better take her home.'

"I felt fairly shaky. We left the box and went down to the car, Lula and Uncle Edgar walking on either side of me like jailers. When Uncle Edgar left us Aunt Rhoda said, 'Of course, you won't mention this to any one.' And he answered, indignantly, 'Of course not!'

I realized then that I could count on no one to help me. I must find Kitty myself. I must get into the Jocelyn house by myself.

"There was an old-fashioned sort of Kitty's bathroom door that must have been there in Grandfather Jocelyn's day. The key was in the lock. When Victorine wasn't looking, I slipped it into the pocket of my dressing gown—that is, Kitty's dressing gown. That night when Victorine went into the bathroom, I slammed the door and locked her in. Her shouting and pounding could not be heard in the rest of the house for the wall was old and thick, and the bedroom and sitting-room out off the bathroom door.

"Then I had to deal with the locked door into the hall. Victorine had the key to that door with her in the bathroom. There was only one thing I could do with the lock. I had never picked a lock before, but I had all night to do it and it was the only way out. I used up two whole boxes of hairpins, a pair of sewing scissors and the wire from three kid curlers. Then I remembered a newspaper story about a man who was locked in an airtight strong room by gangsters and picked the lock with a thin dime just in time to save himself from death by suffocation. I hadn't a dime, but there was a nail file on Kitty's dressing table about the size and thickness of a dime at one end. I used that and by five o'clock in the morning I got the door open.

"I put on a suit of Kitty's because I had no clothes of my own. When I took a pair of gloves from her bureau drawer I noticed a purse she had carried the morning she disappeared. I opened it and found she had left some change in it. The few dollars belonging to me had disappeared at the same time as the other things in my room, so I had no hesitation about helping myself. Then I picked up Kid Lung, and walked downstairs. The front door is locked at night, and all the ground floor windows are barred as extra safeguards against burglars. I had no time to lose—I must early and never, I decided, gamble on the probability that the servants really did believe I was Kitty. I walked boldly into the kitchen. It was so early that only one of the maids was up and that

Montgomery May Pay Canada Visit After Conflict is Ended

His Future is Not Likely to Include Politics—Interest in Veterans' Welfare is Marked

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)
With the 21st Army Group, March 28, (CP Cable)—What will Field Marshal Montgomery do after the war?

It is an open question being asked by soldiers here. Possibly soon after the war in Europe is over the 21st Army Group Commander will visit Canada.

He has not taken any long leave from the front since the Battle of El Alamein in Egypt late in 1942 and a trip to the Dominion might be his active way of spending a month or more of leave. If he were to make the trip, it is likely he would travel from coast to coast and it is certain he would be given a great welcome by any community in Canada.

It is known Field Marshal Montgomery is considering a Canadian visit.

A rumor that he may become Governor-General of Canada is not taken seriously here. Britain's amazing commander, with a string of victories from El Alamein to beyond the Rhine, certainly will be active, however, in some important capacity after the war.

It does not appear likely that he will go to Burma or the Southwest Pacific. British commanders there already are at their posts.

Neither is he likely to go into politics. He shuns the very idea and although efforts will be made to induce him to enter public life it is a hundred to one that he will ever run for parliament. But there are other things to interest him after the war.

For instance he is vitally interested in the post-war welfare of British veterans—those who fought under him in so many campaigns and others as well. It is possible he may become head of the British Legion—the British Veterans' Association. He followed the work of the Legion extremely closely and always has supported it strongly.

Whitehall Notebook

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 29. (CP)—The Family Allowances Bill has been introduced in parliament as £57,000,000 ($256,500,000) measure to aid nearly 4,500,000 children—but the major part of the government's national insurance plan still has not been presented.

With a general election promised for this year, there is some belief the full program may not be approved before dissolution promised by Prime Minister Churchill for some time within a few weeks of the end of the war against Germany.

The first instalment in the insurance plan was the act creating a minister of national insurance, Sir William Allen Jowitt, and his first appointed duty apparently will be to pay "an allowance for each family at the rate of 6S. (1.12) a week for each child except the first and only child".

Still to come are the over-riding National Insurance Act which will bring into force the whole scheme of security, legislation to replace the present system of Workmen's Compensation by an improved plan taking the responsibility off the employer, and to institute a national medical service.

Retirements

The next parliament is going to have a great many more new faces than is usual after a war when it goes to the country. The reason, by no means a glad one, is that there has been no election since 1935 and more than a normal number of members have reached retirement age.

So far 110 of the present sitting members have announced they do not plan to run again. They include 80 Conservatives, 28 Labor members, one Liberal and a Liberal National. In the majority are elderly men.

One Commoner

When the late David Lloyd George became an Earl, only one surviving member of the Cabinet formed in April, 1919, by H. H. Asquith was left a commoner—Prince Minister Churchill.

Of the 1936 Cabinet comprising 19 members, six already were peers. Of the other 13, Mr. Asquith, Herbert Gladstone, Sir Edward Grey, R. B. Haldane, J. Sinclair, Sydney Buxton, W. Runciman and Lewis Harcourt subsequently were raised to the House of Lords.

Mr. Churchill in that Liberal administration—he subsequently became a Conservative—was president of the Board of Trade.

Lieutenant Wins D.S.O. in Italy

Brockville, Ont., March 26 (CP)—Lieut. William D. Roach of Brockville, has been awarded the D.S.O. for an action, Dec. 10, 1944, in the advance to Italy's Senio river in which he killed five Germans and wounded numerous others while leading his platon, Lt. Winnipeg, to objective that turned out to be the key point in an attack on the town of Bagnacavallo. Officers of his rank seldom win the D.S.O.

The citation, received by his wife here, disclosed that Roach, serving with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, advanced under heavy fire at the head of two sections towards an enemy house. He killed one German and wounded an officer outside, then led his men inside. In hand-to-hand encounter he wounded three more and his sections took 20 prisoners.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop drove Cousin Oscar to the railroad station this morning before I was even up yet, and I was having breakfast with ma and she was looking at her grapefruit diet kind of serious, saying, Oh dear, I can't eat a morsel or swallow a bite till I've heard from your father if he would be perfectly gaasly if anything happened now just between the cup and the proverbial lip, she said

Now do you mean, ma, an accident? I said, and ma said, Well, nothing serious, naturally, but even a mild accident would be sufficient to induce Oscar to break his leg so your father would have to bring him home again and the whole vicious circle would start all over. Oh dear, your father promised faithfully by telephone the moment the train pulled safely out of the station, and I wont know whether I'm enjoying a sensation of relief or suffering from a sense of foreboding that telephone rings, she said.

And she kept on not eating, and I said, Well jimminy, ma," how about pooh bey?

What are you talking about? ma said, and I said, I mean in case of an accident why couldn't it be pop's leg instead of Cousin Oscar's? I said, and ma said, Oh, I'm not afraid of that, I mean it would be just sure to be Oscar's and I said, Well G, ma, why couldn't it be both?

Oh keep quiet, ma said, and just then the telephone rang and it was pop to tell ma the train was gone with Cousin Oscar on it, making ma so happy she decided to eat bacon and eggs for her breakfast, saying, This really calls for a celebration, I'm just going to act as if I didn't have a weight in the world.

Well G, ma, why dont you celebrate all next week by eating at stay home from school and making it look like a real holiday? I said.

Seeing like a better idea to me than what it did to ma.

London Letter

By FRANK LOWE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 26 (CP) — Art loses its capital "A" and gets down on its knees with a scrubbing cloth when London's sidewalk artists show their wares.

Every fine day these men who earn a sometimes good but more often precarious living appear in droves to smear the city pavements with chalk, charcoal and oil drawings. A sunny day sees as many as 70 of them in the half-mile between Westminster and Piccadilly, drawing lurid sunsets and fevered-looking bowls of fruit—beside them the ragged cap to catch coins.

The ambitious ones put on a non-stop show. They realistically admit that the act of drawing, and not the drawings themselves, attracts customers and the hoped-for shower of tips, so they sketch continuously.

Others, however, and especially the old-timers and temperamental ones who believe their art alone merits the money with a minimum of work on their part, draw but one set of pictures daily.

Len belongs to this group. This white-bearded man with glowing eyes whose mood complaints of what the ignorant have chopped Artistic name from Leonardo to "Len," has a pitch on the busy Strand.

His day begins at 10 a.m. when he arrives with a damp cloth and scrubs clean a few squares of pavement on which to chalk some six pictures — a wolfish-looking Montgomery, a fatherly Stalin, a Churchill, a couple of pastorals and a comic effort.

By that time it is 11 and the pubs are open, so he "sells" his cap with a few coins, leaves it beside the drawings and disappears. This, he says, earns him from three to four dollars daily. He has no overhead except for the price of chalk, and no income tax. His place of business is through the courtesy of the policeman on that beat.

"BROWN-PAPER" CHURCH

Downham-in-the-Isle, Norfolk, England, March 26—(CP) With the recent talk of prefabricated houses, architects and builders have been showing interest in the "brown-paper" church here. Built fifty years ago of compressed brown paper interwoven with wire, it is still in use.

SKUNKS A SURPRISE

Sydney, Australia, (CP)— Announcement that Canada was sending a pair of deodorized skunks to world-famed Taronga Park Zoo, overlooking Sydney harbor, came as a real surprise to folks down under, interested newspapermen quickly called on the Zoo for confirmation.

Russians Stream Into Austria, Danzig Occupied

50 Red Divisions Now Released For Battle for Berlin

Link-up With Allied Armies In Italy May Be Affected

London, March 31 (CP)—Russian troops, smashing across the Austrian border, drove toward the vulnerable southern approaches of Germany today, while the fall of Danzig released perhaps 50 Red Army divisions for the coming battle for Berlin.

Moscow announced last night that Marshal Fedor I. Tolbukhin's 3rd Ukrainian army had invaded Austria at a point north of captured Koveg, 42 miles south of Vienna, in a rapid thrust that is already threatening the Austrian capital.

Simultaneously, the Russian High Command disclosed new successes along the frontier of strong-fortified quared Hungary and Yugoslavia where Marshal Tolbukhin's fighter-bomber pilots were the principal reasons given by publishers for the increases.

Flag Raised Over Danzig

The flag of the "Polish State" was raised over Danzig after a grueling siege that cost the Germans more than 48,000 killed or captured in the former free port, Radiopi of the Polish banner over the port indicated resumption by the Russians of Polish claims to this European political cauldron.

The combined forces of two great Soviet armies were driving westward through Hungary and Austria, north and south banks of the Danube River in a direct assault on Vienna, which yesterday reverberated to attacks by heavy bombers of the Italy based U.S. Fifth Air Force. The Americans also bombed Graz, in Austria, 45 miles west of the advancing Russians.

Nitro River Defence Breached

On the Danube's north bank, Marshal Rodion Y. Malinovsky's 2nd Ukrainian army sprang forward from the Gron River in a 31-mile advance that breached Vienna's Nitra River defence line along a 70-mile front.

Seizing more than 450 towns, Malinovsky's host at one point north of captured Komarno battered 16 miles past the Nitra River.

Meanwhile, on the south bank of the Danube, troops of Malinovsky's troops slashed toward the southwestern approaches to the vital Brat-Mava Gap, 50 miles southeast of Vienna between the Danube and the Austrian Carpathian Mountain defence barrier. These elements burned to within 44 miles of Vienna and 90 miles southeast of Bratislava by capturing Tarnskred, 14 miles west of captured Gyor.

Farther to the south Tolbukhin's troops advancing on Gyor captured the rail junction of Zalagerszeg and nearby Boncz within 180 miles of Italy. More than 150 towns west of Lake Balaton were seized, Moscow said.

Total U.S. Casualties Since Pearl Harbor Reach 872,862

Washington, March 31—(AP)—American combat casualties reported since the United States entered the war neared the 900,000-mark today and army officials estimated its losses at 780,942. The latest navy report added 92,920 to the army toll, making the aggregate 872,862.

War secretary Stimson said the Army's total was based on a compilation of individual names received here through March 21.

He also estimated Japanese casualties in the entire Philippines campaign at more than 300,000; He gave no report on American casualties in the campaign.

BRAKEMAN KILLED

Niagara Falls, Ont., March 31—Roland Hamilton, 40, of Niagara Falls, a brakeman at the Canadian National Railways yards here, was killed yesterday when he missed his footing, while stepping from a caboose to an engine and went under the wheels of the engine.

Many U.S. Dailies Boost Ad Rates

New York, March 31—(AP)—Nearly 35 per cent of the daily newspapers in the United States raised their advertising rates an average of 1 1-2 cents a line during 1944, Editor and Publisher, newspaper trade journal, reported yesterday. Another 18.3 per cent plan to increase rates this year, the publication said. Higher costs increased circulation and higher circulation and higher supplies and "a better" paper were the principal reasons given by publishers for the increases.

Japs Compressed In Narrow Pocket

Calcutta, March 31 — (CP) — British 14th Army troops driving south in Central Burma have captured Kyaukse and established contact with forces heading north from the Meiktila area, thereby compressing Japanese forces hemmed in between that area and Allied positions along the Irrawaddy River to the west.

The Japanese were compressed into an ever narrowing pocket. Strong enemy rearguard units belittled enough manpower with Japanese to cover the main body's withdrawal from the city. 24 miles south of Mandalay on the main trunk road and railway, the southeast Asia Command communique announced.

The link-up of the two British forces was established at a point 10 miles northeast of Meiktila. The town of Meiktila, 30 miles northwest of Meiktila, was entered early yesterday.

In many positions in the hills overlooking the road from Myingyang to Meiktila, at Taungtha, 12 miles southeast of Myingyang, have been cleared. The airborne here forced the western jaw of the trap. British troops captured Natogyi, 14 miles east of Myingyang, on the road to the main north-south highway.

BRUCE C. SHORTS FORMERLY OF BELLEVILLE,

Seattle, March 31—Bruce Shorts, attorney who was star former football coach at the University of Washington, died suddenly Wednesday after a long illness at the age of 48.

Thousands, Including Soldiers, To Pay Homage at Holy Sepulchre

Jerusalem, March 31 (AP) — Allied soldiers will be among the thousands who will attend Palm Sunday morning at the Holy Sepulchre, with at least part of the service on the first time in years on the threshold of peace.

Many Allied soldiers walked in the historic Via Dolorosa procession yesterday and joined in Good Friday services where they heard the Passion story read in Greek, Armenian and Latin.

The soldier will attend High Mass stomorrow at the Holy Sepulchre and kneel before the Christ tomb in a special chapel in the middle of the high rotunda enclosed by shining yellow and white marble.

Those who throng from historic Jaffa gate or through the Arab market will find nothing new in the customary Easter walk, but those who approach the sepulchre from the direction of Gethsemane, from the south, and through the Via Dolorosa will find a change at the sixth station.

The sixth station is the one where, according to Christian tradition, a lovely woman wiped the blood-covered forehead of Christ as he fell under the heavy cross to Golgatha. In the time of the Crusaders a chapel was built here and for the last few months it has been restored by Franciscan friars, plans and models giving a picture of Jerusalem in the time of Christ.

The exhibition includes a reproduction of the crown of thorns made of Palestine thistles. There is a model of Christ's grave covered with a massive stone.

This year more than ever, the Easter walk will be a procession which in the course of the last 1,400 years has been destroyed 12 times and conquered 36 times. In all this war Holy City has been spared destructi-n.

RUSSIA DEMANDS SAN FRANCISCO SEAT FOR POLAND

Soviet Informed That Great Britain Could Not Accede to Such A Request

By JAMES F. KING

London, March 31 —(AP)— Moscow demanded today that the Warsaw Polish provisional government be represented at the San Francisco World Security Conference and highly authoritative London sources said Russia had been informed that Great Britain could not accede to such a request.

These London sources declared without equivocation that the British government felt the Polish provisional government be expanded to include Warsaw democrats.

Prospect of such action before the April 25 conference opening date appeared slim.

The Russian demand, broadcast by the Soviet radio, said failure of the United States and Britain to negotiate the Warsaw group was the excuse for withholding an invitation, and that an "early reply" was expected to the Soviet request.

Bernard M. Baruch, special representative of President Roosevelt, and U. S. Ambassador John G. Winant, arrived today with Prime Minister Churchill.

Although the nature of their discussions remained unannounced, it appeared inevitable the question would be raised concerning Russia's demand on Polish representation.

Another subject probably on the agenda was the control and economic future of Germany.

For the third successive day, there was an almost flow of government communications between Washington and London and between them from Washington.

The Moscow radio declared that a reorganization of the Polish provisional government "cannot be effected in the near future." Both the Warsaw group and the Polish administration in London had bid for seats at San Francisco.

The broadcast made no reference to the London group, declaring that the Soviet government "also informed the governments of Great Britain and China that it fully supports the proposal of the Provisional Polish government and expected Poland would be given a chance to take part in the San Francisco Conference."

Holding of the conference in San Francisco without participation or Poland would be unfair and an absolutely unjustified insult to the Polish people," the Moscow radio declared, adding that it would be a shortsighted step.

The broadcast insisting that failure to invite the Warsaw Poles "could not be explained otherwise than by the present relations between that group and Washington and London," the Soviet broadcast declared.

46 Japanese Ships Sunk Or Damaged, 87 Planes Destroyed by Task Force

Guam, March 31 (AP) — United States carrier planes sank or damaged 46 Japanese ships and 87 planes Thursday and Friday, Admiral Nimitz announced today as warships continued heavily bombarding Okinawa in the centre of the Ryukyu chain which Tokyo said was threatened by imminent invasion.

Nimitz announced that 18 enemy ships were sunk, 13 probably sunk and 15 damaged in operations ranging over much of the 700-mile long Ryukyu island chain and Kyushu island, southernmost of the four islands of Japan.

Kyushu and Honshu were also hit today by substantial formations of superfortresses flying out of the Marianas Islands.

American carrier planes and anti-aircraft gunners on shipboard shot down 39 Japanese aircraft, American pilots also destroyed 16 planes on the ground and damaged at least 6 others.

U.S. Planes Lost.

Twelve American planes were lost, shot down and six pilots lost.

The announcement came as the Japanese Domei agency was reporting that U.S. transports were moving in on Okinawa, in the centre of the Ryukyus, preparatory for an invasion.

Jap minesweepers were clearing a pathway for them, Domei said, in actions it described as "preparations for landing operations."

An enemy Domei news agency broadcast said "about 15 battleships and other heavy warships" have joined American naval forces already in the Okinawa area, 325 miles south of Japan, which was hit again today in a series of support operations.

Fevertul Armada Follows.

"A powerful transport armada is following close behind the enemy task force," Domei said, "apparently for the purpose of landing two to two island operations, the enemy is proceeding cautiously.

"Okinawa island is being heavily pounded by warships and planes. Enemy minesweepers are active, preparing for landing operations, but no landings have been attempted yet."

CANADIANS SURGE INTO N. HOLLAND OFF LEFT FLANK

Stubborn Nazi Resistance North Of Emmerich Probably Staged to Cover Withdrawal

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in Northern Holland, March 31. —(CP Cable)— The Canadian advance into northern Holland is going forward well, and south of Zutphen, Emmerich and Anholt have been made to the northwest and south.

The South Saskatchewan Regiment of Eteran and the Fort Garry Horse and Winnipeg are driving the Canadian thrust which is cutting into Holland between Emmerich and Anholt and has reached points seven and eight miles beyond the Netherlands-German border.

They were meeting light opposition. Other Canadian formations and forces units rushed up from the south to protect the right flank.

The Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg are pushing the Canadian thrust which is cutting into Holland between Emmerich and Anholt and has reached points seven and eight miles beyond the Netherlands-German border.

They were meeting light opposition. Other Canadian formations and forces units rushed up from the south to protect the right flank.

The Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg are pushing several miles during the night and the 5th Reconnaissance Regiment of Ottawa, Regina and Medicine Hat, Alta., is screening the flank with armoured cars.

Enemy Cannot Be Disclosed.

Several prisoners were taken but their names cannot be disclosed because of the partial blackout in this section.

Striking northwest from Emmerich, the Highlanders drove to Chaudfontaine Lake Mauritzsyn, Que, advanced three miles to the village of Hochsalen. They were under machine-gun fire at either flank but held firm positions. The Queen's Own Rifles of Toronto operated on their right.

The North Shore (New Brunswick) Regiment of Fredericton and the Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders of Cornwall, Ont., attacked north from Emmerich and Sherbrooke Fusiliers Garrison are supporting the infantry at all these points.

Fighting Stubborn.

There still was hard fighting here but the Canadians were pressing up the German defence, and the ninth German Division was taking a beating.

It was the heaviest fighting since the Canadians crossed the Rhine Sunday morning by the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg and Les Fusiliers Mont-Royal, Montreal, in the general area between Emmerich and Anholt, eight miles to the northeast. Sharing in the advanced lair were the 5th Reconnaissance Regiment of Shaunavon, Sask., and Medicine Hat, Alta., Toronto Scottish machine-gunners and mortar crews and the South Saskatchewan Regiment from Regina.

JAP RESISTANCE ON NEGROS ISLAND SAID COLLAPSING

Americans Seize Airstrip and Menacing Insular Capital of Bacolod

Manila, March 31 —(AP)— U. S. 8th Army troops landed Thursday against light opposition on Negros, last remaining major Philippine island under Japanese control, have seized an airstrip and were menacing the insular capital, Bacolod.

Striking Americans had to fight hard, it was disclosed today, to take tiny Cabello Island, within rifle range of Cornwell's Manila Bay.

With the invasion of Negros, General Krueger asserted the enemy in the Visayan Island group "seems disorganized and his defense is rapidly collapsing." Negros is a part of the Visayas, Mindoro and Bohol are also the remaining large islands of the group that have not been invaded by U. S. forces.

Troops of the U. S. 40th Division landed unopposed at Bais, 30 miles from Guimaras Island, between American controlled Panay and Negros, and went ashore near the mouth of the Bago river. One colum moved westward to capture the coast to take the airstrip and approach Bacolod, while the rest of the while another column turned southward, meeting no planes and making contact with guerillas.

Support Is Heavy.

The landing parties were supported by naval gunfire and covering planes.

Negros, more than 120 miles long and 50 miles at its widest part, is one of the biggest sugar producers in the Philippines.

On recently-invaded Cebu Island the American division overcame desperate resistance at Guadalupe and also joined up with guerillas.

In northern Luzon, the U. S. 25th Division made a flanking movement on Baiyo Pass but met stiff enemy resistance.

In southern Luzon, 1st Cavalry units captured the historic Spanish town of Lipa, which the Japanese had used as a headquarters, and advance into Batangas province.

Another fiery wrench on enemy positions all the way from Mindanao, southern Philippine island, to Macassar Straits, where they sank or damaged nine enemy ships, including two destroyers, Wednesday.

Avalanche of Allied Armor Surging Through Germany; 175 Miles From Capital

Trap Closing on 40,000 Enemy Forces in Ruhr

By JAMES M. LONG

Paris, March 31 (AP)—U.S. 3rd Army armor punched to within 175 miles of Berlin as two points today in the vanguard of an avalanche of 3,000 Allied tanks surging swiftly through Germany and closing a potential trap on up to 40,000 enemy troops, in the wrecked Ruhr.

Security silence largely masked the movement of the gains of elements of five Allied armies, but a front dispatch disclosed that the 4th Armored division of the 3rd Army had battered to within 10 miles of Industrial Chemnitz, pop. 350,000, 42 miles from the German capital. The fall of Kassel today was considered likely. The 6th armored division had reached within 30 miles eastward.

Thirty miles farther southeast, the U.S. 4th Armored Division drove to a point four miles southeast of Hersfeld, also moving within 175 miles of Berlin.

Armies Near Junction

The 1st Army tanks had dashed northward through PaPierborn, and were nearing a junction with U.S. 3rd Army units which ran on through Friday night by moonlight the capital of Hesse-Nassau province.

Today the 3rd Army closed up in this same sector, with the 6th Armored sending one column within 10 miles of Kassel, and another to Cappell, 13 south of Kassel.

Then the 1st Division of the 4th Armored drove 22 miles northeast to Landsberg on a point four miles southeast of Hersfeld, and another element from the same division reached the vicinity of Herleshausen after a 14-mile push.

The U. S. 7th Army in the south pushed well beyond captured Heidelberg, and fought a terrific battle with fanatical Germans in prepared positions across the river Main in an arc around Aschaffenburg. There were reports even German women, girls and boys were fighting there.

Gains advance, led by at least 11 armored divisions were snaring thousands of prisoners. The 3rd Army took 10,000 more Friday, the British 2nd Army captured 1,500 and the U. S. 1st 11,300.

The 1st Army reported repeatedly at German communications.

Next 10 Days Should Bring Decisive Point in Campaign Against Germany

By C. R. BLACKBURN
(CP Staff Writer)

Washington, March 31 — (CP) — Persons high in Allied war councils today made guarded and privately forecasts that events in Europe virtually will black out the San Francisco Security Conference as public attraction, but they in no way could become overshadowed in importance of the meeting.

They foresee this likelihood: That while the representatives of some 45 United Nations meet in San Francisco to plan a world organization to maintain peace, the Allied armies will be faced with the most pressing and difficult task of making a peace with Germany.

One official, fresh from the European front and long associated with operations there, said the next 10 days should bring the decisive point in the campaign against Germany.

Then it would be known whether there will be a complete collapse of resistance if such collapse is not already occurred — or if there is to be long drawn out, desperate battle by fanatical Nazi gangsters about Hitler and his chief lieutenants.

He believed that Hitler and his close associates would seek escape to some prepared refuge — possibly Japan — where they would be temporarily out of reach of the avenging forces.

If they found such escape impossible, this official said, there was every reason to believe strategy would be made to organize a fight to the death in which Hitler and his gang would become martyrs to resistance of the meeting.

Net Position Of Taxpayer Not Changed

Ottawa, March 31 — (CP)—Federal government officials have made it clear that those who received a will be placed at a standstill by accepting family allowance payments.

Finance Minister Ilsley has stated that the Income Tax Act will be amended so that the taxpayer will not benefit both from exemptions for children and family allowance payments. He specified, however, that the change would not affect the net position of the taxpayer.

Health Minister Claxton has said that income tax exemptions for children would be reduced by the amount the taxpayer benefited from the allowance payments.

He said the advice was for all parents to apply for the allowance, particularly if they were not sure whether they would benefit more from the exemptions of the allowance. Those in the higher income brackets would have to repay their income tax the amount received in allowances that was over and above the exemptions they were entitled to.

Mr. Claxton has also said that while it was preferable for mothers to apply immediately for allowances they could make their application at any time. Original payments would begin in July. It was announced that in the case of applications filed after July, payments would be gin a month or so later.

Transport Drivers Take Part in Field Scheme

Mechanical transport drivers of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) had a field day on Thursday in the across of the world.

Under Lt.-Col. Osborne, Sgt.-Mai. Instructor Charles Tice and non-commissioned officers of the unit left in the morning and took part in the Battle Tests and Reinforcement Scheme.

In addition the trip provided an interesting lesson in map reading.

The convoy covered roads along the roads leading to the central part of this county, staying to gravel roads and township lines rather than the highways.

Lunch was eaten in army picnic style, despite the fact that a ranking N.C.O. inadvertently forgot the coffee.

Umpiring scheme for M.T. is being arranged for Sunday, April 8 when vehicles and troopers will journey to the countryside in the vicinity of Bound County. Some officers and N.C.Os of the 34th Field Battery will likely accompany the convoy as observers and for training purposes.

Incidentally, the Argyll non-commissioned officers used their powers of observation to the full on Thursday during the Friday briefing, for they reported seeing a flock of black looking trout streams which to others was treated as "secret".

Easter

Easter has come for the sixth time since the world was deluged in war through the aggression of Germany. This year the great festival differs from those which have past in the promise and assurance that at the present time there is the near prospect of the cessation of hostilities in Europe. When that day dawns there will be a profound sense of relief and thank. fulness felt by mankind that one part of the aggressor world is defeated and even though the Allied Nations cannot rest from their war labors since Japan has yet to be made to feel the way of defeat and surrender, they will with the fullest assurance and enthusiasm throw their energy into the second part of the war against aggression and bring Japan to the judgment of world justice.

The struggle has been long but the Allied Nations have never faltered, have never yielded from their goals and that justice and liberty must be made safe in this world. They have had right and justice in their hands and they have felt the responsibility that upon them rests the future and welfare of mankind. The victories in the Pacific with their fullest zeal and cleanse that part of the world of the barbaric tyranny which Japan has practised.

Easter is a time of hope and faith. This Easter can be doubly so, for the stout hearts and brave spirits of the warrior sons of the Allies have brought very definite triumphs that will be achieved very shortly, all observers and leaders are sure. Man's faith in humanity is justified, for man has gone through tribulation for the right and the present struggle for world war on the part of the Allies has been a just war, which noble men could not avoid for the task was theirs to rid the world of such evil as Nazism, Fascism and militaristic tyranny. Good is triumphing over the forces of evil.

The Queen of Festivals finds the heart of man closely attuned to the great lessons of Lent and Easter and of the life of Him who went about the world doing good and to the great responsibilities of this life. Easter would not mean so much as it does if it did not have its rich lessons for every man or woman.

Men and women recall Easters of peacetime and look forward with faith that peace the world over will mark the Easters of the future in a real brotherhood of man where no enemy of man will dare to raise a hand to strike down progress and truth as the Germany and Japan and aggressive militarism have tried to do.

Easter spirit exemplified in the great truth of the Resurrection, its unbounded assurance of the triumph of human personality over the forces of evil and destruction, the indomitable immortal spirit of man heralds the highest civilization that this earth can achieve.

H. M. Submarines in Malacca Straights

The news that British submarines in Far Eastern waters have sunk a total of 274 Japanese ships in the last eight months is evidence of the increasing difficulty the enemy is having in protecting his supply line through the Malacca Straits.

It is not easy to overestimate the strategic importance of this narrow channel which separates Sumatra from the Malay Peninsula. It is the gateway from the western Pacific to Singapore, to the South China Sea and to Japan itself. When Singapore fell in 1942 the Malacca Straits passed into Japanese control; automatically some Allied shipping routes were greatly extended. For example, by way of the Malacca Straits the distance from Aden to Manila is nearly 5,000 miles, but the journey to Manila round the south coast of Australia is more than twice the distance.

For well over a year past British and Dutch submarines, working in these narrow and dangerous waters and constantly exposed to the risk of attack from surface ships and aircraft, have penetrated the channel to destroy enemy ships by torpedo and gunfire. A large proportion of their victims have been on the north and west coasts of Sumatra have been supply ships carrying food, fuel, medical supplies and other war stores for the retreating Japanese troops in Burma.

Operations in the Malacca Straits, which are obstructed by shoals and in places have a depth of water of under twenty fathoms, call for skill and endurance of the highest order; nevertheless, submarine commanders have never hesitated to press home their attacks, even in the face of the greatest odds. The result is that today British submarines, rather than the Japanese, virtually control the Straits. No Japanese shipping can use them with impunity.

Not only have submarines sunk supply ships in large numbers; up to last January, fifteen warships, ranging from a cruiser to submarine chasers, were also sunk.

Admiral Sir James Somerville, Head of the British Admiralty Delegation, Washington, pointed out in a recent broadcast, full control of the Malacca Straits cannot be regained until Singapore has been recaptured.

In this important operation the British East Indies Fleet—one of Britain's two powerful and growing fleets in eastern waters—will play a most important part. Meanwhile, destruction of enemy shipping in the Malacca Straits continues.

What Mussolini Read

(Leeds Yorkshire Post)

Lieutenant H. R. Beck, of the Royal Artillery, now serving with the C.M.F., has sent me an interesting account of the small library in one of Mussolini's villas in North Italy, which was used for a time by British officers—my correspondent included—as a mess ante-room. "The six large bookcases," he writes, "were filled, for the most part, with modern books in beautiful bindings presented to the Duce by their authors." He continues:

"Hiding on one of the lower shelves were several tattered volumes in paper backs, whose condition showed that they had often been opened and studied. These formed part of Mussolini's personal library which he formed in the days when he was still an obscure agitator.

"One of the most interesting of this collection was Sorel's Considerations on the Use of Violence—a large volume of over 300 pages, with many passages carefully underlined, and bearing Mussolini's autograph on the title page, together with the date, June 1, 1909; an early indication of the shape of things to come?"

Food

(Christian Science Monitor)

Victory so far has resulted in 100,000,000 more people becoming dependent on the United Nations for food, and there will be additional millions. American and other Allied servicemen are giving their utmost—in thousands of cases their lives—to liberate these people, as well as protect their own. Surely the majority of thinking individuals in the best fed nation in the world will not hold with haggling over giving up a few more ounces of meat or a bit more butter to help other nations in furthering both the rescue work and the peace to follow.

April is Warned

(Hamilton Spectator)

April will need to have gay millinery indeed to surpass the glories of scores of March's spring showing. But April can be attractive when she sets her mind to it, and if she proves less fickle than usual she may more than hold her own with March. But the saucy jade must bring no snow.

Ashes of Jap Empire

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

(Copyright, 1944, Edgar A. Guest)

JOSEPH OF ARIMATHEA

Joseph was a rich man, a good man, and a just,
A follower of Jesus, and a friendly man and kind,
And Joseph begged the body to return
unto the dust,
And Pilate gave permission; to this gracious act resigned.

Joseph purchased linen as if 'twere for his own.
He bought a nearby sepulchre in which to lay his friend
And then, against the entrance bade men to place a stone
And seal it fast, forever, lest invaders should descend.

No more is told about him. Home he went, his service done;
But still he is remembered as a rich man, just and good,
Whose heart, like Him he followed, held some warmth for everyone.
And all that makes men brothers deeply felt and understood.

Last Refuge for the Nazis

(By Phil Dressing in the Milwaukee Journal.)

With the tottering third Reich retaining desperately the last feet of Adolf Hitler and his Nazi party satellites, the Alpine redoubt area—that of southern Germany again claims the interest of the world. It has, periodically, since ancient times.

The region of the Bavarian Alps containing Berchtesgaden is a picturesque tourist spot which attracted thousands annually to its cooling, healthful air and unsurpassed beauty, and now the mountains are the hold of a crazed dictator. It is the rugged setting in which Hitler set's weary legions are expected to make their last stand, next to which Der Fuehrer himself may retire to seek temporary solace in the security of his mountaintop citadel, the Kehlsteinhaus, near Berchtesgaden. And in the mountains that 90 miles from Berchtesgaden is Brenner Pass, the gateway through the Dyrolean Alps from Germany to Italy after Germany's defeat in World War I. It is the natural line between the Nazi forces in Germany and those which Italy are being pushed north in Italy.

The Alpine redoubt, which is only one of 36 places in which the Alps can be crossed, is the only point where the Alps are high and mountains can be crossed by traversing a level pass. It is the only link between Germany and Italy. It is the only pass through the Brenners, in the pass, that Hitler and Benito Mussolini held their historic conference which led to the meeting of Brenner Pass between the Nazi forces in Germany and those which Italy are being pushed north in Italy.

Tabernacle Guild Hears Papers On Allowances Act

The Young People's Guild of Tabernacle Church met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Geo. Mellard, 154, Dufferin Ave. A short business meeting was conducted when plans were made for a pot luck supper meeting in April.

Miss M. Hill led the Worship Service based on the scene in the Garden of Gethsemane. The prayer was one of thankfulness for resurrection in life, for the joys of the Eastertide, and for hope of victory over evil as in the life of Christ.

The program for study was "Family Allowances in Canada" in charge of Miss I. Grills who gave a background of the years of investigation in Parliament which preceded the introduction of the bill in 1944. Since 1930 it has been studied by many and is in law, in some form, in 54 countries of the world. The estimated cost to Canada is to be $200,000,000 and the allowance will affect 2,600,000 children under 16 years. The estimated cost of supporting a child is $14.50 per month and the government will some help is better than none so will pay $6-.86 per month dependent upon the child's age with $1 reduction for every child after the first and $5 deduction for the eighth and every subsequent child. In this way, provinces like British Columbia and Ontario, where families of five or more are few, will receive more per child than large family provinces like Quebec.

Mrs. M. Buck gave a paper which showed that wages alone cannot adequately care for children. A salary of $2,000 yearly provides income for a family of four than one of ten, and as yet employees are not paid according to need.

Assistant hostesses were Mrs. A. Wells gave the criticism of labor in the Family Allowance Act, showing it to be opposed only by labor in the Province of Ontario living wages. In Australia and New Zealand, she said, wages have increased since family allowances were inaugurated. It was pointed out where employers were forced to strike they could hold out a long time, settlements without the children suffering too much.

In her paper, Miss J. Hossman quoted Dr. Charlotte Whitton who advocates more social services to supplement allowances.

The birthrate should show an increase in the area of low rates without much change in high areas. Figures were quoted which showed that while Quebec provinces will receive 33% of allowances, more than 20% of national total of such taxes as personal and corporation income tax and excess profits tax is now paid by Quebec. The provinces to benefit from Ontario and British Columbia, taxes will be the Prairies and Maritimes. Before the war one-half to one-third of the children in Canada were in homes with income of $1,000 a year and under.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Husband is Tired of Being Her Dancing Partner

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been turned down by the Entertaining Committee at the Draft Board because I have flat feet. I did not tell him that the fallen arches came through going out to dance three or four evenings a week. I was ashamed.

We've been married six years, have no children, and my wife is dancing mad. I'm on my feet most of the day, as I'm a teller in a bank, rush home, have a can-opener dinner and then if I don't go out some dancing place, my wife sulks and pouts. I know I shouldn't put up with this but I do it because I'm soft and hate rows. She'd be better off if she had a job.

I'm afraid you've got to deal with this lady with a little more firmness. Just decline to go out with her and if she insists on dancing then cut down to one a week, let her join some equally frivolous bunch and go with them.

As you speak of her housekeeping as the can-opener type, why not persuade her to take a job, preferably in a bank, and if she once understood the strain the struggle of a day's work back of a teller's cage, perhaps she'd develop a little more huhanity toward you.

Engagement That Never Led to Marriage

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been engaged for ten years. I took his ring the week after I graduated from high school, and I've been wearing it since then. He is again putting our marriage off because he says he's likely to be drafted. As he is 36, it seems to me this is doubtful.

He's very saving except where members of his own family are concerned. He bought one sister a set of dining room furniture, and his mother an automobile, which she can't use, owing to the gas shortage. Still he tells me he hasn't enough money saved on which he could marry and start a home. I'm thinking of breaking up with him. What do you think about this situation?

Mary Lou

This type of indefinite engagement has broken many women's hearts and doomed them to a lonely old age. The only quarrel I have with you, my dear, is that you didn't break with this thoroughly selfish man long ago.

We've all seen this type of family provider who lets everything to his own family and neglects the girl who's waited.

The Old Story — She Doesn't Like His Wife

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My mother didn't want me to marry a certain girl, because she worked in a beauty parlor, and mother was opposed to beauty parlors. We've been married five years. My wife is a swell girl and a fine mother to our two children. Still, mother's grudge continues; towards my wife, though she's very partial to two other daughters-in-law.

The last time I was home on leave, mother made it so disagreeable for my wife that I don't care about going to the old home again. Did you ever hear of such foolish prejudice as objecting to a girl because she works in a beauty parlor? I'm expecting to go overseas shortly.

D.E.P.

I can just see your mother, an old lady with a split personality beauty parlors when she should be one of their most appreciative patrons. Be thankful that yours wife and mother do not have to live under the same roof and that your wife is a "swell girl." Better say goodbye to your mother before you go overseas, but don't take your wife along.

When He's Served His Sentence, Sweet Blossom Hopes to Marry Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My boy friend has been disheartedly disfigured from the army because he got mixed up with the wrong crowd, stole a car, which was smashed up in an accident. He is in jail because he was unable to pay his fine. My family are very much opposed to my going with him, but I don't believe I'd ever love anyone else. I was 16 years old my last birthday.

Marylou

It would be very unwise, it seems to me, for a girl of 16, with all her life before her, to start her married life with a man just out of jail. You tell me in your letter that his trouble was due to getting with the wrong crowd, but a boy did enough to wear a uniform ought to pick better friends. You must admit he's a weak character, and weaklings seldom make mighty poor husbands.

St. Michael's H.S. Debaters Praised

The regular monthly meeting of St. Michael's High School Literary Society was held with the president, Mary Flynn, presiding. The meeting opened with the singing of "God Save the King" by the student body. This was followed by the first of this year's literary debates, the subject of which was "Resolved that the people of India should have self-government." The affirmative was upheld by an Irish grade team—Mary Moore, Dorothy Dunlop and Ted Boyle, and the negative by three students from grade XII, Betty Flynn, Ruth Pfeffer and Gerald Doyle. The debate was very capably judged by Mr. B. Collins and Mr. O. B. Butler who announced that the team upholding the negative side of the question were the winners. Right Reverend Monsignor Michleson said a few words, commending the debaters on their ability as public speakers. Mrs. S. H. Upper, President of the Catholic Women's League, presented fifty dollars to the society toward their library fund. The president gratefully acknowledged this generous gift.

The musical portion of the program was under the direction of Rose Marie Scanlon, who rendered Schubert's "Serenade," and other delightful piano solos. The Glee Club sang several numbers and Loyola Chapelle played two selections on the euphonium. Following this Barbara Forbes played a number of well known popular songs, after which George Wilson announced the coming of the Squires' Easter Carnival to be held in April. The meeting was closed with the singing of "Holy God We Praise Thy Name."

JUBILANT BAND OF CANADIENS NOW IN TORONTO

Montreal Squad Believes They Can Square Series With Toronto Leafs

JUBILANT HAND ..... morning Tuesday, March 31 (CP)—A jubilant band of Montreal Canadiens piled into Toronto today, confident they were riding the crest of a victory wave which would carry them to a triumph over Toronto Maple Leafs tonight in the sixth game of their eight-school Hockey Cup semi-final series.

On the other hand there was quiet confidence in the Leaf camp who can end the series with a win tonight. They already have three victories to their credit while the Canadiens have won two games for four points. Should Canadiens win tonight the seventh game will be played in Montreal Tuesday night.

The Montreal confidence is based on their 10-3 triumph over the Leafs in the fifth game of the series in Montreal Thursday night. Coach Dick Irvin said that in all of the 12 goals the Toronto team has scored in the series "have been tagged with backers."

"Now it's our turn and I don't think we'll look back."

Coach Clarence (Hap) Day of the Leafs offered no comment on predictions other than to say "we'll be trying to finish it up." Day said he planned no line changes. He added there was little hope that forward Nick Mickoski, injured Saturday night, would be available.

The Leaf defence was unchanged one thing:

"They won't be any repetition of Thursday's scoring avalanche," he said.

SUDBURY FROOD SENIOR TITLISTS

For the second year in a row Hamilton Major junior championship of the O.H.A. have turned on the Sudbury Frood team, N.O.H.A. titleholders, for the all-Ontario honors. In the seventh and deciding game of the provincial series at Hamilton last night, the Miners walked off with a 6-1 decision, thus retaining the crown by taking four games after a poor early start in the final clashes.

The first period was a scoring blank but the westerners hit the mark twice in the middle session and were leading 2-1 half way through the closing chapter before Hamilton dented the twine. The Miners came back for more score with only a minute and 30 seconds to go to make the final curtain of the senior seldon.

The score card for Sudbury showed two goals by Al clouthier; one tally and two assists for Barlo and the fourth counter by Dewey A. Lemieux had two assists and Mel Jonah, veteran goalie for one set up. Clarence Shillington was responsible for Hamilton's lone marker and was assisted in the accomplishment by Dinning and Johnny Conick.

JUNIOR ROYALS, MONTREAL READY FOR ST. MICHAELS

With Exception of One Player Team Recruited From Montreal Boys

Toronto, March 31 (CP)—Lorne Wilson today names his Montreal Royals, Memorial junior hockey champions for the second straight year, into the first game of a best-of-seven series against St. Michael's Majors, high scoring Ontario junior champions, for the Eastern Canada junior hockey title.

"We have a pretty good club and although I haven't seen St. Michael's yet, we've given a good battle," he said early today.

Royals, who advanced into the finals over Ottawa St. Patrick's College, are built around hard-hitting defenceman Doug Harvey and his brother Howie, who plays goal.

Jimmy O'Connor, Lyall Wiseman and Cliff Malone, who played the game this season with Montreal's senior Royals against the powerful Quebec Aces, are the power of the forward division.

With the exception of Eddie Cutts, an Edmonton product, the whole team is composed of Montrealers and includes Fleming McKell, 18-year-old student, and Edgar Mott who hails with Cutts as defence.

Dead Expect Picnic

The high-scoring St. Michael's team, favored to take the series, are not expected to give up.

"I'm looking for a tough series," coach Jim Primeau, former Toronto Maple Leaf centre, said.

St. Mikes eliminated Porcupine Combines in straight games to capture the Ontario title after they had swept the Toronto Shamrock Association junior championship series. They lost only two games of 26 scheduled in the two O.H.A. contests.

The college players come from all parts of Canada. Ted Bolbuhar, clever goalie, hails from Kitchener, Ont. Winnipeg born Jimmy Thomson team with Gus Mortson of Kirkland Lake, Ont., and Teddy Kennedy, of Timmins, Ont.

Frank Turik, who starred with Trail Smoke Eaters last season, centres a line with Tod Sloan of Falconbridge, Ont., and Ken Orsville, a native of Quebec, on the Wings. Bobby Paul of Toronto and Len Costello of North Bay are other forwards.

LOU NOVA BEATEN BY JOE BAKSI

By TED MEIER

New York, March 31 — (AP) — Lou Nova, a Bronx boy, was beaten by Baksi at Madison Square Garden last night, but his fans gave sleeping probably earned him an outdoor bout at the Polo Grounds this summer.

A 14-5 underdog, Nova went down for a nine count in the fourth round, was staggered in the sixth, several times and ended up bleeding a blood-smeared face, but he struck back courageously and the crowd of 14,000 cheered him at the finish.

The gross gate of $46,394 brought the Garden's total receipts for 12 fight shows this year to $536,206.

The crowd was in an uproar, but Nova kept coming back. Despite a cut over his right eye, Nova's second patched things up between rounds and although blood appeared again in the 10th, Baksi was unable to land the knockout punch.

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, March 31 —(CP)— George P. Smith—or just G. P. to his hundreds of friends in the sport world—is going to retire, for 22 years G. P. was physical director at Westmount High School in suburban Montreal and during that time he coached purple and white teams to 40 hockey titles, 38 football crowns, and 18 basketball championships.

That's a record that will take some doing, especially when you add the fact that hundreds of boys who have graduated from Westmount High have gone far in sports fields, thanks to the careful training they got from George Smith.

It has always been his contention that if you developed a junior carefully and kept a watchful eye on him when he played intermediate, you would not have to worry when he became a senior. His theory has proved its worth.

Born and educated in Chatham, Ont., Smith went to Montreal at the turn of the century and after working a number of years as an artist, lithographer, and teaching physical director of W.H.S. As coach and gym teacher he won the admiration and friendship of the thousands of pupils who passed through his hands. Just as his many people he came in contact with through his work.

Gil de Stein intervention he introduced into hockey coaching, the one that will remain the longest is his system of indexing a player's capabilities and faults. The index system has shown itself never so fail in helping players.

Lloyd (Bingo) Ernst, Halifax puckster who played Eastern Canada Olympics this year, returned to Canada recently after three years' service. With the Canadians in Germany, March 31 (Via Allied Headquarters)—Lt. Col. J. A. (Jeff) Nicklin, commander of the 1st Canadian Parachute Battalion, was killed March 24 leading his troops in an airborne assault east of the Rhine.

(Defence headquarters at Ottawa announced Friday night that Col. Nicklin is missing.)

The 30-year old Winnipeg colonel, a pre-war football star in Canada, never reached the ground and his body was recovered two days later from a tree in which his parachute became entangled. He was shot many times immediately by German snipers.

Col. Nicklin was buried a few miles northwest of Wesel, in an area which his battalion cleared of Germans.

The six-foot-two hunter who played on the backfield and as an end with Winnipeg Blue Bombers and with the Toronto Argonauts, veterans in three Dominion finals earned a reputation as a fighter all the way—from a buck private. He was successively a lieutenant, captain and major before going overseas with a Lieutenant-Colonel last Nov. 15.

Col. Nicklin's football career, in which he was chosen on several Canadian All-Star teams, was highlighted, perhaps by the 1939 Grey Cup Final when the Bombers defeated Toronto Argonauts. That was the first time he had played on Toronto's Varsity Grads' Club . . .

Col. Nicklin's widow and 15-months-old son reside in Winnipeg. He was a native of Port Williams.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, March 31 — (CP) — Wee Gordon Cote, the training phenomenon, the winding lanes of southern England, will defend his British cross-marathon championships next June, if his duties as a Canadian Army officer permit.

Three times winner of the Boston Marathon, Cote, 5 feet 4 inches and 120 pounds, arrived in England from Canada 18 months ago and since then has jogged 20 miles daily to keep in form. He probably will compete in the 10-mile cross-country events before starting the championship grind, to be run over a course near London.

Cote, a Montreal Canadian Army public relations lieutenant who first merely wrote sport around Ottawa, Toronto and Montreal, before that had done no running since last September.

"Of course I won't allow the sport to interfere with my army job, but I'll do my best to keep in training, except if I don't get a chance to train," he said in an interview.

The French-Canadian footslogger is attached to Canadian Army headquarters centre. His wife and two children live in Montreal.

Canadian officials have urged me to ask for permission to fly the Atlantic to Canada for a visit to Montreal in April," Cote told Descut. "But I don't like to impose on them for a bit stupid to take part in two marathons, one on each side of the ocean in the same months."

Another little French-Canadian became the only Canadian Army officer to play football for a professional in Britain when Lieut. Joe Gagnon of Montreal made a successful debut with Aldershot.

The former Canadian amateur backfield star, Montreal Winged and Empire Games finalist forced Johnny Mack, a Canadian born, to retire at the end of the fifth round of scheduled six-round bout at Gagnon, looking more like a kid of 18 than a veteran campaigner of 26, forced the pace from the start and was far from the puncher Mack is said to be. Gagnon, a Canadian Army (England) featherweight final is an unquiet unknown at Aldershot a few nights previously.

The Aldershot lad saw Joe's last as an amateur and it foreshadowed anything but a successful pro debut. Mack, 31, who has also taken the title, L/Cpl. Andy Anderson of Victoria, never had been in a ring until a few weeks before the championships.

Against Mack, Gagnon scored readily and showed a heavy punch. Mack, who has been a sparring mate, that his seconds signalled he was through with one round to go.

BOSTON BRUINS NOT DISCOURAGED OVER STANDING

Playing Coach Dit Clapper Sure His Team Will Beat Detroit

Boston, March 31 —(AP)— Boston Bruins, tired but not discouraged, arrived home today filled with confidence they will end deadlock the semi-finals of the National Hockey League playoffs with Detroit Red Wings tomorrow night and today the girls were getting ready to see Dr. Einstein and apologized to him for her daughter's actions in the girls' washroom.

"Oh, not at all," Einstein assured her; "the girls were there and we get along well."

"But what can you and a little eight-year-old girl have in common?"

"A great deal," Einstein explained. "I love the jelly beans and they love me. I have the way I do her arithmetic lessons."

Around the Town.

Paul Raymond, who played a lot of hockey for the Trenton "Flyers" during the past two pack seasons, has been posted to Montreal.....No doubt there'll be rejoicing in the Canoe metropolis when it's learned the former Les Canadien star is coaching in the Forum, where he rose to dizzy heights....It's safe betting the Montreal Royals will have Raymond signed to an "assignment" contract, if not in the service.....However, it was nice having Raymond displaying his puck wares in Belleville for a couple of seasons and his efforts will long be remembered.....Ditto Lorne Carr of the Belleville Ladies' Softball League and his quietly effective efforts to discuss future plans and announce the date of their annual meeting.....Jerry Chute Barnett announced Tuesday April 10th as the date of the annual meeting and election of officers..'Tis rumored both Presidents Barnett and Secretary Eddie Schreiber are not seeking re-election for another term.

This and That.

Says Doug Vaughan in the Windsor Star: "Here's one of the voluble Trout's several stories ..... The voluble Tiger player claims to have come made a triple play without pitching a ball to the batter.... The bases were filled and there were two strikes on the batter when Trout resorted to his amazing bag of strategy....He extracted an extra ball that he had hidden in his shirt for an emergency.....With a ball in each hand he wound up with both arms and being ambidextrous, he delivered them at the same time with his left arm.....The two unsuspecting runners were called out and the batter was so confused that he struck out the third strike.....If you don't believe this one, Trout has others.....At the University of Georgia three years ago, Frankie Sinkwich, who has starred with the Detroit Lions after crowning glory college, and one George Poschner were roommates and housemates.....Those buddies from Youngstown, Ohio, had played together in high school..When the Rambling Wreck talent scouts asked Sinkwich to give his all on the gridiron for dear old Georgia Tech, Frank said he wouldn't do nothing of the sorta unless his old pal, George, a scholarship..Reluctantly the Tech enticement people yielded to Sinkwich's ultimatum..... Next double header was paid off in yards..Sinkwich threw long range passes and Poschner caught 'em..... The two Yankees from Ohio turned the Cotton Belt grid circuit upside down...Now Poschner has been invalided home from the Western Front, with both legs amputated..... Sinkwich still carries the mail on pro gridiron, because first the Marines and then the Army turned him down for flat feet.....Pete certainly plays some strange pranks with us humans."

Remember When.

Remember when Ottawa had its first ball game, with the New York Yankees in 1903 and 1910 when Ottawa won when he stayed on the bench to watch his team make a 14 to 0 victory over the Atlantic City "Bises" a Yankee farm team. Later in the 1910 sporting windjammer presumably crippled by a form of paralysis which claimed his life in 1941.

Then the Montreal Canadiens started on the road to the coveted Stanley Cup victory 21 years ago tonight; by defeating the Calgary Tigers of the Western Canada League 5 to 1 in the first match of the east-west play-off at Montreal. The Canadiens previous clean-up was in 1916 and they won the old mug three times since—in 1930, 1931 and last year. They also won the in ill-fated 1919 series that was called off part way through owing to a flu epidemic.

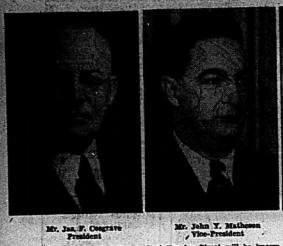
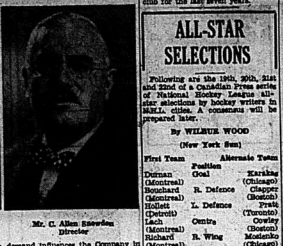
O'KEEFE'S AND COSGRAVE'S MERGER ANNOUNCED



Mr. Jas. F. Cosgrave
President



Mr. John Y. Matheson
Vice President

Toronto—Two of the best-known names in the history of Canada's Brewing Industry are reunited, after a separation of 81 years, with the announcement today by E. P. Taylor, Chairman of the Board of Canadian Breweries Limited, of the absorption of Cosgrave's by the O'Keefe's Brewing Co., Limited.

Today's announcement will give the O'Keefe Company the production of four breweries in Toronto on April 1st when it assumes control of the two Cosgrave Metropolitan plants, plants on Niagara Street and East Dundas Street. The former Cosgrave's White Label Brewery on Niagara Street will be known as O'Keefe's Brewery (West Toronto) Limited, and the former Cosgrave plant on East Dundas Street will be known as O'Keefe's Brewery (East Toronto) Limited.

Mr. Taylor revealed also that the personnel of the board which will direct the affairs of the enlarged O'Keefe Company will be James F. Cosgrave, President; John Y. Matheson, Vice-President; Duncan C. Butler, director; A. E. Ames, director; Taylor, C. Allen Snowdon and W. C. Butler, directors.

John Y. Matheson will be General Manager of O'Keefe's Brewing Company Limited, the parent company, while C. Allen Snowdon, who for many years has been Manager of the Cosgrave plants, will continue as Manager of these two plants under their new names.

The inability to meet consumer demand influences the Company in making these changes.

Almost a century ago the family of Cosgrave and O'Keefe were partners in a brewing business where now stands the main O'Keefe plant on Victoria Street. In 1862 Patrick J. Cosgrave, grandfather of James F. Cosgrave, went into business for himself in the building on what was then known as Garrison Creek, but which being filled in is recognized by present-day Toronto as a landmark of the district facing Trinity College grounds. Old-timers will look with approval upon the Company's decision to continue to operate a plant which is a link with the days when Toronto's population was a scant 10,000 and Niagara Street was a mile beyond the city limits.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 644
By SAM SIMPSON
The Ribbies

Truth is no stranger to friction between bridge partners. Too many players insist on using exceptions when rules are expected.

Bids follow the order of choice in "P-A-N"; takeout, assist, no trump. That order is abandoned only when a slam is imminent and it is more important to locate and fix aces in information.

A one-jump immediate response not only shows tricks enough to help make a game. It also assists in having two sure tricks among them. Without two sure tricks, the jump should await a later round.

Pick up a responding hand like this:

♥ K Q 10 6 2
♦ A K 8 4

If partner opens with one in anything, you know at once there is a game in your pair. With his five and your six, you already see 11 tricks. He shows another trick, you may have a slam.

If he opens with one club or one diamond, your first response is the one-jump forcing-to-game- takeout to two hearts. If he then bids two in spades or no trump or three clubs, bid three diamonds. If he opens with one club or one diamond; you respond two hearts; he then bids three spades, you jump second bid to three hearts to show your redoubtable suit. You still have time before slamming.

He opens one club or one diamond; you respond two hearts; he then bids three hearts. Your second bid is four trump; the ace and king asking convention. No time to show your diamonds.

If he opens one heart, respond with a one-jump takeout in three diamonds. To any bid he makes next, your second bid is four no trump.

If he opens one spade, respond with three hearts. If he then bids three spades or three no trump or four clubs, bid four diamonds. Learn what's trumps, if possible before slamming.

Bridge, alas, does not horse around with guesses.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Delegates representing 7,434 registered players in 77 affiliated leagues and clubs yesterday heard reports of the Ontario Amateur Softball Association at the 32rd annual meeting in Hamilton which revealed there were more than 15,000 former softballers of the organization in the armed forces, 49,000 worth of playing equipment supplied to the services and more than $100,000 raised through special games for war charities since the start of the war.

The Provincial Association, which closed last year with a surplus, created an International Board of Baseball Umpires and commercial leagues whose players are too old for the major or too slow for the high-ier brackets. George H. Spooner of Chilli was re-elected president for the third year and other officers include Frank R. Reaver, secretary, Hamilton, and W. A. Algate, St. Catharines, treasurer.

Willie Pep, world featherweight champion who is William Papaleo in private life, yesterday was discharged from the army at Camp Edwards after a period of nine months when he received his Army still papers at Fort Devens, Mass. The reason for his discharge was not disclosed but probably he had been released from the navy because of a punctured ear drum.

The baseball season opens today with the teams of the Pacific Coast League swinging into action one week ahead of the not-away last year.

The Maritime Intermediate basketball title went to University of New Brunswick in two straight games in a 46-40 defeat of New Waterford Stands at New Waterford, N.S., total points on the round being 97-91. The winners now are set to play for Canada's Senior title finals to be played at Fredericton.

An officer of the Thorncliffe Park Racing and Breeding Association since 1921, Fred S. Livingstone, 62, general manager of the Toronto suburban track, died suddenly yesterday at his home. He had been president of the Kenilworth hockey club for the last seven years.

DANCE OF DEATH

By HELEN McCLOY

CHAPTER 8

"Willing says she's sane," proclaimed Sobel. "And in that case her story is probably true."

Archer sat down heavily. "It can't be. The whole thing is unbelievable."

"To Archer, I'm afraid it's only too believable," Sobel perched on the arm of a leather chair. The scouring sapsucker the dyspeptic debunker and the thoroughly modern Cinderella who took her place—Cinderella dancing to the Danse Macabre—it all hangs together."

"But my niece Isobel was there and it never occurred to her that girl was not Kitty Jocelyn!"

Foyle. Interrupted. "I'm afraid that doesn't prove anything, Mr. Commissioner. There are a lot of cases of mistaken identity in police records and abroad."

"The ability to recognize people is a pretty mutable thing," suggested Basil. "It's one of the first things to go in mental disease, and even in sane people it varies mathematically with light, distance, and the degree of familiarity. The average healthy man can identify someone he knows well at a distance ranging from fifty to ninety yards—if he's looking for him. Most of the guests at the dance only knew Kitty Jocelyn through published photographs and they saw Ann in artificial light. They saw her in the Jocelyn home introduced as Kitty by Kitty's own stepmother. They saw Ann as Kitty, because they believed she was Kitty and believing is seeing. Even the dog who identified people by scent insisted at night was now ready to be deceived."

"Thanks for the lecture!" provided Sobel. "Suppose we get back to Kitty Jocelyn's murder? It is murder. For all we know, it may be suicide or accident."

"I doubt if it was accident."

"Why?"

"The high spirits before death, and the extraordinary heat of the body after death suggest one of the new mystic drugs."

"Try-what?"

"Temperature raising. They've seldom used as a basis of reducing cocktails."

Sobel was startled. "That's funny—"

"Very humorous. For if Ann Okada is killed by drugs, Kitty will never look X-Why or any other reducing medicine."

"Why didn't you tell me this before?"

"I wanted Lambert to make sure first. And then" smiled Basil. "You haven't exactly encouraged my attempts at detecting."

"Let's hope it was suicide," muttered Sobel.

"Then why should she leave the house dressed in Kitty's clothes?"

"It can't be murder!" cried General Archer. "It's all so—so absurd! Who would want to murder a debutante on the eve of her coming-out party?"

"Whom are you putting on the case?" Sobel asked.

"Will you take charge yourself, Foyle?" said Archer. "I'd like you to report directly to me."

"I'll do that, sir!" responded Foyle. "Are you putting a deputy on it, D. A.?"

Sobel rearranged the pencil on his desk and Basil knew he was weighing the security in "high places" against the promise of personal publicity. After a moment his familiar grin reappeared.

"No. I'm not sharing the limelight with anyone, Foyle. If I crack a case like this, I'll be famous no matter how many toes I tread on. The first thing to do is to see Kitty's stepmother—Rhoda Jocelyn. We could ask her to come down here in the usual way, but the circumstances call for extraordinary I'd rather take her off guard. Why not descend on the Jocelyn house as soon as possible this evening?"

"Not me!" cried General Archer. "I don't care for hippodroming!"

"I do!" Sobel's grin was unashamed. "Willing, I want you to come with us, if you can spare the time. Mrs. Jocelyn may try to put on a fast one and the Commissioner's secretary. You must hand her the line you've been handing out. Have sent out for coffee and sandwiches and then we'll start. No knowing what we'll get, then."

After General Archer had gone, the other three dined informally at a table and a newspaper as a tablecloth.

"Another sandwich, doc?"

"No thanks."

Foyle started to roll up the debris in the newspaper. His glance fell on the financial page.

"What do you know about that! American Shell is up again. Fifteen points."

"Oh?" asked Basil.

"Mm. Munitions."

The Jocelyn house has been torn down now, and a skyscraper apartment house is in its place. But at that time it stood in the East Sixties on a corner of Fifth Avenue opposite the park. It was gray stone, built on the same lines as the old dowdy mansions of European cities—the Hotel de Cluny and Devonshire House. A steep flight of steps under an archway led to the inner door. The outer door was glass with a wrought-iron grille. Through it Basil had received the limelight of the enclosed stairway.

"Police, sir? We have some serious news of Mrs. Jocelyn's stepdaughter," he had said to the footman briskly. "We must see Mrs. Jocelyn herself as soon as possible."

"What name, sir?"

"Morris Sobel, district attorney. This is Inspector Foyle of Police Headquarters. And Dr. Willing."

"Very good, sir. Please step this way."

They passed through the second door into a dignified hall.

"Wait here, Casey," cried Foyle to one of the detectives who followed. "Duff, you stick with us," he added to the police stenographer.

There were more steps and apparently endless corridors. An elevator took them to the next floor and they were shown into a drawing-room.

The same butler was looking at Basil intently.

"I see you don't remember me, sir."

"Remember you?" Basil scrutinized the man closely. He grinned as no well-trained butler should have grinned. Then his grey hair and severely correct black coat and striped trousers seemed to dissolve. Basil saw a tall, gaunt, solid khaki figure.

"Of course I remember you! Thin Man. I was at Nedley, before America entered the war! Let me see—your name's Arnold! Gregg and you were in the Irish Guards. It was shell-shock with facemuls and then discharge, wasn't it?"

"Right, sir. And now I sleep like a log and talk a lot more than I should."

"I'm glad you were lucky."

"I had good doctors," returned Gregg, nasally. "But I really mustn't detain you this time, sir." He suddenly became a butler again.

"Mrs. Jocelyn will see you in the door had closed. "Could he be mixed up in this? If he's a shell-shock case—"

"He's all right now," said Basil. "But it's a queer thing to have Gregg stand and mud after an explosion. They dig him out just in time, but he couldn't speak or sleep afterward. Just shock. After three months at Nedley, he was cured. He's a decent fellow. I feel sure you can rely on his testimony."

Foyle had been wandering about the room. He came to a double doorway and opened it. There was a long vista of polished parquet, flying chandeliers and enormously

"Ballroom! That must be where the dance was held," Foyle swung around. "Could this be the room where the cocktails were served?"

Basil smiled. "Unless I'm much mistaken, that's a Murillo over the mantelpiece. It's not as a man and woman entered the room.

"Mr. Sobel! Inspector Foyle? How do you do. . .? I am Rhoda Jocelyn This is an old friend of the family Inspector Foyle."

Her voice was low and dulcet. Basil wondered what on earth Claude meant by "deadly sweetness."

"Do sit down," she went on, serenely, "and tell me what news you have of my little girl. I've been so terribly worried."

Rhoda Jocelyn sat regally in a brocade gown of a rich and peculiar peacock blue. Her crisp, brown hair was flecked with grey, but her profile was still a thing of beauty. And then the whole effect was spoiled when she turned her face and you saw the cruel, hard, calculating meeting you in an obstinate line.

Pasquale looked like a middle-aged faun who had forsaken Arcadia for up-to-date air-conditioned drawing-rooms. He had acquired gloss and sophistication, but his air of gratitude toward Rhoda was a mixture of romantic devotion and spurious domesticity.

But Rhoda Jocelyn eye did not make the unnatural pallor, the tremor of the plump, white hands, and the unhappy puppy-dog look of eyes. He made a mental note: "Morphine addict."

"Well?" fluted Rhoda, clasping her hands on the arms of her chair and leaning forward with almost youthful suppleness.

Sobel drew a long breath. "Mrs. Jocelyn, you must prepare for a shock. I'm sad bluntly. We have reason to believe your stepdaughter is dead."

It was a blow. Under a film of powder, the olive cheeks took on a mottled look. Long, slim fingers plucked at a fold of the peacock blue dress.

"Surely there is some mistake, Mr. Sobel."

"I don't believe so, Mrs. Jocelyn. The girl in question died four days ago. Her body is in the city mortuary."

Rhoda shook her head. "You have made a mistake, but not a very natural one. Kitty Jocelyn, my stepdaughter, is not dead. She is Jocelyn Claude who resembles her closely. I took this cousin as my secretary a few months ago. She left me on Saturday evening—suddenly. There was some foolish girl's quarrel and Ann Okada—that is the name she gave me—flounced out. She said to me she was going to California, and she packed her own trunks after her. We did so and have heard nothing since. Of course we thought it was because she was still angry. It never occurred to us that anything had happened to her. None of us knew much about her private life. Poor child! It must be her body you have found."

Rhoda's eyes defied them to contradict her voice was calm.

"On whose testimony did you identify this body as my stepdaughter?"

But Sobel was prepared. "A man and woman visited my office this morning and made a statement," he explained, patiently. "She said her name was Ann Jocelyn Okada. She said her cousin, Kitty Jocelyn, had fallen ill five days ago and that you had persuaded Kitty to impersonate her at a coming-out dance—as a sort of practical joke."

Rhoda's brows lifted. "That is preposterous! I never did anything of the kind!"

"This young woman stated that Kitty was very ill and asked Ann to take the dance, and that she, herself, would keep Kitty's secret."

"Mr. Sobel, I'm sure you don't realize what you're suggesting! I can put this whole story in one sentence. The girl who talked to this morning—and this body is Ann Claude, is really Kitty Jocelyn. Kitty is the jilted at lamplighted hand—explain this dreadful situation to Mr. Sobel and the others."

Sobel turned toward them.

"It is unfortunate that a family scandal should have become known to strangers!" His voice rang indignantly. "I will not trouble Kitty no help for it now, Mrs. Jocelyn's unhappy stepdaughter has always been peculiar, to say the least. Explain language, a mental case."

Rhoda's face was like stone. "You know what modern young people are, Mr. Sobel. Ann has been unable to hold ends—cigarettes, cocktails, late hours. You can't stop them. It's really no wonder they break down so easily. And Kitty—Kitty was a child, she was too imaginative—too fairyscopeyes. She used to have imaginary companions and hold long conversations with them. . . She became fond of her cousin, Ann Okada last few months, and Ann's sudden departure the night of the coming-out party was a shock to her. That must be why she developed this delusion that Ann was she herself was Ann! And that the girl who had disappeared was Kitty! I'm sure you understand why I hesitated to explain to such a psychiatrist. I hoped Kitty would get over it in a day or so. I didn't want anyone to think a doctor's home that she was—well, mentally unstable. The girl who died was Ann Okada. Kitty's mare to us all. We didn't dare leave Kitty alone for a moment. My maid, Victorine, slept in the sitting-room adjoining her bedroom every night. But she locked Victorine in the bathroom and managed to leave the house early one morning when the rest of us were asleep. We've been looking for her day. I didn't want to call in the police if I could help it, because of the scandal and unpleasant publicity. Now, from what you say, I gather that the poor, deluded child actually went to you with her absurd story that she was Ann and that Kitty had disappeared." Rhoda sighed. "It's my fault. I see that now. I should have called in a mental specialist at once."

The pleasant plausible voice died away. Rhoda made a charming picture as she lay back in her chair. The living face of Kitty Jocelyn had the authority of wealth. Both Sobel and Foyle were momentarily impressed. Sobel looked at Basil with a question in his face. "Are you the led us on a wild goose chase?"

And then Rhoda overplayed it.

"Perhaps it isn't too late. . ." she murmured, her eyes focussed on Basil. "Are you the Dr. Willing who wrote 'Time and Mentality'? I wonder if I could persuade you to help me with my stepdaughter. The brown eyes were wide and luminous. "I assure you I will make it worth your while. Indeed I am prepared to pay almost any fee to get Kitty well again. . . You understand?

"Mrs. Jocelyn" said Basil, evenly, "the most disillusioning thing about being a psychiatrist is discovered how many kind relatives wish that other members of their family could be declared insane."

Her eyes flashed. He went on before she could answer.

"I put the girl who calls herself Ann Claude through a series of mental and neurological tests this afternoon and I found no recognizable evidence of an insane mind or diseased nerves. That means we cannot declare her testimony lightly as a 'delusion.' You will have to give us some definite proof that this girl is Kitty Jocelyn and not Ann Claud—if you can."

Rhoda's painted lips parted, but no words came. Then she slid gracefully unconscious.

"See what you have done!" cried Pasquale, his own face chalk white.

TYPHOONERS . . . LARGE AND SMALL

The tallest and smallest of a British Royal Air Force Typhoon squadron now based in Holland get together here. They are Flt.-Lieut. J. D. Inches (correct, so help us) at 6 ft. 3 in., and Flt.-Sgt. Stephen, N.B., who is six feet three inches tall. Inches is a Canadian, a former cowboy from Buenos Aires, Argentina, who is the smallest man in the squadron. But he is just as big as anyone else when the thumbs is on the trigger.

Farm Dwelling, Contents Burned

Fanned by a high wind, fire of an undetermined origin completely destroyed the large frame house owned by Alex Storring, five miles north of Ameliasburg on the old Plainfield Road, on Wednesday afternoon. The spelling along with practically all the contents was a complete loss.

First to notice the flames was Charles James who resides across the road from the burning building. He saw smoke pouring from beneath the eaves and with a very few minutes the whole structure was ablaze. The Stirling brigade was quickly former but it was impossible to save the building due to the high wind, which was blowing at full time.

Sparks were fanned in the direction of the James property across the road and it was only after considerable work that it was saved.

GRASS AND BONFIRES KEEP FIREMEN BUSY

Grass and bonfires, or blazes resulting from bonfires, are keeping the local fire department busy these days with numbers of such calls reaching the fireball.

Near midnight last night firemen were called to Coleman Flats, where cattails in the quarry were burning while before noon today they made a run to the rear of Docter's Hotel on Station Street, where the shingles of a storehouse were reported burning. Sparks from a bonfire are believed to have been responsible for the blaze which was extinguished before damage was done.

This afternoon a marsh south of St. Paul Street was ablaze with the fire spreading to ignite piles of rubbish in the area. Firemen were still watching the blaze at press time this afternoon.

Why So Many New Magazines—Staff

(By Mary Hornaday in Christian Science Monitor)

"How does it happen," I asked a paper specialist of the New York Publication Board the other day, "that there are so many trashy magazines on the newsstands when much of the time you can't buy the good magazine you need to get before the war?"

"Look at any newsstand today and what do you see—astrology, comics and numbers."

"Also there seems to be a lot of new magazines starting up. They may be as good as the old ones, but we're not used to them. How can they get paper, when all established magazines can't?"

"The answer lies in the War Production Board's system of dividing up the short of growing, aborted paper supply. This is based on the constitutional guarantee of freedom of the press, with the Board's intervention of 'freedom' disallowing only questions of degree of necessity or public value.

"We do not even inquire whether a publication is more 'necessary' than a 'pulp book,' says Erwood Van Tress, head of the paper allocation section. 'If we tried it we'd be in hot water in no time.'

"To protect WPB against charges of suppressing all but approved ideas, a new publication can apply for and get a small quota of paper—one-and-one-fourth tons a quarter. This would not be enough to start any really popular magazine, even venture and must come out of a printer's paper quota, at any rate."

What Will the Russians Do to the Germans?

By Negley Farson

(BBC Press Service)

London, by mail — The Russians have twenty words for cold. But until you have lived and fought in some of the tragic landscapes between the Volga and the Vistula, you can never realize just how gallantly inadequate all these words are.

The cold adds its own horror to the wreckage made by the guns and steel. And this very cold, I firmly believe, will explain the Russian, the bestiality, it engendered in the Germans, will continue all the year that the Germans are fighting the cold, that is, until they are driven from our soil.

Let me explain. For today, with the Red Army driving relentlessly into Germany, constantly reminded by the miles where once happy villages have been reduced to ashes, where the human horror, with almost soothing monotony, rises up before the approaching armies, I, in the heart of Germany, now who crawl out of holes in the ground in search of something to eat, it is German children who cry over and friend to death, with not even a woman's breast to warm them—it is now, in these terrible winter months, that the Red soldier intends to make the armed German who will see the reminder of his hated and hateful life.

This is no fanciful idea of mine, and I will explain how I arrive at it. But from what I know of Russia and the Russians, and Russians I have actually seen weeping on the spot, over the atrocities the Germans have perpetrated on them, what I have just said—to make the Germans hate war forever—is what is in the hard core of this Russian hate.

The Russian, by his nature, is too great-hearted to go in for revenge. He does not think in such terms. He can be ruthless when aroused, "You see," they explained, "if the German hadn't been so ruthless in our village we would have had a fine place to live in for the winter, and we could have had peace. But the Germans had burned Lobushino to the ground.

We went across the snow, and there was not a house in the village which the German staff had then seen fit to spare. Not even the barns, nor the dwellings. The Germans had burned every one. Of the atrocities there, of course, to get living space and there was little of that during the former inhabitants of the houses ran into the snow, it is terrible. Even the dead were removed their boots and coats and all.

"Tell me," I asked one of the surviving members of the village council, "what do you explain—to yourself—that the Germans should have behaved in such a fiendish thing as burning down Lobushino, when they might have lived in it, warm, cold, he said dismissing it. "I think that our Russian cold drives the German into a sort of a frenzy. He loses control of himself. It drives him mad. He sees once the thing that hurts himself."

Then he told me how, as they were retreating, the Germans shot all the inhabitants of the particular village that they could get their hands on. And, he went on, during the occupation people in Lobushino, even as they were evacuating the town, "had had their dinner," he asked. He gave me a woeful smile, and went until the German knocked the wooden house had died down—for from all around us came groans and agonizing shrieks as they heard my question being translated. "Nothing," he said: "they had done nothing. They were just unfortunate enough to be seen by the Germans and caught. We ourselves cannot understand people who do things like that. We asked ourselves afterwards: What could be the reason? Why had they done it? We shrugged his heavy shoulder again, and said: 'Cold! Cold! They are terrified. It frightens them. In fight, you know, the Germans see themselves dying in the snows. They go crazy!"

It has been said—and I think all too often—that you cannot make the German give up his love for war. But just think of the bitter memories of those Germans who have been on the Russian front. Even those who have come back wounded but fine from frostbite. They have known horror, and fear, and physical misery such as a few have ever experienced on this earth. And they have known madness, "the winter frenzy," as one Russian captain described it to me.

Even these Germans, who you may say have escaped, soul-free (so far) even they have had a fear of war put into them such as Germans on no other front have experienced in this war. Or even such as German fighting on the eastern front, had ever known in the last war. For compared to this frozen horror, the Kaiser's troops had a walk-over in Russia from 1914 to 1917. No, it is only now, that the German has learned what Russia can do to him, if he loses.

Now let's go straight to what the Russians are going to do to the vanquished German. The Russians have repeatedly said—and they mean it, that they intend to take back for keeps the territory the Germans have taken. Germans, perhaps several millions, to make them work, to build a road, or a railway, or a canal. Or, again, they think the Russians intend to treat the German as a bestial manure. Or they think the Russian hate is infinitely more cold than that. My opinion is that the German treatment of these German hordes will be just as cold, blank, and as terrible as freezing, as the Russian winter itself.

The Germans will just be there. And they will be told to get back to their home again. Think that over, for a realistic appreciation of all the inconceivable grief that implies.

The Russians have a word for this "exile the German beast." But there will be Russian method in this mass handling of these huge, scarcely-to-be-formed German labor battalions. The Russians don't want slow themselves to show anger with these Germans in their hearts. Because that would be becoming too familiar with them.

I can see the Russian workmen walking near German holds on the way to their homes in Stalingrad, Kiev, but they won't look at the Germans. They will just act as if there were not there. And the Cossacks will ride back to their farmlands, beside the Don, and the Don. They will off-saddle, and very probably ignore the land, but they will ride past the German labor corps, rebuilding their destroyed cooperatives, contemptuously. There is nothing there. Only these Germans directly over the Germans will be impressed. There is nothing really there, only a German.

That, or sheer forced-labor concentration camps for what the Russians consider to be the incurable Nazis. Somewhere in Russia is what the Russian is going to impress upon the German, future generations really going to mean. "You've blown up my city, and now you, you yourself, are going to rebuild it. Yes, even if it takes you ten years, maybe, you can go home."

How any German can love the idea of war, after this, passes all understanding. The simple answer is: he won't love it because, and here I feel more certain than of any prophecy I have made in this talk, the Russians will leave a way out for the German—escape from this lesson they are giving him.

Moscow will not believe this cold and overt indifference, a definite policy for handling these Germans.

Not all Germans who are kept in Russia, or have to be sent to Russia, are going to be treated for the same length of time by this bitter lesson. Almost as soon as they get them, the Russians set over them well begin to pick and choose among them.

* * *

The German brutes—the incurable Nazis—will be the last ever to be allowed to return to their Fatherland. They, if they ever get back. But with varying degrees, the other Germans, well, I am sure, be weighed and given every chance and encouragement to become good, hard-working, friendly human beings again.

It is here, in this last plan, that I now predict the Russians are once again going to astonish the entire world. The world will soon hear, although it may refuse to believe it, that these human German labor-battalions in Russia are being given kindly treatment.

The world will hear of huge numbers of Germans graduating, like classes, from these labor-battalions. Of German labor-prisoners marching back from Russia, singing songs. The world, in its mean way, will be sure to say: "Ah, yes, they have been treated well and sent back to sing the glories of Russia! This is only shrewd Bolshevik propaganda, all over again."

Yes, there will be many people, shrewd people themselves, all over the world will cry that. But the Russians will not care. For you may be sure of this—in their treatment of the millions of German labor-battalions will have in their hands, after the war is over, the realistic Soviet Russians will begin another long process in the Brotherhood of Man.

Flame-Thrower

Attention given the various new super-airplanes and tanks has obscured the development of an even uglier but less dramatic weapon. We are the inventors of the weapon of Ivo Jima, to it. It is the flame-thrower, which comes in assorted sizes and shapes but operates, in all cases, on general way with peculiar effectiveness, says the Minneapolis Star-Journal.

Some throwers are mounted on tanks; others are portable. The latter are carried on the backs or individual foot soldiers. This type consists of a metal and webbing frame strapped on the back of each operator who carries two four-gallon fuel tanks and a pressure tank. There is a hose connection and a nozzle which looks a little like a Buck Rogers "disintegrator" and is about equally deadly.

A broad, billowing flame feeds on a thin, Diesel-type fuel, or in the latter weapons, upon a sort of jellied oil. The latter type of gun shoots a heavy stream of fire farther.

Men in the field say the psychological effect, too, is greater than bullets.

Sanctuary

Unfortunately for Hitler, Italian sanctuary was abolished everywhere in Europe by the end of the 15th century. Only a modified political form of it still exists.

Under the principle of political asylum cannot be served with extradition papers while the precincts of the Houses of Parliament which extend to the railings of Palace Yard, the Chicago Sun notes.

During the Irish persecutions of Charles II, Catholic and other Irish members of Parliament avoided arrest for some time by living in the House of Commons, and never ventured beyond the gates.

Under the present circumstances, Hitler's best bet is to get elected to the British Parliament.

NEW COAL REGULATIONS

AFFECT EVERY HOUSEHOLDER

Householders given priority in delivery of next winter's fuel if they order before June 1st . . . .

● Every Canadian householder is strongly urged to continue conserving coal, and to place his order for next winter's supply as soon as possible. The demand for coal is greater than ever before in history. In particular, the demand for household coal, up about 40% since the war began, now far outstrips the supply. It will be absolutely necessary for every householder who ordinarily burns anthracite coal, to use a proportion of substitute fuels. If every householder co-operates with his coal dealer by placing his order at once, and accepts his fuel whenever his dealer is able to deliver it, the trucking problem will be greatly lessened.

Read these 3 Important New Regulations

1 Coal dealers must, until September 30, 1945, give priority on deliveries of available supplies of fuel to consumers who place their purchase orders before June 1, 1946.

2 Between April 1 and September 30, 1945, a consumer must not accept delivery of more Class "A" fuel than 75% of his normal annual requirements. However, not more than 50% of the normal annual requirements may be in anthracite (Class "A" fuel). A consumer of Class "B" fuel must not accept delivery of more Class "B" fuel than 75% of his normal annual requirements, which in the Maritime Provinces not more than 50% may be chestnut sized anthracite.

3 Every householder who buys hard coal or other Class "A" or "B" fuel is required to accept 25% in substitute fuel with each delivery. Coal dealers are prohibited from delivering Class "A" or Class "B" fuel without at the same time delivering substitute fuel.

You can buy no more than 75% of your normal annual requirements in Class "A" or Class "B" fuel: This is the maximum and not a ration.

If you burn Class "A" or Class "B" fuels you are required to use substitute fuels in conjunction with them, for the remaining 25% of your normal annual requirements.

As an example, if you ordinarily use anthracite coal and burn six tons of fuel in the coal year just ending, the regulations permit you to order three tons of Class "A" anthracite, 1½ tons of coke or other Class "A" fuel, and 1½ tons of Class "C" fuel.

If you regularly use coke or pocahontas coal and burn six tons of fuel in the coal year just ending, you may order only 4½ tons of Class "A" coke or pocahontas and 1½ tons of Class "C" fuel.

Class "B" fuel is provided for burning in equipment in which no other type of fuel can be satisfactorily used, such as blowers, Spencer heaters, magazine type heaters and anthracite stokers.

If you are a user of this type of equipment and you burned six tons of fuel in the coal year just ending, you are permitted to order 4½ tons of Class "B" fuel and 1½ tons of Class "C" fuel.

The quantities of Class "A" and Class "B" fuels allowed under this Order are a maximum and are contingent upon sufficient supplies being available.

CLASS "A" FUELS

Class "A" fuels comprise: United States anthracite coal—egg, stove (broken), egg, stove, chestnut and pea, except that chestnut is not included in Class "A" fuel in the provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island; Welsh anthracite coal—cobbles, French nuts, Stove nuts; any screened coke (except reclaimed beehive coke), the largest (top size of which will not pass through an inch and one-eighth screen) of low volatile coal—screened sizes, nut and larger; briquettes—anthracite, low volatile bituminous or coke; petroleum coke—in domestic sizes.

CLASS "B" FUELS

Class "B" fuels comprise: United States anthracite—Buckwheat No. 1 size and Buckwheat No. 2 (Rice), in all provinces to which this order applies, and Chestnut in the Provinces of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island only; Welsh anthracite and Prince Edward Island only; Welsh anthracite—all sizes of elte—all lower sizes; any mixture containing any of the above classifications of Class "B" fuel; range coke in the province of Quebec only.

CLASS "C" FUELS

Class "C" fuels comprise: United States anthracite—Buckwheat No. 3 (Barley), Buckwheat No. 4, anthracite, fines and screenings. Welsh anthracite—screenings only; reclaimed beehive coke of any size and any other coke which is not Class "A" or Class "B" fuel; low volatile coal (unscreened and any screened sizes smaller than nut); briquettes—high volatile bituminous coal; bituminous or other coal which is not Class "A" or Class "B" fuel.
